Student Center Plans Underway

Preliminary plans are underway for a new student center on the Lindenwood campus, President William C. Spencer has announced.

The plans call for a spacious wood-beamed structure which will connect two already existing buildings, the Faculty House (formerly the Home Management House) and the Gables. Ceiling-high glass walls will enclose the structure on two sides, facing southeast and northwest, giving a wide view of the central campus.

The Faculty House and the Gables were constructed as sorority houses for Lindenwood students in the early 1900's. With the construction of the new center, they will return to their original purpose of housing student activities. Students of all ages enrolled in Lindenwood's four colleges will have one all-campus meeting place.

The kitchen of the Faculty House will become a snack bar and the other rooms, as well as rooms in the Gables, will be converted to game and television rooms. An open patio will be built around the old Linden tree to provide additional lounge area. Space for lockers for commuting students; study areas, student offices, and space for related activities will also be provided, along with a sidewalk cafe opening off the main lounge.

The new center is being planned for completion in the late autumn of this year. Estimated new construction costs are $80,000 and Lindenwood's trustees and administrative officers have made pledges and agreed to personally solicit additional funds.

The Women's Association for the Lindenwood Community (WALC) has agreed to collect furnishings and accessories and to sponsor and conduct fund-raising activities in October. Representatives of the alumni Ad Hoc Task Force of St. Charles and student organizations have already volunteered their assistance.

Pledges and gifts from alumni and friends of Lindenwood are now being accepted. Checks should be made payable to The Lindenwood Colleges and designated for the student center.

HEW Funds Health Program

Lindenwood has received a $65,000 grant to underwrite the new Health Associate program. The grant was made by the Fund for the Improvement of Post Secondary Education, through the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Dean Patrick G. Delaney, Jr., is the project director of the program which will begin this September. The initial grant period is for one year. Two additional years of support are anticipated as the program progresses.

Lindenwood, in cooperation with Washington University's medical services at St. Louis City Hospital, developed the five-year program which leads to a Bachelor of Medicine (M.B.) degree. Graduates will be qualified to offer primary and preventive health care under the supervision of a qualified physician to citizens in inner city and remote rural areas where physicians are in short supply. Health Associates of the program will also be qualified patient educators and assistants to other professionals in community health education.

training in a hospital with academic studies in the liberal arts, science and medicine. The first part of the program will emphasize academic studies but students will also begin their work in medical education during this time.

In the later parts of the program students will concentrate on specially-designed medical and clinical courses taught by adjunct Lindenwood professors who are regular Washington University School of Medicine faculty members while simultaneously continuing their liberal arts education. Most of the clinical training will be conducted at St. Louis City Hospital or in a satellite clinic.

"We feel that Lindenwood's new Health Associate program is vitally needed and will become an important link in the health care continuum," says Dr. William C. Spencer, president of The Lindenwood Colleges. "The HEW funding we've received attests to the significance of this program and the soundness of its approach."

Campus Briefs

Mr. Mike Rice, president of radio station KIRL, in cooperation with the Macmillan Educational Corporation, has presented the first volumes of the new Great Soviet Encyclopedia to Lindenwood. The thirty volume set will be completed during the next two years, as additional volumes are published.

Commenting on new acquisition to Lindenwood's library, Dr. C. Edward Balog, assistant professor of history, said, "Access to the Great Soviet Encyclopedia will add a new dimension to our history problem as well as to our political science program. The uses of these books in history classes are too numerous to mention but chief among them is the opportunity for students to see how contemporary history is both interpreted and rewritten for the Soviet Union. We are particularly fortunate to be the first institution in Missouri to have these volumes."

Former Senator Eugene J. McCarthy spoke at Lindenwood in April on the topic: "Campaign '76: Its Outcome and the New Administration." This event was sponsored by the Lectures and Concerts Committee of The Colleges.

