LINDENWOOD SCHOLARSHIP PLEDGES REACH $1379

Students at Lindenwood College, now on the eve of the centennial year 1926-27, have begun pledges toward the Mary Easton Sibley scholarship fund, and at the commencement of the Christmas vacation their total of pledges amounted to $1379, which is to be paid by February 1. About 40 per cent of the upper classmen have subscribed to the memorial fund, and about 80 per cent of the freshmen.

The greater part of the proposed $100,000 scholarship fund will be raised by the alumnae and outside friends, but the present students will be represented. The fund is to be completed by June 1, 1927, and it will then be put out at interest, the proceeds of which will go for scholarships of from $200 to $250 each to girls who would otherwise not be able to attend Lindenwood.

Members of the faculty of Lindenwood College are returning from vacation visits, and classes are to be called at the college for 10 o'clock Tuesday morning. Dr. and Mrs. John L. Roemer shortened their visit in New Orleans, because of the death here of W. A. Douglass, a friend of long standing, who had been a frequent visitor at the college. The dean, Dr. Alice E. Gipson, went to Springfield, Mass., for the vacation. Miss E. LINDENWOOD COLLEGE REOPENS TOMORROW

Studies will be resumed tomorrow morning at Lindenwood College and the first assembly of the new year at the college will be held Thursday morning at 11 o'clock in Roemer auditorium, when Mrs. W. K. Roth will give an address, "My Cruise of the Mediterranean." Mrs. Roth, who is an alumna of Lindenwood and a former president of the St. Louis Lindenwood College Club, recently spent a year abroad.

The students generally have been at their own homes for the Christmas vacation, some of them going to the Far West, in Wyoming and in Utah. Dr. and Mrs. John L. Roemer spent Christmas in New Orleans, but were called home sooner than had been expected by the death of their friend the late W. A. Douglass. Dr. Alice E. Mrs. Roth Speaks to Lindenwood Girls.

Lindenwood College girls heard of buried cities and reopened tombs of the Old World Thursday morning, in an address by Mrs. W. K. Roth of St. Louis, former president of the St. Louis Lindenwood College club and an active member. She compared the buried Pompeii and Herculaneum, saying that it is now believed that while Herculaneum was covered with the volcanic lava, the people of Pompeii were simply stifled by the gases and over them swept the sands of desert winds. Thus the figures were found, just as they were in lifetime, even at some daily task. She saw the casts of such figures which scientists have made. Mrs. Roth was greatly impressed with the glory of ancient Athens, but said that these tremendous works of marble, there as elsewhere, always inspired here with a feeling of pity for the poor slaves, or captives, who evidently toiled by hand to accomplish such wonderful results.

Mrs. Lulu D. Hynson, also of the St. Louis Lindenwood club, accompanied Mrs. Roth, and was presented to the girls from the platform. Both spent the day at the college.

LINDENWOOD GIRLS TOLD ABOUT RUINS OF POMPEII

Mrs. W. K. Roth of St. Louis told the girls of Lindenwood College in a chapel address yesterday that she found at ancient Athens during her recent trip abroad, "likeness of girls who looked exactly like two modern girls playing hockey." She was unable to find out just what this scene represented, as it had stood through the centuries, but it convinced her that "there is nothing new under the sun."

Mrs. Roth stood at the crater of Vesuvius and looked across, finding this place of peril very fascinating. She was impressed with what had been unearthed at Pompeii, where gas, rather than lava, had killed the inhabitants. Casts have been made of the people found, showing them in whatever homely task they may have been occupied, when overtaken by sudden death.

At Constantinople, Mrs. Roth and her daughter removed their street shoes with the rest, at the entrance to St. Sofia, and she was amazed at the size and splendor of the rugs and the lavish use of mother-of-pearl in the interior of the great cathedral. She observed the fact that almost all the women in Constantinople and in Cairo are now going unveiled.

Meek to Hold Power, Dr. Moorehead Says.

Dr. John H. Moorehead last night declared at vespers at Lindenwood college that the time is coming when the merciful, the meek, the peacemaker, shall hold the power in this world and administer its resources in the spirit of the "second mile."

His subject was "The Spirit of the Second Mile" and he illustrated it with the text, "Whosoever shall compel thee to go one mile, go with his twain." He took the position "the first mile" in any service is what duty or the law commands, but that "the second mile" comes from grace and generosity.

Time Near When Meek Shall Hold Power, Dr. Moorehead Says

Delivers Lecture on "Second Mile" at Lindenwood College.

"The Spirit of the Second Mile," illustrated in the text, Matthew 5, 41, "Whosoever shall compel thee to go one mile, go with him twain," was the subject of a sermon by Rev. Dr. John H. Moorehead, pastor of Carondelet Presbyterian Church, last night at vespers at Lindenwood College in Roemer Auditorium. He took the position that "the first mile" in any service is what duty or the law commands, but "the second mile" comes from grace and generosity.

"The words of Jesus Christ," said Dr. Moorehead, "are terse, tense, powerful. They have given rise to endless disputation and have been interpreted in all senses, and yet they have founded schools and determined world currents. When the sermon on the mount, of which this text is a part, was first spoken, it was regarded as chimerical, visionary; and nineteen centuries have not sufficed to define fully the mind of its author."

Meek and Merciful.

The speaker showed the translation, "compel thee to go one mile" might be phrased, "impress thee to go one mile, then go with him twain." "In the days of Jesus Christ and down to this present hour," he said, "the earth has been in the hands of those who had the ability to take and keep. But the time is coming when the merciful, the meek, the peacemaker, shall hold the power in this world and administer its resources in the spirit of 'the second mile.'"

Dr. Moorehead said he had been informed of an old law on the statute books of the State of Arizona, by which anyone in distress for water in the deserts may signal a passing train, and it will be compelled to stop and supply the need. "A young man may be hurrying home from college, with a telegram staring him in the face, 'Come quickly, your mother is dying.' No matter; there is a man out there who is perishing for water, the train must stop.

John D. and Coolidge.

"John D. Rockefeller may be on his private car, at the rear of the train, hurrying to buy up some independent pipe lines, or dodge subpoenas, or something of the sort, but who is he, when there is a man out there whose canteen is empty and there is no water? The President of the United States may be a passenger, but even he may submit to a little inconvenience like the humblest citizen, until the man outside has a drinking supply for the day.

Always Inspiration.

"Jesus Christ must have had in mind a similar law which related to ancient travel, when he said, 'Whosoever shall compel thee to go one mile, go with him twain. The first mile is law, but the second is grace. The first mile you are compelled to go; the second mile you choose of your own accord to go.

"Jesus Christ is always the inspiration and example of the second mile. The fact that we are Christians is not proof absolute that we have power. We must live lives that overflow, if power is to be a possession. Egypt is an exceedingly fruitful country, not because the Nile runs through it, but because it overflows into it. The 'second mile' is the spirit of Jesus Christ."

LINDENWOOD LATIN CLASS PUBLISHES NEWSPAPER

The Roman Tatler, a weekly newspaper of the Latin department of Lindenwood College, appeared for the first time yesterday, with Misses Pauline Davis, Virginia Saint John and Margaret Patterson, as editors, under the supervision of Miss Kathryn Hankins, head of the department.

Editorials, stories, advertising, humor, art and other current articles are arranged from exchanges, each chosen with the purpose of showing modern interest in Roman times and modern parallels with the life of that day. One of the things clipped is "The Feast of the Romans," as written by "Uncle Ray."

A comparison is made of Col. Roosevelt's account of Akeley's killing a lion, with the older story of Hercules and the Nemean lion. The failure of Fabius to win his last battle is linked up with life insurance. Latin mottoes of different states and a Latin cross-word puzzle, as well as Latin translations, of modern songs, are seen.

Lindenwood Graduate Speaks on African Life.

A wedding in which the St. Louis Lindenwood College club was interested on both sides, was announced at that club's meeting, on Tuesday, at the Forest Park Hotel. This was the marriage, just before the holidays, of Miss Gladys Carnahan, May Queen at Lindenwood four years ago, whose home was in Pine Bluff, Ark., to Jack Crandall of Dallas, the bridegroom being a son of the late Mrs. L. E. Crandall, who had served as president and vice president of the club in former years.

The club was addressed by a graduate of 1911, Mrs. H. R. Mather, wife of Capt. H. R. Mather of the British Government service, in Africa. Their home is in Uganda, but with her little daughter, born in Africa, she is visiting her mother, Mrs. M. Kennedy of 5829 Bartmer avenue, and will remain here until April, when she goes to join her husband in France. Mrs. Mather was formerly Miss Katherine Kennedy, and for several years devoted her life to missions, at first among the Ozarks, near home, and finally, beginning 1919, in central Africa with the African Inland Mission, at Arua. It was there that she met Capt. Mather, and they were married. Mrs. Mather founded a school for little girls, which increased to 400. Since her marriage at Uganda, she says that the life of the government officials is delightful, and that they meet people from all parts of the world, traveling to and fro. Also she plays tennis on the admirable courts of Uganda. At Lindenwood, Miss Kennedy was an expert tennis player.

Dr. Alice E. Gipson, dean of the college, spoke of progress among the students. She made reference, and letters were also read, thanking the club for its contribution of $500 to the Mary Easton Sibley scholarship fund. Mrs. Joseph W. White presided, assisted by Mrs. W. C. Hamill, who is soon to remove to St. Joseph. The February meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. White, 7516 Washington boulevard, where she will entertain the members. It is planned to enlist in the club all the 300 alumnae and former students of the college who live in St. Louis or its suburbs.

Judge Holtcamp told of a former St. Louis business man who expected to bequeath an estate of $600,000 under the terms of a will written on pink lady's note paper and signed by no witnesses. "This man wished a legacy of $10,000 left to an old servant. By the kindness of the man's heirs the gift was allowed, but if they had wished, the compensation might have been refused. Practical value of a college education to a "home woman," even though she obtains it after marriage is demonstrated in the case of Mrs. Eleanor Donnelly of Kansas City, Mo., who will have a booth at the Woman's National Exposition in the Coliseum, February 16 to 22, to show how a college education helped her capitalize her skill to the extent that she now controls a $1,000,000 business yearly, a manufacturing company of Kansas City.

