Ackmann explores role of ‘Girl Astronauts’

By Jenifer Bacon
Contributing Writer

Critically acclaimed author, journalist, speaker and Lindenwood alumna Martha Ackmann spoke in Hyland Performance Arena on March 8 about her new book, “The Mercury 13: The True Story of the Thirteen Women and the Dream of Space Flight.”

The inspiration for Ackmann’s book came from a snippet she read in her local newspaper.

“While John Glenn will be enjoying his second space flight, famed woman pilot, Jerrie Cobb, has been waiting since 1961 for her chance to orbit,” she said.

Ackmann wondered why she had never heard of Cobb and decided to do some research.

What she discovered was a little known program to test women’s abilities to perform in space.

In 1958, NASA created the “Mercury Program” to determine if a man could function well enough in space to orbit around the Earth in a manned spacecraft and then be recovered safely.

Because of this program, Alan B. Shepard Jr. became the first American in space, and John H. Glenn Jr. became the first American to go into orbit.

Yet a few of the program administrators began to wonder how women would do under the same circumstances.

Lindenwood goes all in

Casino Royale themed Spring Fling premieres April 20

By Dan Sonderman
Managing Editor

For 10 days in late April, Lindenwood University will transform from the stress of everyday student life into a Spring Fling. Spring Fling 2007 will kick off with a pep rally and barbecue April 20, and last through April 29.

“Essentially it’s a break for students before finals,” said Eric Click, director of student activities. “There’s a little something for everyone.”

One of the bigger events, The LSGA Spring Festival, is held on April 23 from 4:30-7:30 p.m. Student clubs and organizations will have tables promoting themselves and recruiting members. The cafeteria will be closed for dinner and a barbecue will be served at the festival, free to any student with LU residential ID.

“The Spring Festival is huge,” Click said.

The LSGA Black and Gold Celebration will be held from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. on April 27 at the LU Club. Formal attire is enforced (no tennis shoes, jeans or athletic apparel). Tickets are $5 in advance and $8 at the door.

This year’s theme will be Casino Royale. This event includes a DJ, food and beverages. Tickets can be purchased at either the Student Activities table (in front of the cafeteria at lunch) or at the activities office.

Other events include: honors convocation, staff vs. faculty softball game, spring fling golf classic, caricaturist ($5 person).

One of the more popular events is the ‘62 Sports Group inflatables. Some of the inflatables at this year’s fling are: 3-in-1 sports arena, an XP 230 obstacle course, jungle extreme obstacle course, bouncy boxing ring, joust (for two competitors standing on a metal pedestal), 3-lane bungee run, and a dunk tank. Click encourages challenges between organizations, athletic teams and dorms.

University brightens housing

By Melissa Cossarini
Staff Writer

The heritage campus and Linden Terrace housing area will be brighter. In an effort to improve lighting and security, AmerenUE will repair and update existing streetlights, and install 25 dusk-to-dawn lights for women’s housing.

“This is an ongoing process to improve safety and security around campus,” said Wade Hampton, director of Residential Services.

The streetlight improvements gained approval last summer, while the dusk to dawn backyard lights won the go-ahead a month or two ago.

AmerenUE has already begun working to improve the streetlights, and the porch lights will be installed soon.

“We hope to get to all the areas on campus. It’s an ongoing process,” said Hampton.

The idea of the new lighting system is in response to feedback from students who wanted to see a brighter campus. “I feel safe around campus already, but I think the new lights are a good idea. It was too dark around here,” said Megan Kieffer, senior.

Hampton said that Lindenwood officials wanted to make the campus as secure and safe as possible. The Dean of Students office, the Residential Services and the Maintenance departments are continually reviewing suggestions from students to improve safety, he said.

Hampton encourages students, staff, faculty and the community to contact Residential Services if they have a problem or concern about anything on campus.

Dancers will move to their own rhythm at concert

By Michelle Propst
Contributing Writer

Every spring dancers at Lindenwood University put on their Spring Dance Concert to demonstrate unique styles of dance, technique and choreography by students, giving them an opportunity to display their art through movement and performance.

This year’s Spring Dance Concert is scheduled to be presented May 3-6 from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m. in the Hyland Performance Arena.

The Spring Concert consists of 10 to 12 dance routines taught and choreographed by senior students, with the exception of three routines which the Lindenwood dance professors will instruct.

Laura Livingston, a Lindenwood dance minor, will perform in two of the dance pieces for the concert. “I enjoy dancing in a couple pieces because the dance styles are unique and expressive,” Livingston said.

She was one of 30 to 50 dancers who auditioned and will be participating in the concert. The dancers auditioned in groups of three in front of a panel of choreographers.