The Twenty-Second National Institute for the Advancement of Small Colleges brought to the campus 400 college administrators, faculty members and students. "Curriculum Development: Liberal Education, Work and Lifelong Learning" was the general topic for the institute. Dr. Earl J. McGrath, former U.S. Commissioner of Education gave the keynote address.

WILLIAM ARMSTRONG, author of "Sounder," was among the well-known authors, editors and illustrators participating in a workshop, "Children's Books and Authors," at Lindenwood. Nancy Pollette, coordinator of elementary learning materials centers for the Pattonville School District, was the workshop leader. Also participating were Julius Hunter, KMOX-TV newsman and author of "Absurd AlphaBedtime Stories" and two other St. Louisans: Crystal Jackson, who wrote "Wendy and the Gypsies" and Cissie Lacks, author of "Downtown Lady."

Mary Lichliter, dean emeritus, was one of 29 retiring women honored with citations during the 61st National Conference of the National Association of Women Deans, Administrators and Counselors, in Denver. The citation recognized the contribution which she had made to the association in more than 25 years of service.

More than 355 entries participated in the 15th Annual Lindenwood Colleges Horse Show April 30-June 1 at the Daniel Boone Arena, Harvester. Fifty-two classes of habit and riding were shown, with 17 horses competing in the largest class. The show is recognized by the American Horse Shows Association and is sanctioned by the Missouri Horse Shows Association.

Kellogg Grant Adds Computer to Library

Ms. Patricia Delks, Lindenwood's Librarian, announced recently that the Computer Retrieval Terminal (CRT) which links the Lindenwood library to the Ohio College Library Center on-line computer cataloging system in Columbus is now operational. This expanded capability of the library was made possible by a 1976 grant from the Kellogg Foundation.

How does OCLC work? The following excerpts from an article in "American Libraries," May 1976, give a simplified definition of a very complex system.

"You are a librarian . . . You need information about a book—the kind of information that usually appears on a good catalog card. You do not have the good catalog card . . . or have cataloged it poorly . . . You know that some other library in the country has probably gathered this needed information . . . You wish you could find out who and get the information you need . . . in say, about ten seconds.

"You're in luck. A fairy godmother overhears your wish, gives you a grant, and—poof!—a year later you are an established participant. You need fast information on a book again, but this time you have an OCLC network terminal: TV-like screen and a typewriter-like keyboard. You know the relatively easy language of the keyboard, and you use it to call the data base in Columbus.

"Good Morning" it says on the screen. Now you can converse directly with $10 million worth of Xerox Sigma computers and related equipment in Columbus.

"You ask the computer complex if it has the information—a record—on your book. It makes a search. (It is spring 1976, and the OCLC data base contains more than two million records—mainly what other librarians have put into it from their terminals, plus OCLC's input of Library of Congress machine-readable cataloging records equaling about one-third of the total. That's right—you can take out, put in, and even "modify" information in these computers.)

"A few seconds pass. 'Damn response time!' you say. It is a tradition to say that. Suddenly—the record you wanted! Flitting line-by-line across the screen as prettily as swallows returning to Capistrano. And there it stays, as long as you like, its information ready for so many uses, for instance:

"Did you merely want the correct title or author or imprint so that you can order the book properly? You're all set. Did you want to see a list of books by the same author—those recently

LC Admissions Centralized

Edwin A. Gorsky, director of admissions, has recently assumed responsibility for admissions to Lindenwood 4, including the regional offices in Washington, D.C. and Santa Monica, California. His staff will also recruit students for the Master of Business Administration and Master of Education programs. Mr. Gorsky will continue to serve the other three colleges, conduct campus interviews and travel in Illinois, the East Coast and South Atlantic Coast areas. New staff assignments have been made in response to these programs. Questions you may have about admission requirements to any Lindenwood program should now be directed to the admissions office or to the appropriate regional office.

Amy Basore, Class of '75, has been promoted to assistant director of admissions and will assume the duties of Sandy Lovinguth who has resigned to accept a position as director of admissions at Hollins College in Virginia. The greater portion of Ms. Basore's time will be spent in the office and immediate area. Ms. Basore, who will be starting her third year in admissions, will spend about 30 percent of her time in the territory she previously covered: Texas, Oklahoma, and Arkansas.