What is more to the point the product of Mrs. Donnelly's business is something for women, to make them more attractive and happier, pretty house-dresses and aprons.

Mrs. Donnelly married at seventeen and her enterprising husband, Paul F. Donnelly, sent her to Lindenwood College at St. Charles where she graduated and then started in business in a small way, through her desire to help women, and also help swell the family purse. War-time came and Donnelly departed but she stuck to the business and it grew! Now both of them run it and Mrs. Donnelly will tell you smilingly it is all due to her husband's wisdom in making her go to college and fit herself for whatever opportunity came along her way.

Of Plumpness.

By Jewell Mayes.

Plumpness has seemingly (yes, evidently) been longingly looked upon with fond favor by a majority of all men of all the ages—plumpness within reason, proper for par excellent pulchritude.

In spite of the solemn referendum of the male tribe for plump prettiness, the beauty-doctors and the charlatans have proceeded to sow dragon's-teeth against the open-sesame sign of Good Health, aided and abetted by the "Slim-slatted Sisterhood" who are ever envious of the "Properly Plump Party"—the devious doctrine of dieting being spread throughout the length of our land, intimating that to be the least bit fat is folly and ugly!

In the days of the Black Obelisk, the fat-lean controversy would have made the Euphrates and Tigris crimson with the blood of nations battling to settle whether the lean queen or the plump princess were the sweeter and the prettier. Not so in these days when we have a League of Notions (yes, we didn't mis-spell it), a Hague Court, and a World Court—thus it seemeth that the Twentieth Centuryers go to war slower than in ancient days!

Under the present status of the standards of popular opinion on the avoirdupois of the female form divine, it seems utterly out of the question to at this date attempt to take final measurements for an American Venus de Lindenwood or de Central!

"Sailing Life's Seas" Is Topic of Sermon
by Army Chaplain

Archdeacon Henry H.
Marsden Addresses Lindenwood College.

Archdeacon Henry H. Marsden of the Missouri Diocese of the Protestant Episcopal Church, in a vesper address last night at Lindenwood College, drew an illustration from his experiences overseas as a chaplain in the American expeditionary force. His topic was "Sailing the Sea of Life." It was to "the home port" that the war reference was made and the joy of the soldiers and sailors at "going home." Those thrilling days were recalled, the hardships of the men and the keen anticipation that passed through the ranks at the welcome announcement of starting for the home port. "The home port," said the preacher, "is where one's loved ones are."

Quotes Short Poem.

But it was chiefly of "the sea of life" that the archdeacon spoke. He quoted the couplet:

"Tis the set of the sail, and not the gale,

That waits the ship into port."

"The set of the sail," said Rev. Mr. Marsden, "is due to the angle at which the sails are placed. It is due to the angle of the sails in one's life whether that life be successful and whether it reaches a happy ending.

"There is, first, the angle of faith. We read, now a days, of certain newspapers and periodicals, published in a foreign language, which are trying to undermine the faith, and we are told that these are distributed promiscuously in colleges. They have dragged the Christ in effigy through the streets of Moscow. How necessary it is, that you students should set the angle of the sail of faith if you are going to get anywhere.

"Then there is the angle of prayer. We need to develop the spirit of prayer in helping us over this sea of life. During the war the commanding officer, Gen. Foch, went each day into the chapel, wherever he was, to commune with God—to tap the source of good, the reservoir of all power. The same is true of Lincoln and of other men who did the things worth while and who steered the Ship of State.

Courage Is Needed.

"The third angle for setting our sails is that of courage. Witness the courage of St. Paul, facing the dangers of sea travel in the midst of storms and other dangers to which he was exposed. Follow him to the close of his life, when he said: 'I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith,' and see his reward: 'Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness.' He had reached his 'home port.'

"All of us are pilgrims and travelers along the highway of life (if not on the seas), and sooner or later we expect to reach home. To all of us it is a precious thought. Let us each, by faith and courage and prayer, follow the life that leads to that desired haven."

Marion Mather, 3-years-old, who is visiting her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. M. Kennedy, at 5829 Bartmer avenue, has the distinction of having been born in Kampala, Province of Uganda, Africa. She has crossed several oceans to come to St. Louis, and will soon recross them, when she and her mother, Mrs. H. R. Mather, go to join the father, Capt. H. R. Mather, at Marseilles, France, sailing from that point home to Africa. They expect to leave on February 23.

Mrs. H. R. Mather was formerly Miss Katherine Kennedy. She graduated from Lindenwood College in 1911, where she received a strong impulse to become a missionary. She did home mission work for a while in the Ozarks, and in 1918 sailed for Africa, where for several years she was stationed at Arua, Uganda, under the African Inland Mission. Here she married Capt. H. R. Mather, of the British Government service.

Their home is in the town of Uganda, which is a center of government officials, and where Mrs. Mather often plays tennis, in which she excelled while a student at Lindenwood.

Mrs. Mather is one who is perfectly satisfied with life in Africa, and enjoys it. "All that one needs," she says, "to keep from growing stale is to have a hobby. I love tennis, and then, too, I am very fond of gardening. Also, although I am no longer a missionary, I still enjoy helping the natives all I can."

Says Gospel Is Only Power for Solving Race Problems Today

Dr. Crowe Refers to Christ's Dealing with Woman of Samaria.

That the Gospel of Christ is the only power that will solve present-day problems, as instanced by Christ's dealing with the woman of Samaria, was affirmed by Rev. Dr. William Crowe, pastor of Westminster Presbyterian Church, in a vesper address last night before the students of Lindenwood College in Roemer Auditorium.

The speaker's text was the question, John 4, "Is not this the Christ?" After talking with the Savior at the well, the woman was convinced that this was the expected Messiah, yet she hesitates and asks, literally translated, "Can this not be the Christ?"

"The reason for her hesitancy," said Dr. Crowe, "is that she is facing a group of men, and suddenly remembers that they are men callous of heart, rational, more inclined to doubt than she had been. De Witt Miller has said that a woman jumps at conclusions, while a man, with slower pace, arrives at the goal by the way of logical reasoning. When the man reaches the goal, though, he finds the woman waiting for him. Such seems to be the case in this incident.

Jews Hated Samaritans.

"Of all conversations recorded in the New Testament, there is none, to my mind, so rich in material for study of mental processes as this." Here the speaker described the scene and the strangeness of "a friendly Jew," who went the unaccustomed route through "the country of the hated Samaritans."

"Every man who knows God must needs go through Samaria every day. Somebody needs him. Until we are willing to turn aside from the beaten paths, from the roadways along which we may amble at ease, and go the ways that lead to contacts that offer opportunities for ministries to those in need, we are in no wise doing the will of him who has called us into the light of his truth.

"By all the traditions of his race, Jesus should not have condescended to turn his face toward a Samaritan. The Jews had no dealings with such people. The Samaritans were an outcast folk. In this act we have the solution of our present-day race problems.

"Hope Lies in Divine Love."

"This is a day of race prejudice, inter-racial suspicions and hatreds. This mental attitude is the one big factor that causes uneasiness and fear of another war.

"To this prime question in international and social relations there is only one answer. Education nor commerce nor diplomacy can offer no suggestion for permanent settlement. The sole hope lies in the gospel of him who on that day overstepped all bounds and, to the astonishment of all, demonstrated the power of personal interest, when that interest is aroused by the stirrings of divine love. Therein lies

Lindenwood Student's Marriage to Indiana Youth Is Annulled

Miss Mary Folsom, 18, Thought Ceremony Merely Betrothal.

Being unused to the wiles of a modern lover, Miss Mary Isabel Folsom, 18, daughter of Dr. Ephriam Folsom of 7478 Washington boulevard and a student of Lindenwood College, thought she was simply making a pledge of betrothal when she appeared before a Justice of the Peace hand in hand with William Clifford White, 25, gay Adonis of Boonville, Ind., while in reality that functionary was officiating at the solemn rite of matrimony.

She told her sad tale yesterday to Circuit Judge Wurdeman at Clayton, and the marriage was annulled less than ten minutes after her petition was filed.

Her associations and environment from childhood to the present, she vowed, "was such as to preclude acquaintance of worldly knowledge." "Home had ever shielded" her from the trials of life, she said.

Go to Justice of Peace.

So, when White, an old friend and neighbor back in Boonville, where the Folsoms formerly resided, came to St. Louis last October for a visit and subsequently reaffirmed his vows of love, Mary reposed faith and accompanied him to the office of Justice of the Peace Sidney Pathrie of Belleville, Ill., "to make a formal pledge to one another."

"He got a marriage license, but told me it would do no harm to get it then, as we could use it later," she continued. "I didn't think it would affect our future position."

"I didn't know that we were being married. I told him that I might consent to be his wife in the future."

"And when we drove back home that same afternoon William asked my father if he could be engaged to me, and father told him he could not."

William left St. Louis that day for his home in Boonville, and shortly thereafter Mary returned to Lindenwood College at St. Charles. The pledge occurred, she said, on October 17.

It was some time later that she learned in reality it had been a marriage. Hence the annulment proceedings, which were brought by her father.

Miss Folsom continued her studies until the end of the semester at the college, where she was freshman.

Reared in Small Town.

The fact that Lindenwood is an educational institution strictly for girls was one of the facts stressed by the petition, which also brought out the fact that she "had been born and brought up in a small town (Boonville) and moved to St. Louis County in childhood."

Demurely attired, Miss White, who is petite, pretty and blonde, slipped into the court chamber during the noon hour, accompanied by her father and her attorney. It was the hour when few, if any, persons are on hand. They left directly after the annulment was granted.

Miss Folsom has left the college. Her father is vice president of the F. N. Brown Realty Company of Wellston and Maplewood.

"Betrothal Rites" Trick School Girl; Marriage Annulled

She didn't know she had him so Miss Mary Isabel Folsom, 18, agrees today that she won't miss her erstwhile husband William Clifford White, 25.

Miss Folsom is the daughter of Dr. Ephriam Folsom, 7478 Washington boulevard, and a student at Lindenwood college. Yesterday Judge Wurdeman at Clayton annulled her marriage to White when she told him she thought she was merely plighting her troth when a justice of the peace performed the marriage ceremony October 17.