“It is important that the choreographers choose the right dancers for their piece because it is the dancers who will portray their story,” Livingston said.

After being selected for their pieces, the dancers begin rehearsals after school hours several times a week. Livingston admitted that participating in the concert can be time consuming, but said, “It is my way of expressing myself through different styles of dance.”

Free campus service counsels students in need

Marsha Andreoff, assistant professor of counseling, discusses the Student Counseling and Resource Center at Lindenwood University.

College can be stressful and overwhelming. Students who need extra help often do not know where to go. Lindenwood University now provides a Student Counseling and Resource Center where students can visit confidentially with professionals and student interns about problems they are having.

“We wanted to make sure there are mental and health-care resources available to the university,” said Jan Munro, assistant professor in counseling. “We are open to any services students need.”

The counseling team consists of Dr. Tom Stephens, assistant dean- education/counseling division; Elizabeth Baker, program director; Marsha Andreoff, assistant professor in counseling; and Munro.

Since this free service opened in January, 14 students have contacted and visited the SCRC. “So far we have talked with students who have adjustment issues, relationship problems, and time management problems,” said Andreoff.

Students bring international flavor to university television

By Maria Dumas
Contributing Writer

On Thursday, March 22, four Latin American students changed the image of Lindenwood University's LUTV26 television station. In a "30 minute Spanish explosion," these mass communication majors showed the need for programming that reaches the campus's diverse student body. The show is called "Entiendes?" which is Spanish for "Do you understand?" Its basic purpose is to entertain and inform about life at Lindenwood. It has an informal approach and covers topics ranging from parodies acted out by students to reports about what happens in the school cafeteria everyday. "They have made a variety show," said Ed Voss, director of LUTV26. "They talk a little about everything."

The four creators of the show are Lucas Murillo from Argentina, Claudio Mermelstein from Brazil, Piero Menor from Spain, and Andrea Carrillo from Panama. Each of the students participates in all aspects of the creation of the program: filming, producing, editing, directing and the creative process. "The advantage of the show is that there is a large Spanish speaking population not only on campus, but around the St. Charles area," Voss said. "It is good to have a show of this kind on the channel." He also states that this show can be understood by everyone, regardless of whether they speak Spanish.

Voss added, "I am thinking of offering 'Entiendes?' to other local cable networks in the St. Louis area, because it is a show that would definitely entertain the audience."

proximately every two weeks as the semester goes on. "As long as Lucas, Piero, Andrea and I are still in school, we will take care of it. And when we leave new people will come to continue on with the project, and so on and so forth," said Mermelstein.

In brief

Lindenwood hosting Career Day today

Lindenwood University is hosting its annual Career Day Job Fair today from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Connection, located downstairs in the Spellmann Center. Approximately 40 employers from the St. Louis area will be available. Students will be able to get information about full- and part-time jobs and internships.

The job fair is free, but professional attire is required. Some organizations in attendance include the Boy Scouts of America, Commerce Bank, Edward Jones, KSDK-TV, Maritz and the St. Louis Science Center.

Student art show this week

The Lindenwood Juried Student Show will be on display April 12-26 in the Lindenwood University Cultural Center to give studio art students a chance to showcase their work.

Eligible media entries include paintings, drawings, photography, sculptures, ceramics, computer art and printmaking. Artists can enter pieces in multiple genres. Prizes will be awarded for first, second and third place in each category.

Leadership focus of lecture series

Michael R. Hogan, chief administrative officer and CFO of St. Louis' Sigma-Aldrich Corporation, spoke as part of Lindenwood's Distinguished Executive Lecture Series on April 4.

The lecture, titled "The Company 'DNA' of a Leader in Life Science and High Technology," was held in the Leadership Room. The event was co-hosted by the Lindenwood Division of Management and Lindenwood's Institute for the Study of Economics and the Environment.

Knotts April's top university employee

Professor David Knotts has been named Lindenwood's Employee of the Month for April. Knotts is the third honoree since the launch of the program.

He has worked at Lindenwood since fall 2005. Knotts is the academic coordinator for the Boone campus and also teaches biology, nonprofit administration and a variety of other courses.

Seyer finishes in top 10 at Miss USA

Amber Seyer, a 20-year-old Lindenwood student and the current Miss Missouri USA, placed in the top 10 of the Miss USA pageant in Hollywood, Calif., on March 23.

Seyer, who finished ahead of 63 other contestants to win the Miss Missouri USA pageant on Oct. 29, is the second Miss Missouri to attend Lindenwood in recent years; Shandi Finnessey won the state pageant in 2003 and went on to win the Miss USA pageant.

Education award goes to Kurzenoerfer

Amy Kurzenoerfer, an education senior at Lindenwood, was presented the Dabney Scholarship Award on March 11 at the state conference for the Council for Exceptional Children.