Miriam King-Watts and Bernard Weinrich have been named assistant directors of admissions, Miriam received a Master of Arts degree in feminist studies from Lindenwood College for Individualized Education. For the past year she has served as a consultant in recruiting, research and planning at Lindenwood and also as a dormitory head resident. Her primary responsibilities in the new position will be to contact potential students for Lindenwood 4.

Mr. Weinrich was formerly a training and development representative for ACF Industries, Inc., in St. Charles. Previously he served as assistant to the dean of Lindenwood's Evening College and as a faculty member in the business administration department. He has a master's degree in business administration from St. Louis University.

Mr. Weinrich's new responsibilities include the recruiting of students for Lindenwood's Evening College and the new master's programs in business administration and education. He will also teach in the business administration department.

Mrs. Shirley Darling will continue to serve the areas of Colorado, Ohio, Hawaii, Phoenix, Tucson, Albuquerque and Santa Fe.

Mark Mathis has been named to the dual position of soccer coach and admissions counselor. As admissions counselor he will visit prospective Lindenwood students in Missouri and Illinois.

Mathis is a graduate of Quincy College where he starred in soccer. At Quincy he was named to all-district, all-Midwest and all-tournament soccer teams of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics. He was team captain and named most valuable player when his team won the national NAIS soccer title.

This fall, another admissions counselor will be added to cover Missouri (outside of the St. Louis-St. Charles area), Eastern Kansas and Southern Iowa.

Mr. Gorsky's goal for next year's recruiting is a 5 to 7 percent over-all increase in enrollment. As an alum you could be very helpful to the work of the admissions staff by sending us the names of high school students who would benefit from Lindenwood's programs, identifying high school counselors, attending college nights or fairs in your community, telling us of churches with strong youth programs, you could extend the arm of the admissions staff to increase Lindenwood's visibility in many areas of the country. Even a telephone conversation with one of the counselors when they are in your area is often very productive.

cataloged by the Library of Congress and/or other members of the network? Push a few buttons. Ah—there's the edition you wanted to order and the screen tells you it's already cataloged. . . . By preparing cards early, of course, you won't have to make your patrons wait so long for the book to get on the shelves. . . . There are several options for ordering catalog cards, but the most exciting one is to have OCLC computers make up your catalog cards. . . .

"But before you order or catalog, you want to see a list of the other libraries in the OCLC system holding that book—those who have cataloged it on-line. The computer shows you the symbols, say, forty-five libraries three of them in your community. You may decide you don't need your own copy. Or, you may reason that if at least forty-five libraries own the book, it must be worth having.

"A CHANGE OF GEARS. Now you move on to a book already acquired but not yet cataloged. . . . You call for the record and the reply is negative. It happens—for something like ten records out of every hundred. Not bad. . . .

You can catalog the traditional way or you can catalog it on-line according to OCLC guidelines and get the benefit of OCLC card service. . . ."

Commenting on the benefits of this system, Ms. Delks says "The most important things it will do for Lindenwood immediately is to reduce the time it takes to get new volumes on the shelves and to locate which libraries have reference material needed for inter-library loans. In fact, it is like having the services of one professional librarian for cataloging and reference work."

The OCLC system is working—in one five day period in October 1976, 173,696 books were added to the data base in Columbus and 1,228,706 catalog cards were printed.

Dr. Conover Honored

Dr. C. Eugene Conover, Professor Emeritus of Philosophy and Religion at The Lindenwood Colleges, has been elected a Commissioner from the Elijah Lovejoy Presbytery to the 1977 General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church which will meet in Philadelphia later this year.

Dr. Conover taught at Lindenwood from 1948 to 1970 and held the Margaret Leggat Butler Professorship in Philosophy and Religion. He is the author of two books: "Personal Ethics in an Impersonal World" and "Moral Education in Family, School, and Church."