White lives at Boonville, Ind., where the Folsoms formerly resided. He came here to see Miss Folsom and persuaded her to agree to an engagement. Then he took her to the justice's office and the marriage was performed. She returned to school thinking she was just engaged.

LINDENWOOD COLLEGE GIRL GETS MARRIAGE ANNULLED

Mary Folsom White, 18, Says She Did Not Realize Seriousness of Act at Time.

Mary Folsom White, 18 years old, daughter of E. M. Folsom, 7478 Washington avenue, was granted an annulment of her marriage to William C. White by Circuit Judge Wurdemann at Clayton yesterday. White was represented by counsel, but did not appear himself.

According to Miss Folsom, she was a student at Lindenwood college, and was spending a few days at home, last October, when White, whose home she said was in Indiana, called and took her for an automobile ride. They went to Belleville, she said, and obtained a license to wed. They were married by a Justice of the Peace there.

White, she alleged, took her to Belleville because of the 21-year age requirement in Missouri. She said they had lived apart since Oct. 17, the day of the wedding, and that she had not realized the seriousness of marriage.

GIRL TELLS COURT SHE DIDN'T KNOW SHE WAS MARRIED

Thought Ceremony Was Just a Pledge—Wedding Is Annulled.

The marriage of Mary Isabel Folsom, 18-year-old daughter of Dr. Ephriam Folsom, 7478 Washington boulevard, to William Clifford White, 25, of Boonville, Ind., was annulled by Circuit Judge Wurdeman at Clayton yesterday.

Miss Folsom, a former student at Lindenwood College, told the court that she thought she was simply making a pledge of betrothal when she and White appeared before a justice of the peace at Belleville, Ill., October 17.

Declaring that her home life and associations had limited her knowledge of worldly affairs, she said that it was not until some time afterwards that she learned that she had been one of the principals in a marriage.

Speaking of the trip to Belleville, she said:

"We secured a marriage license there, but he told me that it was to be used later when we were married. I didn't know that the justice of the peace was marrying us. And when we drove back home, William asked father if we could be engaged and he said no."

"William went back to Boonville that day and I returned to school."

Dr. Roemer Points Out Need of Fewer Laws, More Heart Culture

Preaches Annual Sermon at Lindenwood 'Day of Prayer.'

Rev. Dr. John L. Roemer preached the annual sermon last night at Lindenwood College, in the nationwide observance of the "Day of Prayer for Colleges," and pointed out the need of "fewer laws and more heart culture." Frank expression was given as to the relation to the modern "defects" of youth. This occurred in the course of the speaker's discussion of the topic, "Who knoweth what is good for man in this life?" (Eccl., 6:12).

Dr. Roemer opposed the popular view that the author of the book of Ecclesiastes was "a pessimist, cynic and dyspeptic," but said that this man was "a student, striving to find some satisfactory conclusion of the really good in life."

"One who deals with life must not see it all bad or all good. If he has only one side of the question, he is an incompetent philosopher of life. Ecclesiastes portrays the dark side of life, because it exists." The question of "the summum bonum of life," is asked as much today, the speaker said, as on the day it was first propounded. "What is good for man in this life? Societies, associations, clubs and organizations ad infinitum are putting forth their answers in the printed purposes of their endeavor."

After discussing the answer of "the practical man," who holds for wealth, admitting the untold benefits which may come "if the possessor is not a slave to, but master of his possessions," the speaker passed on to "the philosopher's" answer, in which he took up the cause of education, expressing some original views.

"Education is a great asset in life. To the educated man or woman the world does obeisance. The solvent of all the world's ills, according to the advocates of education, is a college training. But I must understand how extensive the education is. Some of the best mental products of colleges and universities have made the most undesirable citizens. Education must take man's three fold nature into consideration. Should the mind be the exclusive benefactor of college education, the result is a dwarfed development."

"Physical education is in no danger of being overlooked. A gentleman was telling me, not long since, that he had not made up his mind whether our colleges and universities were institutions of learning or athletic associations."

"The part of education we must not overlook, and I am afraid it sometimes is overlooked, is the moral development in our educational system. Moral development has a place, to be sure, in all institutions of learning, but has it the supreme place? If our moral thinking is as unsound as it is proclaimed, why blame parents and the lack of home training with all the modern 'defects' of youth?"

Considering "the legalist's" view of "the highest good," Dr. Roemer said:

"Law has only restraining powers. Thou shalt not never made a new spirit within man. Laws have been broken ever since first law was made, and they always will be. But that is no argument against the efficacy or necessity of statutes."

"We have laws on the statute books that people flaunt, and boast of their infractions. Going to jail for willful disobedience to the eighteenth amendment seems to be a badge of honor. Someone remarked that 'the elite of St. Louis were out in St. Charles.' The other confessing ignorance of the fact, this St. Louis gentleman said: 'I'm afraid you don't visit our County Jail.'"

"Laws do not always make for man's well being. Some of them have to be repealed, amended, permitted to enter a state of innocuous desuetude. Occasionally an obsolete law is resurrected against someone. It had passed into oblivion years before; the Legislature was possibly so ashamed of it they wouldn't give it a decent burial. We need fewer laws, and more heart culture."

Finally the answer was given by the preacher, to gain "the highest good" by associating this life with eternity, with God, and with Christ.

About 35 members of the St. Louis Lindenwood College Club were guests of the club's president, Mrs. Joseph White, at her residence, 7516 Washington boulevard, Tuesday afternoon, February 16, making a change from the customary meetings each month at the Forest Park Hotel. An informal program was given, at which Mrs. W. K. Roth concluded an address on her tour of the Mediterranean countries, and showed some keepsakes brought home from that trip. Mrs. John L. Roemer spoke briefly to the club, telling of the college's growth and prosperity, and the plans for the centennial in 1927. A silver offering was taken for the Sibley memorial scholarship. There was a prettily appointed tea-table in yellow and white, Lindenwood's colors, at which Mrs. Frank Koenke and Mrs. Leonard Scott, the two vice-presidents, assisted in serving. The next meeting, on March 16, will be the annual "guest day" when it is planned to have St. Louis girls now attending Lindenwood present, if their studies will permit.

MORAL LIFE IN DANGER, COLLEGE HEAD FEARS

In the development of youth mentally, physically and morally, the moral side is most in danger of sagging, according to the Rev. John L. Roemer, president of Lindenwood College, who spoke last night at the annual Day of Prayer service at the college.

LINDENWOOD COLLEGE HEARS DRAMA CRITIC

Richard Spamer Discusses Recent Plays Before Students.

Richard Spamer, music and drama critic of the GLOBE-DEMOCRAT, gave an address yesterday at Lindenwood College on recent plays. Among wholesome, lighter products, distinctively American in spirit, he mentioned "Charm," "New Brooms" and "The Show Off." Plays of every-day people, of types known to everybody, have a universal appeal, he said. He advised the students to write such plays, if they could.

In more serious plays, Spamer analyzed "Hamlet" for its "indecision"; "The Rivals" and "The School for Scandal," in which old-time comedies the problem of the actor was to "put himself in the costume of a style long past, and then act natural."

Much of his talk was taken up with "The Miracle," which had been attended by practically all the students, and concerning which they asked him many questions. He said that an entire absence of fanaticism was necessary to get the right impression of "The Miracle," which was a work of art primarily. He said that the production was the most impressive thing that he had ever seen, and the building of the wonderful scenic effects was "The Miracle's" highest point of achievement.

Miss Virginia Foristel of Foristel, Mo., 18, will be graduated this spring from Lindenwood College, the youngest of a class of twenty-three members. She will receive an A. B. degree.

The unusualness of Miss Foristel's finishing college at such an early age is attributed partly to her having skipped two grades, but more especially to the early training which she received from her mother, who had formerly been a school teacher.

Miss Foristel was graduated from the Wentzville, Mo., High School at 14. She then took a two-year college course at Central Wesleyan College, Warrenton, Mo.

Besides being the youngest member of her class, Miss Foristel won other laurels in campus activities. She is vice president of the senior class, vice president of the International Relations Club and also is a member of the Student Government Board.

Lindenwood Star Called Greatest Woman Cage Player

Title Given Miss Alma Wilson by Dr. Briggs Because of Her Deadly Shooting and Ability to Play Any Position.

Alma Wilson, freshman, is leader of the Lindenwood College basketball players who are practicing for the foul shot tournament of all women's colleges, sponsored by the American Athletic Association, to be held within the next two weeks. A representative team will be selected at each college, on the basis of the most throws out of sixty.

Miss Wilson was rated a champion basket-ball shooter last year. Playing at Greenfield (Mo.) High School, she scored 651 baskets during the season. During Tournament Week at Springfield, Mo., she made a record of 99 points, or more than twice as many as any boy playing in the tournament. Dr. Arthur E. Briggs, one of the four men who originated basket ball for women, pronounced her "the greatest woman player since the beginning of the game," because of her ability to play any position on the team and her deadly shooting.

LINDENWOOD STUDENTS HEAR L. F. SMITH

Educator Stresses Values of Community Since Leadership.

Possible leadership in home communities as the destiny of Lindenwood College girls was suggested by Lansing F. Smith, chairman of the Board of Directors of the American Educational Society, last night in a vesper service address on "Leadership" in Roemer Auditorium at Lindenwood. The service was patriotic, observing Washington's Birthday. Hymns and other musical numbers were of a national character. Tricolor bunting decorations and a large flag recognized the national holiday.

The speaker took a recent personality, the late Dr. Russell H. Conwell, as his chief example of leadership. He contrasted this man, who gave away over $7,000,000 and died poor, with other millionaires, also dying recently, who kept their wealth until death.

Among these was Duke, the tobaccoist, whose very large gifts, changing the name of old Trinity to Duke University, all were legacies in his will, the donor missing the life-pleasure of giving, which he might have had. Another comparison was made with the career of the late Frank A. Munsey, and the great fortune he amassed through publishing Munsey's Magazine and continually purchasing more newspapers and administering them.