Kurzenoerfer served as governor for the state board of university students. The award is given to outstanding students who serve as a member of the council.

Graduation is set in Family Arena

For three years Lindenwood University has hosted commencement in the Hyland Performance Arena. This year will be different. A contract was signed last month to hold commencement ceremonies May 18 and 19 at the Family Arena in St. Charles.

In addition to more available room, each graduate will receive up to 10 tickets for family and friends.

Screenwriter Rift Fournier, who has written for television shows including "Charlie's Angels," "Kojak" and "Matlock," will be the commencement speaker.

Baccalaureate and graduate ceremonies will be held on May 18 at 7:30 p.m. Undergraduate ceremonies will be held on May 19 at 10 a.m.

Theater department asks age-old question: Is marriage worth it?

By Kami Jones
Contributing Writer

The Lindenwood theater department explored the complex subjects of marriage and relationships in this spring's performance of Stephen Sondheim's musical COMPANY, directed by Stacy M. Snyder.

The cast of quirky characters includes an entertaining chain-smoker, rarely seen without a drink in her hand (Shonelle McGill), married to her third husband (Devon A. A. Norris); an affectionate divorced couple (Whitney Kay Compton, Adam C. Loyd); a pair of hippies (Theresa Peters Nigus, Luke A. Wall); and a soon-to-be married couple struggling with neurosis and second thoughts (Andi Bloome, Peter Colombatto).

The play begins as Robert (played by Mike Dowdy) celebrates his 35th birthday, still single, with 10 of his closest friends – all of whom are trying to convince him to get married.

Throughout the play, Robert witnesses firsthand the tension found within marriages.

He becomes a referee for his married friends, Sarah and Harry (Michelle Sauer, Wes Rankin), who wind up pinning one another in a comedic karate match in their living room, after an argument over diets and alcohol. He also is witness to David's (Wall) fond recollection of his single days, Amy's (Bloome) neurotic tendencies, Peter's (Loyd) questions of homosexuality, and Joanne's (McGill) struggle with her self-image.

By the end, a wiser Robert sings of being ready for marriage – ready for someone to "crowd [him] with love and force [him] to care."

With its colorful retro costumes (designed by cast members McGill and Dowdy), thought-provoking lyrics, challenging questions, and talented cast, COMPANY was entertaining, as well as insightful.

Cycling Club rolling to official sport

Lindenwood University might have an addition to its list of 38 sports by next fall. The school does not offer cycling as a sport this year, but may if the Cycling Club's proposal gains approval from President James Evans. Darren Marhanka is an assistant professor of criminal justice at Lindenwood, and is the faculty adviser of the Cycling Club that he started last fall.

LU student Amanda Edwards, the only female racer in the club, is the club's president. "I've pretty much been involved with cycling my entire life," said Edwards. "It would be nice to have it as a sport here."

The club competes in the Midwestern Collegiate Cycling Association (MCCA) where the students ride against schools such as Purdue, Michigan State, Milwaukee and Northwestern. The MCCA standings of the team are kept by points that riders collect through the year.

"If we could make it an actual sport, it would make things a bit easier," said Marhanka. "I would like to aim for next fall or spring at the latest. It's pretty much self-expense."

If the Cycling Club became a sport, racers would have to purchase a bike, but trips and meals would be covered by the school. "I bought the jerseys," said Marhanka. "It's starting to get a bit expensive."

The Lions' next race is in Michigan but the majority of the races are in Indiana. "Right now we are collecting points in all our races. You need a certain amount of points to be able to go to regionals and that's what we're going for," said Edwards.

Sports briefs

Bowling team nationals April 18

The men's and women's bowling teams travel to Wichita, Kan., April 18 to compete in nationals. The men's team lost by 539 pins and the women lost by 326 pins in the regional event. Both teams fell to the Bulldogs of Fresno State.

Men's volleyball loses in semis

On March 31, the men's volleyball team lost to Cardinal Stritch in the semifinals at the MAMVIC conference tournament.

The Lions lost by a score of 3 games to 2, but swept the team in both meetings during the regular season.

The Lions go to nationals April 12, in Riverside, Calif.

Track and Field headed to Illinois

The men's and women's track and field teams will visit University of Illinois campus on April 14 to compete at the Illinois Invitational.

The men finished in sixth place and the women received eighth at the NAIA Indoor Nationals in March.

Golfers score well in Georgia

The men's golf team won the West Georgia Spring Invitational on March 26, and the women took fifth place at the Beach Invitational on March 31.

The men will play at the Brickyard Classic in Indianapolis April 16 and the women will play at the Illinois Wesleyan Spring Fling April 14.