Two New Board Members Appointed

Mrs. Russell J. Crider and John C. Hannegan, both of St. Charles, have been appointed to the board of directors of The Lindenwood Colleges.

Mrs. Crider, a graduate of Washington University Law School, has been an active volunteer in many local health care and social service agencies. She serves on the board of the United Services for the Handicapped and is also a member of the lay board of St. Joseph's Hospital. Active in the St. Charles County Retarded Citizens Association and the Boone Center Workshop, Mrs. Crider has served on the Governor's Committee on Mental Health for the Eastern District. She is an elder in the St. Charles Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Crider's civic and volunteer activities earned her the title of Outstanding Citizen of St. Charles in 1959, as recognized by the Chamber of Commerce. Her late husband, Dr. Russell J. Crider, was a member of the Lindenwood board at the time of his death in 1976.

Mr. Hannegan, a member and former president of the St. Charles County Bar Association, has a law degree from St. Louis University. He is a member of the law firm of Hannegan, Knight and Kennedy and formerly served as special assistant attorney general for the State of Missouri. Mr. Hannegan is a board member of the St. Charles Family and Children's Service and of St. Anthony's Hospital in St. Louis. Organizer of the Foundation for the Restoration of Ste. Genevieve, Mo., Mr. Hannegan currently serves as executive director for the foundation. He is also chairman of the board of Lewis and Clark Mercantile Bank and secretary of the board of Mercantile Bank of St. Charles County.

Alumni Giving Up 145 Percent

Alumni gifts to Lindenwood increased 145 percent in the 1976-77 fiscal year just ended in comparison with the previous year. A total of 1,227 alumni gave $63,961. This includes the $15,000 challenge gifts from Nell QUINLAN Reed, '09, and a St. Louis foundation, and a $10,000 challenge gift from another alumna. Of this amount, $14,715 was given by 522 donors who responded to the Phonathon campaign in March.

The most encouraging indicator in alumni giving is the 170 percent increase in the number of Linden Leaf Society members, those who gave $100 or more.

To those of you who gave, a big thank-you from everyone at Lindenwood. We believe that the potential for alumni giving is far greater than has ever been tapped. Lindenwood has 9,500 alumni, many of whom have never given. When we ask foundations and corporations for gifts to The Colleges, one of the first questions they ask us is "What kind of support do you get from your alumni?" Your gifts will enable us to respond very positively to this question and thereby obtain additional funds to maintain the quality of Lindenwood programs.

150th Year Graduating Class Largest in History

Graduation 1977 in Lindenwood's Sesquicentennial Year brought into focus many of the changes that are taking place in the college community and the world in which its graduates will live and work. President William C. Spencer conferred degrees on 267 persons, 50 of whom received graduate degrees. This is the largest graduating class ever to receive degrees from Lindenwood College.

Lindenwood College for Women had 84 graduates and 37 were graduated from Lindenwood College for Men. The Evening College granted its first Master of Business Administration degree in addition to 46 undergraduate degrees. Lindenwood 4, the College for Individualized Education, awarded degrees to 99 students, who had earned either graduate or undergraduate degrees in one of the four Lindenwood 4 Centers in Washington, D.C., Santa Monica, Calif., St. Louis or St. Charles. Graduates' fields were as far ranging as the Centers at which they studied and included such areas of concentration as art therapy, women's studies, psychology and counseling.

The conferring of an honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters on Lindenwood alumna, Dr. Anna Jane Harrison, brought recognition both to an outstanding woman and to the changing role of women in society. Dr. Harrison, who attended Lindenwood in 1929-31, is president-elect of the American Chemical Society and is the first woman to serve in this capacity. She is a professor of chemistry at Mount Holyoke College.