Another mentioned was the late John I. Beggs, former resident of St. Louis, the great traction magnate. Smith traced the career of each of these men, showing how they spent their money, what they did with their lives, and their touch on humanity. Then he told the story of Conwell, from the time he started out as a soldier boy, how he became a lawyer and a minister, serving eminent pulpits, founding Temple University at Philadelphia, the Samaritan Hospital, and other benefactions. "Which one of these," the speaker asked, "made the most lasting impression on the world, and the best use of his funds and his time? Was it Dr. Conwell, who gave away seven or eight millions and died with a mortgage on his home, or was it any of these other men who kept on amassing, up to thirty or forty millions?"

MONMOUTH GIRL AT LINDENWOOD WRITES A SONNET

Miss Permella Donaldson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Donaldson of Monmouth, who is a student in Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Missouri, has lately composed a sonnet which she called: "All The World's a Friend." The main idea of the poem is summarized in the last two lines as:

"Then take the world a friend sincere to be,
And all of life's long journey will be glee."

The sonnet has recently been published in the Lindenwood College paper. This signifies that it is exceptionally good because this paper gives space to only the very best things which are produced throughout the college year.

The poem in full follows:

ALL THE WORLD'S A FRIEND
By Permella Donaldson
With truant time I dance
 along the way,
As days go by they each
 seem best to me,
For friends we meet, and for the time to see,
And sip the joy of friendship
 while we may;
Then leave with hope to meet ere dies the day,
But through these transient meetings runs a plea
That one I'll find a perfect friend to be,
But none as yet have come with whom to stay.
And now, as o'er the world
 I go to find
This fair, elusive phantom of my dreams,
I see in all, dire fault that blighting seems,
And falls below the ideal of my mind,
Then take the world a friend sincere to be,
And all of life's long journey will be glee.

Miss Ransom's many friends at Lindenwood were very glad to welcome her back after her illness at home and to have her resume her work. She is also a member of the junior class, whose graduation will take place when Lindenwood will celebrate its hundredth anniversary:

FAITH

By Mary Margaret Ransom
When I have learned to see through grief's black guise
A far-flung faith, essence of life worth while;
And suddenly, from shattered
dreams grown wise,
Perceive the heart of heav'n in just a smile;
When I have learned that doubt may not long live
Where love with tolerance is tem-per'd well;
That happiness means ever but to give,
To give for joy alone, and not to sell;
When I have learned not even love's desire
May bridge the gulf that lies
'tween soul and soul,
Another toward the ever distant
That one, by faith alone, may hope to fire
Another toward the ever distant goal;
Then you, beloved, will know I understand,
And smiling, gently clasp my waiting hand.

Lindenwood Centennial.

Dr. and Mrs. John L. Roemer of Lindenwood College are not going abroad this summer, however much they might like to go, for they will have plenty to do at home, because in May, 1927, will be celebrated the centennial of Lindenwood College, the oldest college for women in the United States. It is a far cry from the Lindenwood of today, when the young women ride back and forth in comfortable limousines, to that May day 100 years ago, when on horseback or in stage the girls had to journey, not only from the station, but from their own homes. Maj. George C. and Mary Easton Sibley were the founders, and full honor will be done to their memory next year, alumnae from every state in the union coming back to their alma mater for the homecoming celebration. A perfect paradox is Lindenwood, for, although it is 100 years old in all that goes to the making of a college, it is as up to date, except in tradition and valuable experience, as if it were celebrating its first anniversary.

The annual announcement party for the May Queen at Lindenwood College will be Friday night. Dr. and Mrs. John L. Roemer have sent out invitations for a dinner dance in Jubilee Hall at 6:30 o'clock. The queen was elected last Wednesday by ballot of the students, but the result will not be known until this party, when the new queen will be formally presented, with her five attendants, by Mrs. Roemer. The queen must be a senior. Her maid of honor will be in all probability a junior; she will have two sophomore and two freshman attendants in her court.

Hindenburg Quotes Lincoln's Democracy Ideal, Dr. Jaekkh Says

Present Regime Re-Establishment of Liberties Sought in 1848, He Avers.

President von Hindenburg of Germany, quoting Abraham Lincoln as his guide, was one of the figures in "The New Germany" which Dr. Ernest Jaekkh of Berlin presented in an address to the students of Lindenwood College yesterday morning. Dr. Jaekkh said that on taking leave of his President in Berlin, just before coming to this country, Hindenburg had earnestly quoted to him, in German, Lincoln's ideal for "a new birth of freedom, that the government of the people, by the people and for the people shall not perish from the earth." Dr. Jaekkh declared that the present regime is a re-establishment of the liberties for which Germans sighed in vain in 1848, and for which they emigrated in such large numbers at that time to America.

Visits Lindenwood.

Dr. Jaekkh, who is touring this country under the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, went to Lindenwood between trains, on his way from St. Louis westward. He was guest of the International Relations Club of the college, under the leadership of Miss Mary Olson, professor of history. Members of the club plied him with questions, prominent among which was the political status of women in Germany.

To this he replied that 10 per cent of the representation in the Reichstag consists of women and that women are holding positions of importance in the various bureaus, particularly in one of the departments of education, where a woman is at the head.

Feeling Toward Americans.

He was asked the pointed question, "What feeling do Germans have toward Americans?"

Dr. Jaekkh paused at this, and after some thought replied: "They have many feelings, of different sorts. First they feel, I may say, envy, to think that you are so well favored and so prosperous. Then they have admiration, that you have done so well. They have also thankfulness, for it is an American, Gen. Dawes, that saved Germany's existence."

At the request of the student body Dr. J. L. Roemer suspended studies from 1 to 2 o'clock following luncheon in order that the students might listen for another hour to Dr. Jaekkh, continuing their interrogations until he had to leave for his train.

Believes in Pacifism.

Unlike Americans, the Berlin professor was not in the least afraid of the word "pacifism." He used it boldly and frequently. "Pacifism" is being advocated by the military men of his country. "They know," he said, "that Germany has really disarmed. They have set their faith in peace, not in militarism. They believe in Emerson's saying, 'You will get what you prepare for.' Away with the saying, 'If you want to have peace prepare for war.' We want to prepare for peace, in order to have peace." The speaker told of the sewing machines now made in the Krupp factories.

Labor leaders, he said, have aroused the laboring classes to a sense of their political responsibility.

Human Touch to Peril.

A human touch was given as he described the peril in Germany from bolshevism, in the early days of Ebert's presidency. The disturbers would gladly have killed Ebert, and his safety was due, Dr. Jaekkh declared, to the great numbers of people, including many women and children, who thronged the streets about the palace. "The German bolshevists were not so bad as the Russians; they would not fire on defenseless women and children."

The "intelligentsia" and the German public generally, he said, have changed from the old days, in which "politics was a joke except in the aristocracy." "There is a new Germany, in which democracy ranks supreme—democracy in the sense of responsibility. The German people are convinced that the policy of right is more beneficial than the policy of might."

Jerseyville Receives Honors

At Lindenwood College

Miss Helen Massey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James S. Massey of Jerseyville, has carried away more than one honor at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo., where she is a Freshman. The state clubs elected officers at the first of the year and she was chosen as the vice-president of the Illinois Club. Incidentally, this peppy organization was the entertainer at a dance given a few weeks ago in the gym. Miss Massey also took part in a musical recital some time ago. She sang "Fallen Leaves" and "When Love Is Kind" in a very charming manner. The highest honor given to musical students has been conferred upon Miss Massey. She has become a pledge of the Alpha MuMu honorary musical sorority of Lindenwood. Membership to this requires a high grade in other studies as well as in musical work and Miss Massey is very fortunate in attaining this honor.

LINDENWOOD ANNUAL CATALOGUE OUT EARLY

Enrollment of 490 Students of Current Year Given by States.

Lindenwood College annual catalogue, 1926-1927, which is just issued, comes out one month earlier than in past years, because of preparations for the college centennial year, which begins January 1, 1927.

A paragraph, entitled "To Our Friends," appears as follows: "Lindenwood College is entering upon a new era of its history. Generous friends have been contributing largely to its support. In the past ten years over $1,000,000 has been expended in new buildings and equipment. The beginning of the New Lindenwood has fairly started. Greater things are yet to come and greater things yet to be done. To reach the goal of a great woman's college, well equipped and heavily endowed, will require the enlisting of all our friends in doing according to their means. If you have not remembered Lindenwood College in your will do so at once. The Board of Directors has established an annuity fund, which will enable donors, unable to do without an income, to receive a life annuity according to age. This is a safe and secure form of investment and gift to the college. Opportunity is also given for endowment of chairs in the college; $50,000 has been given to endow the Bible chair."

The enrollment of the 490 students of the current year is given by states, showing that the student body comes from twenty-nine different states. The state giving the largest number is Missouri, with 194; next comes Illinois, 73; 52 are from Kansas, 44 from Oklahoma, 27 from Arkansas, 23 from Nebraska, 17 from Iowa, 10 from Indiana, 8 from Mississippi, and other states in lesser numbers, even to one from the Philippine Islands.

Officers are also listed for the twenty-three Lindenwood College clubs of former students in twenty-three different city centers.

The curriculum of studies shows an advanced course in German, new for the coming year. Elementary German was introduced last fall for the first time since the war.

The next school year will open September 15 and commencement is to be on May 31, 1927. This last date is of special importance, as it will mark the climax of the Lindenwood centennial celebration.

DR. JAECKH ADDRESSES LINDENWOOD STUDENTS

The present political regime in Germany is a realization of the ideals sought in vain in 1848, resulting in large numbers of Germans migrating to St. Louis and other American cities. Dr. Ernst Jaekch, president of the Institute of Political Science in Berlin, said yesterday in a speech to the students at Lindenwood College.

DELIVERS ADDRESS ON "THE ENGLISH NOVEL"

Cyril Clemens of Webster Groves Gives Comprehensive Survey to Students at Lindenwood College.

"The English Novel" was the subject of a recent address given by Cyril Clemens of Webster Groves, at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo. Mr. Clemens gave a comprehensive survey of the English novel from its earliest beginning through the latter part of the nineteenth century. His purpose was to show that novels develop in steady progression, that all novels depend upon one another and that novels deal exclusively with human nature.

Mr. Clemens gave the time for the first novel as 1719, that being the publication date for Robinson Crusoe. Mr. Clemens said: "If one should ask you if 'Robinson Crusoe' and 'David Copperfield' had any connection you would probably laugh, but 'David Copperfield' is merely the flowering of Dickens based on the earlier novel of Defoe's."