Lindenwood student wins talk radio contest

By Lane Joplin
Contributing Writer

It's been said that you never know if you will succeed until you try. Lindenwood senior Tim Meyer recently found that out.

Meyer, 22, from Swansea, Ill., entered the Survivor contest at 97.1 FM Talk Radio in early January. Out of the 1,500 people who entered, Meyer was chosen as one of the four finalists.

As a finalist, Meyer, who has a morning show at Lindenwood on 89.1 FM The Wood on Wednesday and Friday mornings from 5:30 a.m. to 9 a.m. with co-host K.C. Adams, had the chance to co-host The Glover Show on Feb. 9 from 7-9 p.m. The show was "conservative politics with a slice of humor," said Meyer.

Once all the votes were tallied, Meyer was the winner. He earned an internship on The Glover Show, his own show on Sunday nights for the month of March, and a $7,500 scholarship to the Broadcast Center.

Meyer plans to graduate in December, with a degree in mass communications and an emphasis in radio. "I hope to be on conservative talk radio," Meyer said, "then one day possibly run for political office, such as governor or state representative."

Fashion center stage April 29

By Cindy Muehlbacher
Contributing Writer

Colorful fabrics of cotton and linen will emerge at this year's themed fashion show entitled, "Carnaval de la Mode."

For its 10th year, the show will be held on April 29 from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m. in the Lord and Taylor Court of Westfield West County

Mall. Entrance fee is $25.

Sheryl Graham, 25, a graduate student at Lindenwood University majoring in Fashion Design, is working on her collection for the show.

"It's a busy time, but I enjoy it," she said. "I started working on my collection at the beginning of the spring semester and I'm not even close to being done."

Lindenwood's own fashion show will be May 4 from 10 a.m. to noon at Lindenwood University Cultural Center, featuring garments of undergraduate students who did not get their designs in the mall show.

These students presented their original garments in front of a jury to gain entrance to the campus show.

Even though NASA didn't approve of the idea, a small number of women began the extensive series of tests without even their families' knowledge. Thus the "Girl Astronaut Program" was created.

Each woman involved in the program made extraordinary contributions to the effort to get women into space. In February of 1960, the chosen women began phase one which included 75 tests and passed each one with flying colors. Most scored better than many of the men. In spite of the demanding examinations, the women didn't complain because they knew that they were given an opportunity they would not have had otherwise. One of the first participants, Jerrie Cobb, said, "We were willing to give our lives because we wanted to be useful."

Once the 13 women were about to go on to the final phase of testing, NASA called the whole thing off, saying that "the tests were not worth all of that money," and "they had better things to do than drop everything and include women." Several of the women tried to regain support but it was no use. The "Girl Astronaut Program" came to an abrupt end.

Although the first American female astronaut did not launch into space until nearly 20 years later, the women of "Mercury 13" demonstrated that dreams should not be limited by sex or race. Ackmann describes her book as "a story about women with strength, resilience, determination and hope." She is currently working on a story about women and baseball.

Counseling

abuse are becoming more extreme and excessive problems for college students. "Substance abuse is huge. Students go to class hung over and fall behind, while pot decreases motivation to get things done," said Andreoff.

The center is located off-campus at the Lindenwood University Cultural Center so that students feel more comfortable. Andreoff and Munro said they respect a student's right to privacy and feel the off-campus location will better fulfill that need.

The SCRC also gives a chance for those attending the counseling graduate program to intern. The internship program requires 300 working hours a semester, in which 120 hours involve face-to-face contact with students.

"For the interns, this is a good opportunity for them to develop their skills in a closely moderated environment," said Munro. There are four interns currently working at the SCRC and another will be added during the next trimester.

"We listen to a student's story or concerns, and then talk to them about how they want to proceed, and then match them up with an intern," said Munro. "However, if a student hurts themselves, we have ethical duty and are bound by law to tell someone else."

Both Munro and Andreoff understand that college is a stressful time for students and, for those needing extra help or someone to talk with, that's not always available. "We want to help the students have a positive college experience, and help them deal with the stresses of school," said Andreoff.

The SCRC is a first for Lindenwood. Before January, no counseling center was offered to students. "We were surprised to find that Lindenwood didn't have a counseling center. We think Lindenwood students are no different, they have issues they need help with," said Munro.

The professors and interns counsel undergraduate students, but in the future hope to expand to help graduate students and the community. "I would like to see the program grow. It would be really nice to open a center to the community but that is far down the road," said Andreoff.

The SCRC is open Monday through Friday, and professors and interns are available as needed, mostly afternoon or evening hours. A student can also visit on the weekend with an appointment.

For more information about the program, the counseling professors encourage anyone to stop by or visit LUCounseling.com for more details.