In a citation which accompanied the presentation of the degree, Dr. John A. Bornmann, professor of chemistry at Lindenwood, recounted Dr. Harrison's numerous professional achievements and awards and commented, "In the Bicentennial Year of the United States, in the Centennial Year of the American Chemical Society and in almost the Sesquicentennial Year of the Lindenwood Colleges, our Anna Jane Harrison was elected to the presidency of the American Chemical Society. The Society is the largest scientific organization devoted to a single science and has approximately 120,000 members, some of whom are from foreign countries. Therefore, Anna Jane Harrison is assuming an office of international scope."

Commencement was an event of special significance for Dr. Thomas W. Doherty because it was his last time to participate in the academic procession before retirement. Bearing the traditional Lindenwood mace, Dr. Doherty served as marshal and headed the stately procession. He has been named professor emeritus after 27 years as professor of modern languages at Lindenwood.

Commencement speaker Lesley Stahl had practical advice for graduates, spiced with personal anecdotes related to her own career as Washington correspondent for CBS.

"Regardless of what anyone may tell you," Ms. Stahl said, "these are not the best years of your life. They are yet to come."

She cautioned graduates not to expect too much too soon. "In fact, pray

'... pray that the beginning years of your career are tough, as college was, because . . . that's the most rewarding and the surest way to rise in your profession.'

that the beginning years of your career are tough, as college was, because I'm coming to believe that's the most rewarding and surest way to rise in your profession."

To the question of whether women can combine marriage, motherhood and career, she said candidly, "I don't know." But she confided that very soon she will add motherhood to her roles as wife and career woman.

Lindenwood's 1977 commencement was unique in many ways. Achievements were recognized and events were reviewed which could not have happened in earlier years. Commencement underlined the fact that Lindenwood has changed, and is changing, as it must to prepare its graduates for today's world. Yet some things remain unchanged: the standards of academic excellence, the devotion of faculty and the questioning of students. To borrow a phrase coined by television and used by Dr. Spencer in his President's Report—Commencement 1977 was the "same pomp but different circumstances."

A very special weekend

Months of preparation and planning provided a weekend to remember, Reunion Weekend, April 21-23, celebrating the 150th anniversary of Lindenwood. It was a period that went back in time to 1827 but which also dwelt on Lindenwood in 1977 and its plans for the future.

The relationship between the old and the new was particularly striking. Some alumni had never returned to the campus, others had not seen the Young Science Building, the renovation of Roemer Auditorium or the new Fine Arts Building. There were as many exclamations of "Do you know that if we were here now, we could . . ." as there were of "That's what we did when . . ." There were constant reminders of how much is here as it was in the past, yet how much is different. The academic vigor and concern of students, the importance of close friendships with peers and faculty, and the need for students to develop their talents . . . all these carry over from the pioneer spirit of Mary Easton Sibley to 1977.

"From Frontier to Frontier"

By noon on Thursday alumni had begun to arrive, enough to fill Cobbs Hall, with many staying at motels or with friends. That evening a seminar provided an opportunity to hear distinguished members of the faculty, with Dean Doris Crozier as moderator, tell about changes in their respective disciplines. Dr. Dean Eckert, art; Dr. James Hood, history; Associate Professor Teresa Welsh, chemistry; and Dr. Lucy Morros, individualized education; related the development of their areas of concentration to Lindenwood programs. It was all too short and many alumni expressed a desire for more in-depth discussions.

Lisa Sergio spoke informally at the second alumni seminar on Friday morning. She shared her impressions from a long career in international relations and communications. In doing this she told about her concern with the impact of technology on mass communications — the ability to reach people everywhere simultaneously. She urges that everyone consider the dangers as well as the potential. For instance, she asks "Do you know how many crimes and acts of violence are committed on television each day, week or year for our children to watch?"

New Council Members

An update of Lindenwood programs by the deans of the four colleges was a special feature of the annual meeting of the Alumnae Association. In addition to the regular business, six new members were elected to the Council: Marian KASPER Childers, Anne GRIGGS Midden, Ann Riker, Kelly STARR Wehmer, Robin Smith and Marilyn BENNETT Noonan. A special "thank-you" was extended to the retiring council members who have contributed their services to the College: Marcia COOPER Giske, Mary Lou McLEOD Bertram, Barbara RHODES Stribling, Joan LEIPER Johnson, and Jan LEWIS Bornstein.

room, offered their friendship, hosted open houses and departments, sang in the Madrigal Choir, and invited alumni to their Sesquicentennial Cotillion at Shaw's Garden.