The year 1741 was given as the next date in the development of the novel, that being the publication date for "Pamela" by Richardson. Mr. Clemens explained how Richardson's early training in letter writing brought into being "Pamela," which is a novel employing letters as a means of telling the story.

"Richardson's importance," said Mr. Clemens, "lies in the fact that while Defoe wrote exciting adventures he always attacked his characters from the outside. Richardson went deeper in to the analysis of human feelings and emotions."

Mr. Fielding was the next man of importance mentioned. His "Tom Jones," which appeared in 1750, combined both of the characteristics of Defoe and Richardson. Later in this century were Oliver Goldsmith, Samuel Johnson and Maria Edgeworth. Goldsmith contributed to the development by placing human nature in higher esteem than it had ever been before, Johnson by introducing the problem novel and Maria Edgeworth by her portrayal of the society of the time in its true colors, giving minute details that had not been considered before. Jane Austen, with her prime and precise style, was a contributor of this period and Mr. Clemens remarked that although her outlook was limited, she is considered by some of the critics as one of the greatest of the eighteenth century realists. To Scott was attributed the honor of having made historical characters really live in novels.

Mr. Clemens then mentioned the "Clumsy Horrible School" that took its name from the weirdness and melancholy aspect which the novels of Horace Walpole and Mrs. Radcliffe took. He showed how the influence of this school had its result in the creation of "Wieland," the first American novel written by Charles Brockden Brown and published in 1797. He then spoke of the work of Irving and Hawthorne, closing his address with a few remarks of Mark Twain. Being a cousin of this great writer, Mr. Clemens' remarks held a personal as well as a literary value.

"Mark Twain," he said, "has given us the full swing of life on the Mississippi in such a way that it will always live. It was a wonderful life and a life that can never be lived again, but it has been given to the world forever in the works of Mark Twain."

Lindenwood College Will Issue Centennial.

Lindenwood college catalogue book covers take on the vernal shade of green (having been brown hitherto), in the volume just issued which announces the college centennial. The catalogue is for 1926-27, and the centennial is to occur during the last week of May, 1927, culminating on commencement day, May 31, 1927.

One of the new courses announced in the catalogue is advance work in German, this language having been uncalled for in the college until the present year, when an elementary class was introduced. A total of 490 students in the present year is listed, coming from 29 states, in which Missouri and Illinois take the lead.

A beautiful new Viewbook is also issued, which contains a history of the college, from its founding by Maj. George C. Sibley and his wife, Mary Easton Sibley, in 1827.

ARMY OFFICER PRAISES
RED CROSS NURSES

Declares They Have Never Received Credit Due Them.

That enough credit has never been given to the American Red Cross nurse for her work in the war, was asserted by Col. John D. Paegelow, commanding officer of Scott Field, in an address to the students of Lindenwood College, yesterday morning. He said that he had seen these American Red Cross nurses working "up to their knees in mud" on one case after another which demanded their attention, and they would work until they died or became fatally ill. Four such nurses whom he knew died of pneumonia.

"And sometimes, when you see the Salvation Army people singing on a street corner, you may have laughed," said Col. Paegelow. "I have done so, but I will never again make any fun of them, after what I have seen of their courage under fire." He told of a night of retreat, when reaching a certain point, he found all gone except one M. P., "and him dodging behind a tree to escape the German shells." Col. Paegelow was faint with hunger, having had no food all day, and this solitary guard directed him a few yards, down another road, to a barn with its roof shot away, where he thought he would find food. Two Salvation Army girls were "making doughnuts with bottles as a rolling-pin, and cooking chocolate and coffee in discarded tin cans." They were fearful that the Colonel was "going to throw them out," but when he said that they were welcome to stay and he only wished something to eat, they asked him to "go hustle a tin can, because they had no cups." Then he feasted on coffee and doughnuts.

A vivid instance was narrated of a French woman's gratitude. At the place where Col. Paegelow was to be billeted, his aid came back to him, saying that the woman refused to receive him. The Colonel went to investigate, and to say to the woman that if she did not desire to give them lodging, they would go elsewhere. But her motive was entirely different. She was on crutches. She invited him in and after seating him in her parlor, she said: "I did refuse your orderly, because I don't want him here. I want to serve you myself. I have lost four sons in the war. I want to show my gratitude to the Americans and serve you myself."

MISS BERTHA PEPPERDINE.

Miss Ida Hoeflin to Be 1926 May Queen at Lindenwood College

School's Highest Social Honor Goes for First Time to St. Charles Girl.

Lindenwood College's May Queen for 1926 will be Miss Ida Hoeflin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Hoeflin of St. Charles. Her selection was announced at a dinner dance given by Dr. and Mrs. John L. Roemer Friday night. Coronation of the Queen will take place May 29.

On Friday night also were announced the names of the Queen's five attendants. The maid of honor, a junior, will be Miss Bertha Pepperdine. Misses Emma Monier and Louise Cochran are the maids chosen from the sophomore class; Misses Mary Dean Scott and Doris Davis, from the freshman class.

Dark-Haired Maids.

The Queen and her entire court, with one exception, are "dark-haired maids," according to Homeric phrase, and four out of the six girls have a coiffure of unshorn locks.

Miss Hoeflin is the first St. Charles girl ever chosen to this highest social honor of Lindenwood. A tall, slender brunette of winsome manner, her selection evoked the wildest enthusiasm. This new Queen fills the modern college girl ideal in being identified with many campus activities. She is president of the Lindenwood Players; she took the role of the "hero" in the recent annual play of the Lindenwood Athletic Association; she excels in the "physical ed" department, where she is requisitioned as an assistant in class work, and she knows something about home economic. She ranks well in her studies, and will receive her degree in June.

Two other Missouri girls, Miss Pepperdine of Neosho and Miss Monier of Kansas City, are in the list. Miss Pepperdine's sister was a graduate of last year. Miss Monier's father, Roy Monier, was formerly a member of the Missouri State Tax Commission.

Miss Louise Cochran's parents live in Keokuk, Ia. She is a niece of W. H. Maxwell of St. Louis, vice president in charge of the Wabash Railroad.

One Golden-Haired Girl.

The only golden-haired girl in the group, Miss Mary Dean Scott of Muskogee, Ok., is a daughter of Dr. Hugh Scott, who is in charge of the United States Veterans' Hospital at Muskogee. Nebraska is represented by Miss Doris Davis, whose home is in Broken Bow.

Elaborate spring decorations in silver and deep green fringed tissue paper veiled the ceiling. In the center of the hall was a circle of "moonlight" illumination, within which "Springtime in Hellas" was danced by ten graceful girls, all other lights being extinguished.

After Mrs. Roemer had announced the names, even the queen herself not being aware beforehand, two green-and-silver heralds, Misses ~~Martha~~ McClintock and Martha Walker, led the pageant to a throne in silver cloth with trimmings of green. Following them, in white tulle, were two flower girls, Misses Mildred Wilmans and Catherine Day. Then under a canopy of green, borne by the four maids, walked the queen and her maid of honor. Small jade feather fans were given as souvenirs.

For the program the dancers were Misses Patty Ryan, Louise Moffett, Martha Smith, Kathryn Walker, Laura Lee Thomas, Marion Suleeba, Marguerite Wanger, Alice Lee Waddell, Eunice Brennan and Virginia Brown, with Genevieve Rowe as accompanist.

Miss Jennie Fay Stewart sang "Snow Flakes," by Cowen, and Miss Elizabeth Burke sang "The Last Dance," by Harriet Ware, with violin obbligato by Carmelita Sweet. A comedy was presented by Misses Frances Baggett, Audrey Richert and Willa O'Bannon. Miss Gertrude Isidor of the faculty played a violin number.

Praises Achievements of Lindenwood College Dur- ing Its 100 Years of Life.

A Lenten vesper sermon in Roemer auditorium at Lindenwood College was given last night by Rev. Dr. W. C. Timmons, pastor of the First Congregational Church, with the topic, "The Meaning and Value of Lent." Reference was made by Dr. Timmons to Lindenwood's centennial in 1927.

"I congratulated you all upon the wonderful history, with its splendid achievements, that Lindenwood College has had during the past 100 years. For a school to serve for one century, as you have served, is to make a lasting contribution to our national life, not only in an educational way, but in those more objective realities, our social standards, our homes and a nobler citizenship."

"Segment in Life of Jesus."

Dr. Timmons spoke of the forty days of Lent as "a segment in the life of Jesus that fully epitomizes his Messiahship." He said that much has been missed in the past in non-conformist churches by not observing Lent in its larger spiritual significance. "Today all our churches are finding that such an intensely religious period should not be passed through without most sincere reflections."

"The generally accepted meaning of Lent is that it is a time for self-denials. Many decide that they will not eat chocolates, some men forego tobacco, others quit dancing and theater going. There is an infinite variety of such abstemious ways. Far be it from me to discredit any of this; the Lord knows we need to take ourselves in hand and starve out many of our physical appetites. But, aside from these negative observances of Lent, I believe there is the more positive emphasis we are called upon to make, as the Lenten period offers to us the finest opportunity for spiritual reflection, cultivation and development."

Spiritual Season.

"The larger spiritual meaning in the keeping of Lent is just this—it takes our lives into a spiritual season that means springtime. I think another and better name for Lent would be 'The Springtime of the Soul.' The name 'Lent' comes from the German word, 'Lenz,' which means spring. By virtue of the derivation of its name, and the identity with the spring season of the year, it leads us into this sort of an interpretation."

Symbolic suggestions of things that "spring" may bring to the soul were: "The clearing away of the dead of winter," of things that have clogged life, such as "doubts, fears, prejudices, ill-wills, selfishness"; "the loosing of the icy grip of winter," making hearts receptive, and the "breaking up of the soil for the planting," the dedication to Christian service.

"After Lent comes Easter. And if Lent means the shadows, Easter means the dawn; if Lent means the suffering, Easter means the victory; if Lent means the plowing and planting, cultivation and development, showers and sunshine, Easter means the promise of a rich fruitfulness."

MRS. HUTCHINGS GIVES TALK AT LINDENWOOD

Art Critic of Globe-Democrat Points Out Nature's Beauties.