Steve Andrews, Class of '78, volunteered to write, direct and produce a narrative multi-media history of Lindenwood. His only real reward was the standing ovation from an enthusiastic audience.

The cast members were also students. Sally Richardson, '77, and Bob Van Duesen, '76, as Mary Easton Sibley and Colonel Butler were the "ghosts" who brought to life events in the history of the College. Slides were flashed on the screen to create the setting. Other cast members were Ann Graham, John Shoemaker, Brian Samuels, Peter Bezemes and Nancy Schuster. Recorded music was by the Lindenwood College Choir and Cordelia BUCK Stumberg playing the Lindenwood Hymn, "School of our Mothers."

Lisa Sergio:

Convocation Speaker

Lisa Sergio, a lecturer, specialist in international affairs and pioneer in mass communications, told Lindenwood alumni and friends, "a very difficult to describe poverty has struck the soul of people in our culture." She was the speaker at the Sesquicentennial Reunion Convocation.

Ms. Sergio cited a lack of concern for people today. "You have to teach the distinction between need and desire, need and dreams," Ms. Sergio said. Needs are to a large extent of the body, she commented, while desire is a spiritual thing.

"These desires have to be lifted above this appalling materialism," Ms. Sergio added. "We relate everything to money."

Nancy Montgomery Orr, '35, alumnae sesquicentennial chairman, presenting the 50th year special gift to Phyllis Hackman Giacobbe, '26.

People need a "recognition of human value and love of country and a restoration of feeling and response," the lecturer said. "We have to feel, we have to cry."

Alumni Awards

Mrs. Evelyn Spencer and Dean Doris Crozier were honored at the convocation for their contributions to the life of the College and generous support of alumni activities. A member of the Sesquicentennial Committee, Mrs. Spencer suggested the theme "From Frontier to Frontier" for the year-long celebration. These words are inscribed on the medallion created to commemorate this event. A special edition of the medallion in sterling silver was presented to each of them by Folsta Gibbons on behalf of the Alumnae Association.

Merit awards were made to three distinguished alumnae for excellence in their specializations: Fern PALMER Bittner, Assistant Professor of Physical Education at Lindenwood; Jeanne HARMON Huesemann, Associate Professor of Mathematics at Lindenwood; and Dr. Betty J. Littleton, Associate Dean of the Faculty at Stephens College.

Dr. B. Richard Berg, Vice President, announced that a special scholarship fund has been established to commemorate Lindenwood's 150th anniversary and to honor those individuals who have played an important role in the development of The Colleges.

Plaques honoring special persons or donors to the scholarship fund will be mounted on a wall in the entry to Roemer Hall. Donors, or groups of donors, may designate a favorite professor, past president, or other individual to be honored by contributing $1,000 or more in that person's name. A progress report will be included with the first mailing in the fall.

President Spencer Reports

Excerpts from Address to the Alumni.

This is truly a magnificent occasion; many more alumni and friends and supporters are here today than have been here for a great many years. It's symbolic, I believe, of the great resurgence of interest in, concern for, and support of Lindenwood. In return, those of us who work daily for your colleges offer you diligence and energies to the stewardship and love we all share with you. You pledge your support, and we'll pledge our dedication to protect, preserve, and strengthen Lindenwood.

Many private colleges and universities are in trouble; you of course know this from the newspapers, TV specials, magazine articles and, of course, the barrage of fund-raising letters you receive from one or more private colleges.

Private higher education is being priced out of existence. Almost every year public institutions receive increased tax funds for operations. They understandably try to keep the tuition that the student pays as low as possible. Private colleges, on the other hand, must almost every year raise tuition as they understandably are trying to achieve balanced budgets. In this process the gap between public institution tuition continually widens; private institutions are being priced out of existence. Yet almost everyone, public and educators included, admit that the private colleges, at least the best of them, are more innovative, more responsive to student needs, more flexible, more modern than the ever-larger public education institutions.