"Seeing Nature Through the Eyes of the Artist" was the topic of an address at Lindenwood College, in Roemer auditorium, yesterday by Mrs. Emily Grant Hutchings, art critic of the GLOBE-DEMOCRAT. Mrs. Hutchings showed how art studies may open the eyes of those who may never execute pictures, but who will be enabled to see beauties in nature never noticed before. In illustrating, an anecdote was told among country people concerning the painting of cows by Volkert, with the idea that this artist, in painting Holstein cattle, instead of making them black and white, "saw" them in the sunlight, purple and pink. Soon these country people came to see these colors in the landscape, as the sun brought them out, and an aged woman declared, "I never before knew that things were so beautiful."

Original paintings were exhibited, in the teaching of how to "see" light. A landscape by Bundy, showing a wood interior, with inter-reflection of light; a marine by Mitchell, giving tones in the sky and in rippled water; an Indian figure painting by Couse, showing effect of firelight, and a moonlight study by Wuerpel were among the works shown.

A painting by Emily Summa showed what frost does to different trees. In a Kitchell landscape was seen the broad, massed effect of autumn. In a Berninghaus painting was seen the use of cottonwood trees for their decorative effect, while Emerson, in a painting of pure fancy, used trees to express emotion. A "mood" painting by Summa used loosely-painted trees for decoration. "God in the Clouds" was the subject of a painting by Berdanier.

"After correct observation of material forms," Mrs. Hutchings said, "and the part which light plays, the artist teaches the more elusive facts of mental nature, decorative effects, mood, imagination and reverence. The artist teaches us that God is in all nature."

Welcome for New Members.

Eighteen St. Louis girls who are attending Lindenwood College were given a welcome by the St. Louis Lindenwood College club, at the Forest Park hotel as prospective future members, Tuesday afternoon. The members were Misses Sharlin Brewster, Clara Bowles, Euneva Lynn, and Jennie Lay Stewart. Miss Isidor, violin instructor, also played. There was a reading by Miss Frances Baggett, a piano number by Miss Marguerite Hersch, and solos by Miss Clara Bowles.

Sothorn Proposes Drama Be Saved by Endowment Funds

Actor Tells How Thespian Art Can Be Kept from Financial Ruin.

Three great needs of the American theater, if the spoken drama is to succeed, were declared by E. H. Sothorn, yesterday, in an address at Lindenwood College, to be: Such endowment or control of the theater as to enable plays to be presented without fear of financial disaster, an educated public taste and absolutely fearless and capable criticism.

"The ideal theater," said Sothorn, "should be one which puts before the people constantly, whether there be any pecuniary profit or not, what is noblest and best. American taste today is very low, but it may be elevated. Seeing what is noblest and best may induce a taste for it, and the desire to see what is uplifting may become habitual."

He told of advice given to his wife (Julia Marlowe) early in her career, by an aged Englishman, who asked her "every day to read a beautiful play and go to see a beautiful picture." She has kept up this daily practice. Reference was again made to Mrs. Sothorn, whose "beautiful voice," as he said, is well known. Sothorn said that she had strained the middle register of her voice as a child, playing in the theater, and her voice became thin. It was only by instruction from a teacher of music, and real labor, that she "made" her middle register.

Commends French School.

Sothorn told of Cissy Loftus, the actress, listening to him through a reading, then asking earnestly, "How many teeth have you?"

The French school of acting was commended for teaching that "the first office of an actor is to make himself heard, and to let his hearers know what he says." Sothorn contrasted the keen appreciation of the stage which is felt even by domestic servants in France, with the apathy which was experienced, for example, when some of the foremost actors sought to give in New York a series of benefit productions for providing funds for one of the bays of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

This aptitude for the theater in Germany, France and on the European Continent generally, was attributed by Sothorn to the government-supported management to be found in many of the large European cities. He saw encouragement in America in the fact that universities are so largely taking up the movement for the best plays, and that 500 theaters for this purpose have been erected. Nevertheless he felt sorry to see the closing, in the last year, of 2000 theaters which had hitherto given the spoken drama.

Some of these have been converted into moving-picture houses. Sothorn said that he was not opposed to the pictures, and he liked a good picture himself, but he did not like to see the actor supplanted by "scientific inventions." "The drama that we have loved," said

Sothorn, "that we have built our lives on, is down and out."

"Little Theater" Movement.

An exception was made of the "Little Theater" movement, which, however, is "obliged to practice economies, some of which have not been very beneficial to the theater." A municipal theater, where there would be a definite standard, seemed to Sothorn the best solution. He favored government support, provided the theater be kept out of politics. Hard study is required for the actor to perfect himself, and he believed that the integrity and honesty of such work should not be forced to decline.

Even today, Sothorn said, acting is not as good as it used to be. "It is far behind Edwin Booth." Not more than twenty really great actors, Sothorn said, have lived since the time of Shakespeare, ten men and ten women. "But acting may be good, beneficial, without being great."

He made an objection to public performances when one never can tell beforehand whether the production is going to be uplifting or detrimental. "There is no superintendence; nobody cares. They just go to the show." When he was a boy Sothorn said, people didn't go to "show." They went to "a play," or "to hear Mr. and Mrs. Kendall," or "Mr. and Mrs. Bancroft," or others

Sothorn Talks to Lindenwood College.

Students of Lindenwood College Tuesday heard with great pleasure an address on "The Theater" by E. H. Sothorn, who talked on his decline of the spoken drama, largely because of "scientific inventions" which seem to be superseding it. He told of the "play of puppets" put on in New York, by which "color indicates emotion," and other devices are used to "dehumanize" the production. Many interesting stories were told of his wife (Julia Marlowe) and her life-long devotion to Shakespeare and the uplifting of the stage. He declared that in Chicago and elsewhere he and Mrs. Sothorn had demonstrated that even children can become intensely interested in Shakespearean plays. He urged that some higher motive than mere random entertainment be given to the theater, and quoted a critic of the past generation: "It will be an evil day when art comes to mean caprice, and the artist performs in order to get money."

This was the last concert of the season preliminary to the Easter vacation, which will begin Wednesday noon.

Brewster, 122 East Locust street, who is attending Lindenwood college, St. Charles, Mo., represented her school at a college club benefit at the Shubert-Rialto theatre at St. Louis on Monday, March 15. The benefit is an annual affair under the auspices of the College club of St. Louis, and during the intermissions of the play, the representatives of the leading colleges respond with school songs and yells. The Lindenwood quartet of which Miss Brewster is a member, sang two school songs, and the other Lindenwood girls present joined in on the choruses.

The play this year was "Old English," in which George Arliss played the leading part. After the play, the quartet and four members of the cast were guests of honor at a dinner at the Chase Hotel, given by Dr. and Mrs. John L. Roemer, the president and his wife of Lindenwood.

AMARILLO GIRL TAKES PART IN COLLEGE MUSICAL COMEDY

(Special to The Globe)

St. Charles, Mo., March 26.—Miss Eugenia Whittington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Whittington of Amarillo, Texas, recently took part at Lindenwood college, St. Charles, Missouri, in "Patricia How Could You," a delightfully clever musical comedy given by the members of the Lindenwood Athletic association. Much of the success of the comedy should be given to Miss Whittington, who as chairman of the costume committee, had a big responsibility. The work required in designing and supervising the making of the original and most colorful costumes was great enough for a person with far more experience.

Aside from her work on the costumes Miss Whittington took part in two of the prominent choruses of the production. To many at Lindenwood Eugenia is a marvel, for in spite of all her busy moments she finds ample time to keep extremely near the top in scholastic standing. For the last two years she has taken part in many activities at Lindenwood.

The Easter vacation Miss Whittington intends to spend in Liberty, Missouri, where she will visit Miss Mary Banks, who is also a Lindenwood student.

MARION SULEEBA IN SCHOOL EVENT

Miss Marion Suleeba, daughter of Mrs. Ada Suleeba of Decatur, who is attending Lindenwood college in St. Charles, Mo., was one of a group of charming girls who danced "The Dance of Hellas," before the May Queen, Miss Ida Hoeflin, at the Queen's recent announcement party in Butler Gymnasium. After the Queen and her attendants of pages and flower girls who were met by Mrs. John L. Roemer, wife of the president, and the Dean of Students, had been seated, a delightful program was presented. Among the numbers was "The Dance of Hellas."

LINDENWOOD GIRLS MAKE OWN EASTER COSTUMES

Easter costumes were worn yesterday by a number of students of Lindenwood College, the making of which had been part of their training in the "clothing" classes of the home economics department. Coats, dresses and suits were made by them.

Among the creations which each girl completed were the following: Miss Betty Bramlitt made and wore an English pinchback sport coat, cut from a length of white and gray English tweed. Miss Dorothy Towers wore a Scotch plaid fur-trimmed wrap. Miss Agnes Willbrand's achievement was a novelty flannel tailored coat in ashes of roses shade.

Miss Delta Neumann's dress coat was of tan flannel, with a flare. Miss Lorraine Lyster made a green rep utility coat, and Miss Anna Vere Brookside a dress wrap of taupe bengaline. A coat of green velvett was made by Miss Louise Clough.

Those wearing hand-tailored suits which they had made were Misses Agnes Boschert in a Scotch tweed, Miss Marguerite Talnter in a navy blue serge, Miss Marjorie Willis in a tan serge and Miss Bessie McNary in a black bengaline.

MISS RICHERT A LEADING DRAMATIST AT LINDENWOOD

St. Charles, Mo.,—Miss Audrey Richert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Richert, 113 West 7th Street, has been receiving much recognition for her fine work in the Dramatic Department of Lindenwood College, where she is a sophomore. Miss Richert, in her freshman year, was initiated into the honorary club of the department. The Linden-Players. As part of the initiation the new member appeared in a very clever little play, "The Ghosts." This year she had the important role of "Ronny" in "You and I," given by the Players. Her fine characterization of the slangy flapper who was, at the test, a true woman was an outstanding role in the play. In a recital on March 4, Miss Richert gave one of the most difficult interpretations which has been heard at Lindenwood, "L'Aiglon," by Edmund Rostand.

A lighter role was taken by her in "The Fan and Two Candlesticks," a playlet given at the St. Patrick's party, at which the May Queen and her attendants were announced. Miss Richert will give her graduating recital in May and receives a certificate in Oratory this June. She is a member of the Athletic Association and Kansas Club as well as the Lindenwood Players.

Miss Richert also gave a number at the Easter concert, Sunday night, March 28, which was the closing event before the Easter vacation. Her reading was "The Lost Word," by Van Dyke.

A FINE LECTURE

Miss Linneman Describes the Missouri Capitol

Miss Alice Linnemann of the School of Art of Lindenwood College delivered to a large and appreciative audience in the High School Chapel on Thursday evening, her lecture on The Art of the Missouri Capitol.

From members of the Capitol Commission she has secured slides which she used to illustrate the descriptions she gave of the architecture, sculptures, and mural paintings of this magnificent building which ranks among the finest of the state capitols of the country.

In a very clear and comprehensive manner, Miss Linnemann gave to her hearers a part of a great fund of information on the subject which she has been securing with much careful research during a number of years.

While we learn of our American millionaires, after having amassed a colossal fortune turning their attention to the assembling of rare and beautiful work of arts, we rejoice that a part of the world's artistic wealth is now housed on our side of the Atlantic, and that we in an industrial and a materialistic age progress is made toward a higher appreciation of what is fine and beautiful.

When we contemplate the Missouri Capitol, built almost entirely of materials found within the borders of the state, enriched by the skill of the greatest living artists, we feel a glow of patriotic pride that Missouri has erected a building worthy of her history and traditions and one that magnificently typifies the vision of her future.

Miss Linneman described the approach to the building, the long flight of steps on either side of which are placed the heroic bronze figures representing the two rivers the Missouri and the Mississippi, the six Corinthian columns rising in majestic beauty and supporting the entablature on which is carved in Latin the State motto, "Let the Will of the People Be the Supreme Law." Within the portic is the bronze door 13x18 feet, the largest of the modern era, opening into the grand stairway, the widest enclosed stairway in the world, that leads to the rotunda under the dome. Here on the soil of our own state is beauty that recalls beauty that was Greece and the grandeur that was Rome.

Miss Linneman devoted a large part of her lecture to the mural paintings. She told in detail of the large canvas that is placed over the entrance into the House, a picture of the World War, depicting every branch of the service. This picture is placed opposite a wall that carries beautiful stained glass windows in beauty worthy of a European cathedral, which flood the house with a mellow light. She described the four panel shaped paintings of the Senate chamber, the work of Richard Miller, a native of St. Louis, who received for his work the sum of $24,000.

On either side of the desk and platform, carved in Missouri oak, on the right is Jefferson, receiving Lewis and Clark, on their return from the expedition across the continent, and on the left, Benton, the champion of the west, at the conclusion of his great speech in the St. Louis court house in 1849.

She told of the Governor's reception room, oval in shape, fitted with a handsome Persian carpet woven for the room, the walls lined with portraits of distinguished Missourians, among them Mark Twain and Eugene Field.

The history of the State is told in the lunettes that adorn the walls of the soldiers and sailors museum. Here are seen the battles of Wilson Creek, and Westport of the war between the States painted by N. C. Wyeth, of Massachusetts, the Battle of Sacramento won by Doniphan and the occupation of Havana in the Spanish-American war.

Miss Linneman gave in detail the decorations of the interior of the dome by the greatest living British painter, Brangwyn. She held her audience to the closest attention and inspired them with an earnest desire to make a pilgrimage to the Mecca of our State to see for ourselves with a seeing eye and clearer vision this beautiful capitol which is a thing of beauty and a joy to every patriotic citizen of Missouri.

LINDENWOOD TO HAVE CENTENNIAL

Lindenwood College for Girls, at St. Charles, Mo., is looking forward eagerly to the great Centennial celebration which will be held in May, 1927. At least three Decatur young women are especially interested in this celebration, namely, Mrs. W. Curtis Busher and Miss Dorothy Mae White, both of whom are former Lindenwood students, and Miss Elizabeth Tait, who is attending the college this year.

GIVEN CALENDARS.

Each student has been presented a delft blue calendar for 1926, with border embellishment in high hatted men and hoopskirt girls which brought into the imagination the scenes of the founding of Lindenwood in 1827. Medallion portraits of Mr. George C. Sibley and his wife, Mary Easten Sibley are on the calendar which invites all students back for the celebration of next year. In the March issue of the "Bulletin," the student publication, appears a comparison of the method in which the girls came to the college when it was founded a hundred years ago; "One hundred years ago, a few girls came on horseback and by stage to live and study at the first Lindenwood, made of logs from the forest in which it was founded."

Mrs. T. W. Pitner and son, William, have returned from Rochester, Minn., where they have passed several weeks. Mrs. Pitner underwent a minor operation at the Mayo Brothers' Clinic and is getting along nicely.

Cooking Is Now a Science, with Little Excuse for Failure

Modern Equipment, Used with Knowledge of Home Economics, Removes Art from Field of Guesswork.

By DELTA NEUMANN,
Home Economics Department, Lindenwood College.

Why make a failure of cooking during this modern age? If a failure is made, is it not due more or less to carelessness, to haste or to thoughtlessness? A failure in cooking in olden times, when the only means of cooking was over some open fire or in some poorly constructed oven or stove, could be overlooked because they knew nothing of modern equipment. The cooking done in those days was guesswork, but today, due to the careful experiments and study of home economists, it is no longer guesswork but is a real art and science. Every housewife should consider it as such, and she should regard cooking as a pleasure. Is it not through food that we eat, live and have our being? So why not let everyone consider it seriously?

Let us first consider taking the guesswork out of cookery, from a psychological standpoint. We need properly cooked food in order to keep our bodies in good condition and able to carry on the life processes. The housewife is directly responsible for the cooking of food. If she does not do it herself, she should consider it a pleasure to prepare food for her family. She should take an interest in her work. Every food that is cooked contains the characteristics of the preparer. This is the reason one should consider it a pleasure. Many women hate the idea of preparing a meal, and when they attempt the task their frame of mind is such that the resulting product is a failure. They have an "I don't care" attitude; anything will do, just so I have something on the table. How could a food, then, prepared while one is in such a frame of mind, be a success? Can you not think of families in which this very thing is carried on? One rarely considers the psychology of the task, but that is probably one thing that counts a great deal.

Proportions to Use.

When you prepare a dish, do you stop to consider the proportions to use? Or do you go to the cabinet and just "dump" things together? Nothing in cooking is more important than to have the proper quantities of ingredients in the dish you are cooking. For every spoonful of one ingredient you add to a food there is a certain amount of the others you must add, or a failure will result. This was found to be especially true in the experimental cookery class. In fact, it was found that ingredients and amount of each to be used was the one important thing. In biscuits, for instance, if too much shortening is used, the product is yellow and has a peculiar taste. If too much liquid is used, the product is tough and very unsatisfactory. The same thing was found true of the other problems, and it was especially true of cakes.

There is a standard for everything that is cooked. Every person has a standard in her mind of what the finished product should be, in appearance, texture, color and flavor. One should study the standard and then try to make the product as near standard as possible, allowing of course for individual differences. Everyone does not agree, it is true, but one should work out her own problem, and should experiment until the product reaches her ideal.

Necessity of Recipes.

It is extremely important that the housewife should accumulate a few recipes that are so exact that failure to attain a certain result is impossible. In reality, how few are the dishes of this sort that appear on the average table! The method of preparing them should be made not only exact but beyond the possibility of improvement, when agreement has been reached as to the character of the dish desired and the money to be expended for it. One should take a recipe from a cook book, that it is perfect. You must by all means test your recipe. This was found in class to be extremely important. For instance, several recipes from well-known cook books were tried and no bigger failure could have been made. What is more maddening than to take things for granted in a recipe and prepare the dish without the least bit of doubt, and find that the writer had given the recipe no more thought when publishing it, than you did when you selected it. The housewife should work out her own recipes by careful experiment, and then go by them. She should have the ingredients, mixture, time required to cook, very carefully studied out before she makes her ideal recipe on that food.

Not Set Rule.

Everyone that cooks realizes that it is quite possible to ruin a dish just by baking. This was quite often the case before oven thermometers and oven regulators were perfected. There is no one method of baking any given product, however, which can be expected to prove invariably superior to all others. Also the results of the baking operations are not exactly the same in different ovens of varying sizes and construction, even though the thermometer may record the same temperature in every case. When a range of temperatures is suggested as being suitable for baking any given product, choose the temperatures with the following principles in mind:

The larger sizes of loaves, rolls, muffins or potatoes, usually require lower temperature for longer periods than the smaller sizes, which must have higher temperatures for shorter periods, other things being equal. The composition of the batter or dough, too, governs the baking temperature to a large extent. The small, portable gas oven requires somewhat higher temperatures in order to secure the results attained in a larger oven by very moderate temperatures.

Regulators for Ovens.

The newest ovens are equipped with regulators which automatically control the heat. There is also the portable oven thermometer that can be bought and placed in the oven. The application of temperature rules to cooking is not merely a matter of interest to the theorist. It is something which really works out in practice every day. There are three main kinds of kitchen thermometers, the oven, the sugar, the deep fat frying.

The sugar thermometer has come to be almost indispensable in making candies, frosting and jellies. Grainy fudge and hard jellies are the results of overcooking, while "bad luck" with jelly is often due to cooking the syrup too little or too long. A thermometer of this sort is inexpensive, and should be in every home.

Side by side with the sugar thermometer goes the deep fat thermometer. The undesirable attributes of fried food are in many instances due to improper frying. The fat, perhaps, has not been hot enough and the food is soaked in grease, which makes it unpalatable and difficult of digestion. The deep fat and sugar thermometers may be identical, provided one registering over 400 degrees is chosen. For candy making, a thermometer above 310 degrees is seldom needed, while the frying thermometer occasionally goes up to 400 degrees.

Use of Scales.

The use of scales oftentimes prevents a failure. All materials should be carefully weighed. Even carefully trained workers are not always able to measure exactly, duplicated cups of flour or corn meal. To show how important weight really is, for instance, one-fourth of a cup of butter as ordinarily measured in a cup may be anywhere from 3 to 5 ounces, or may vary still more widely. The exactness therefore depends upon the scales, and not the cup measurement.