Almost everyone agrees that students should have freedom of choice in selecting a college or university, and that a lively diversity of institutional types should be preserved and supported. But, by whom will they be preserved and supported?

I apply this thesis to Lindenwood and to you, her protectors. Time was when Lindenwood could easily produce enough income from a relatively modest endowment to fill the gap between the cost of its educational services and the price of its tuition and fees, the difference between living in the red or in the black, with even enough left over to help needy young women, keep its lawns trim, and its facilities sparkling and fresh. Tuition and fees were $200 or $300 a year, not an exorbitant $2,600, and with a balanced budget, gifts could be used to build new buildings or finance special projects and programs.

In summary, not long ago, at a time when many of you were here, Lindenwood's endowment interest could carry three-quarters or more of the total operating cost of the college. Last year it covered 8 percent of the operating budget. This year it will probably cover about 5 percent. And so, tuition goes up and up. The gap widens. It's a difficult and frustrating problem. But let me tell you how you can help.

'... Not long ago . . . Lindenwood's endowment interest could carry three-quarters or more of the total operating budget . . . last year it carried 8% . . .'

First, it's obvious that we will welcome every gift, pledge, donation, bequest, or whatever you care to contribute. Second, contact your classmates and college friends and acquaintances; tell them about Lindenwood, and urge their participation. This is their college too. Third, scout out others whose interests coincide with ours and yours who might be helpful. There is interest in the new bachelor of medicine program. People from all walks of life can be and are fascinated with Lindenwood 4, the new business intriguing international education projects, and the dozens of other unusual features of Lindenwood. Fourth, write to me or telephone me with your ideas, suggestions, proposals. Tell me what you'd like to do or like us to do. Chances are that not in every way plausible your notion, but in every way possible we'll help you achieve it. Fifth, mark down October 1977 on your calendar the note: this is the month for Lindenwood's Sesquicentennial Founder's Day celebration. You can fill in the details later when the actual date is set and the events are scheduled.

We have a great challenge facing us, but no greater than has been faced many times over the past 150 years. The proof of your interest and involvement is your presence here today. What a wonderful, heart-warming scene it is. God bless all of you.

Alumni Projects Draw Enthusiastic Response

Sandra Allen-Broderick, '62, won the sesquicentennial quilt. A focal point of the alumni art exhibit, it brought nearly $600. John Wehmer, associate professor of art, considered the alumni exhibit so successful it should be repeated at regular intervals.

to 'tie a yellow ribbon around the old oak tree—and to the Linden, too."

"I have been favorably impressed by the innovations in the curriculum and in the administration."

Elizabeth Clark, '31

"Lindenwood has given me more than any pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. In addition to a fine education, the continued friendships and fellowship are a special part of my life."

"The same, and yet, different spirit seemed to permeate the campus. We all observed growth and change that promises a strong future to an institution we cherish."

Carin Chapman West, '67

Mark July 23 to 29 for the Lindenwood Alumni Summer College

Combine a time of intellectual stimulation and fun in a relaxed atmosphere of fellowship. Singles, couples, families and parents are invited to re-establish contact with Lindenwood through its strongest assets—the quality of education and the beauty of the campus. The Alumni Council voted to sponsor the Alumni Summer College because they have enjoyed increased participation in the events of Lindenwood and believe you would too.

Lindenwood Alumni News

New Student Center: From Dream to Reality

A rustic, red-shingled gabled lodge. In its center a fifty-foot lounge with a balcony and adjoining snack bar and game room. Students relaxing in the lounge are enjoying views of campus through the ceiling-high glass walls that enclose it on two sides. Others are sipping coffee or cokes in the open sidewalk cafe under the old linden tree, or meeting in one of the many rooms available for student organizations. (See story on page 1)