The process of mixture has much to do with the resulting product. In a cake, for instance, a given procedure should follow, as cream, butter and sugar; add the eggs, then milk and flour alternately. This is the general procedure in a cake. It is also wise to separate the white and yolk of an egg and add them separately, beating each until stiff.

The beating of a dough has much to do with the results sometimes. In muffins, one should not beat, but just barely mix the ingredients together. If doughs are beaten too much, it may make the product stiff.

Last but not least, the ingredients should always be fresh and of a good staple brand. There is a certain kind of flour which gives a better result in cakes, and another certain kind which gives a better result in other things.

To take the guesswork out of cookery, use your head, and take your time.

Dry Law, War and God Are Unjustly Abused, Dr. Roemer Declares

Says Parents Are Principally to Blame for Present Conditions.

"The Eighteenth Amendment, the War and the Almighty" are taking a good deal of abuse for existing faults among the young to which they should really not be accredited, asserted Dr. John L. Roemer, president of Lindenwood College, in an address last night on "The Present Generation," before the Kilwinning Chapter No. 50, Royal Arch Masons, in the Odeon Theater.

"The fault is in ourselves," said Dr. Roemer, after he had called attention to statistics showing that in England the criminal sustains "93 per cent chances of punishment for crime," but in America he has "95 per cent chances of escaping punishment."

"The present generation of young people is a popular topic," said Dr. Roemer. "Everybody is discussing the youth of today. They are so different in dress, in manners and in ideals from what they once were.

Baffling Youth.

"Youth today baffles the wisest philosophers, for there seems to be no authoritative standard of ethics. Yet the possibilities of the present generation are immeasurable."

The speaker reviewed the problems of present-day youth as social, economic and moral. "It is a generation without a home," he said. "The old-time home has passed away. In our complex civilization the cafeteria is displacing the family table, apartments are taking the place of separate residences, and in rearing children they are not kept at home, but are farmed out to the school and to movie pictures. The attitude of children has changed from obedience to command, and that of the parent from comradeship to commissariat. Edward Everett Hale wrote of the 'Man Without a Country'; a modern Hale could write of 'Youth Without a Home.' Modern civilization has orphaned the present generation."

Bandits Are Youngsters.

Reference was made to the youthfulness of modern bandits and criminals, whose only urge seems to be the "need of money and the necessity of getting it," and who are not in "holy fear" of punishment, because of a lack of moral courage in the public.

Older persons, Dr. Roemer said, have been creators of the problems now confronting society, and there must be, in order to solve these problems, a change of attitude toward responsibility, from helplessness to courage, and from indifference to concern. He declared that clubs, societies and the movies cannot be a substitute for home life. He told of the little boy, after a whipping from his often absent father, who whimpered that he had been chastised by "that man who stays at our house at nights."

Equitable Relation.

"There must be an equitable relation between income and outgo. Our greatest opportunity, the acquisition of wealth, may be our undoing. The giving of life for things which fail to enrich life will send us into bankruptcy. If the present generation is poverty stricken in the finer qualities of living, it is because we, the older people, are bereft of them. We have not related income with outgo. The grandest thing in the world is to make life while you acquire wealth."

Dr. Roemer spoke of the Foster Gang, once notorious in Cleveland. He had several times been called upon to officiate at funerals for members of this gang. He spoke of their physical and mental powers. "If they had devoted these fine qualities to better living, they would have been a blessing rather than a burden to society."

He characterized the church, the school and the society which trains in ideals as "life-saving stations of the day."

"They are well worth all they cost to maintain them. Without them chaos would prevail."

DR. J. L. ROEMER SPEAKS TO ROYAL ARCH MASONS

Desperadoes of an earlier day, the Foster Gang of Cleveland Ohio, were mentioned by Dr. John L. Roemer, president of Lindenwood College, in an address on "The Present Generation," last night at the Odeon, before the Kilwinning Chapter No. 50, Royal Arch Masons. Years ago, in Cleveland, he was sometimes called upon for the funerals of members of the Foster Gang, and he observed they were men of fine appearance and mental equipment.

"If such men had devoted their fine qualities to better living," he said, "they would have been a blessing rather than a burden to society."

TELLS GIRLS TO PAINT CHEEKS FROM INSIDE

State School Official Gives Health Talk at Lindenwood.

"Paint your cheeks from the inside," the girls of Lindenwood College were advised in a speech yesterday by Dr. Henry L. Curtis of Jefferson City, Physical Education Superintendent for the schools of Missouri. "You can distribute the color better. The school-girl complexion may come from various sources, but most of all through playing out of doors.

"The Venus de Milo and all the other Venuses were products of physical education in Greece. We can produce as good figures in Missouri as any of them in Greece. The human form can be perfected.

Don't think it is necessary to have one shoulder hunched up higher than the other.

"Besides that, physical exercise makes you healthy, and that makes you happy. Without health, we don't have length of days or efficiency. Those young ladies who aspire to a 23-inch waist and a 27-inch bust won't have a large enough engine to do very much work in the world. If you are going to do your share, you want to develop your health and strength.

"Sports bring out your character. There never was a man who cheated in business who hadn't cheated a thousand times before, in games. If you have learned to be honest in play, you will be honest also in business. A representative of a large mail order house told me he would not employ anybody from a certain school because, he said, 'The sports in that school are crooked.'"

JOSEPHINE HOLDREN WRITES ON "LOAFING" IN COLLEGE PAPER; FINE PIECE OF SATIRE

St. Charles, Mo., April 16.—Miss Josephine Holdren, daughter of Judge and Mrs. J. W. Holdren, has achieved a literary honor at Lindenwood college, St. Charles, Mo., where she is a student. She has had an article published in the "Literary Supplement" of the college campus newspaper, "Linden Bark." The Bark is issued weekly by the department of journalism. Josephine is the author of a satirical essay on "Loafing." The subject is handled with charming originality and cleverness. It is as follows:

"The question of human conduct is at last solved. Humanity has reached its goal in the new creed, the philosophy of laziness. This idea is really old but has never been properly advertised. As a modern of moderns I realize that no campaign can possibly succeed unless broadcast and put before the public in a clever, appealing manner. I am beginning my campaign by presenting the logical reasons why this system of 'doing nothing' should be adopted.

"First of all it brings its disciples serenity of mind. A calm brain leads to clear reasoning and correct thinking. There are none of us whose mental processes are so unailing that we need overlook this increased mental power offered by laziness. Then too, there must be at least a few who have tried this habit and know that I am right in saying it cultivates steady nerves.

"Now although the vital need for steady nerves has decreased materially since the passing of gun fighting, they are still handy in traffic jams, family fights, final exams and the like. Then again we see the beneficial results of loafing in the tranquil dispositions which its followers soon acquire. They take life as it comes, either shine or storm, week end invitations or 'Campus,' biscuits or muffins, 'E's' or 'I's' with the tranquility that is achieved only by a true idler.

"With such fundamental assets as a serene mind, steady nerves and tranquil disposition one has untold advantages. The universe is at his feet. He looks out upon the world from his lazy chair with no worry or responsibility to mar the pleasant picture of his fellow beings rushing frantically about in futile and laborious work. He looks upon it all with a tolerant smile and goes back to sleep. Isn't the picture appealing? Doesn't the idea grip your mind?

"Yes, I believe that if this plan was tried systematically it would do away with many of the crying evils of today and set this old world on the right track.

"Let me bring it nearer home and echo the words of the modern philosopher when he said. 'He who puts off studying his lessons till tomorrow, has a whale of a good time tonight'."

MAKES ADDRESS HERE

Talks to Lindenwood Girls
on "A Student's Religion."

Dr. Aurelia Henry Reinhardt of Oakland, Cal., president of Mills College, came to Lindenwood College from Hot Springs this week for a visit, after attending a meeting of the Sectional Conference of the Association for University Women. Dean Alice E. Gipson of Lindenwood was also a delegate, and returned with Mrs. Reinhardt, the latter having once been Dr. Gipson's instructor at Idaho College.

In a chapel address at Lindenwood on "A Student's Religion," Dr. Reinhardt said that judging from her experience as president of a girls' college, she believed that "a student's spiritual life" is rather more difficult than the spiritual life of other persons, the real reason for this being that "the student steps out of the ordered life of the home into something entirely different." It is the business of the college in all fields to create the critical spirit, she declared, and "there is a creative period in every person's life, especially in that of the student, when he or she begins to criticize religion."

"Parents say, 'There is one thing that I want to be sure of, and that is that my daughter will never lose her religion.' She will not, if she is a practical student and is true to herself and what the college teaches her."

"Religion is essentially a personal matter. We are all sisters in the same family. It is you, and not you through anybody else, that establishes your religion. Faith in humanity, being true to one's self, is being loyal to one's God."

Answering the question as to why religious services should be held in a college, she said: "Unless religious worship is offered to a student how can we expect them to bring it into their lives? Why shouldn't a college that offers so many hours' credit for this and that, be justified in setting aside so many hours for worship?"

RANKS HIGH IN COLLEGE

St. Charles, Mo.—April 22, 1926.—Miss Helen Holtgrewe, daughter of Mrs. Emma Holtgrewe, of Talmage, has achieved an unusual honor at the Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo., where she is a student. She is the author of a news story, written in German, which has been published in the current issue of the college paper, the "Linden Bark".

The article is entitled "College Nacht", and is an account of the College Night performance, recently held in nearby St. Louis, and of the prominent part taken by Lindenwood. The play of the evening was "Old English", starring George Arliss.

Miss Holtgrewe has made the story unique by her skillful expression in the German Language. She is quite proficient in linguistic study, and is doing splendidly in all her college work, her name being on the Lindenwood College Honor Roll.

Der College club hat es immer gern etwas Geld zu machen, nm die Madchen, die auf die Universtat gehen wollen, zu helfen. Dawegen ist dieh ailes gethan. Dieses Jahr wurde der 15te Marz zur College Nacht gewahlt.

Studenten von vielen Schulen und Universtaten waren da. Es freute die Madchen von Lindenwood sehr, da zu gehen. Diehen Abend hatten wir Mittagessen um funf Uhr genommen, nud dann haben wir das Campus verlassen. All die Madchen ahen si gut in den schonen Kleider aus. Als es nicht genug Omnibuss gibt, mussen einige Madchen mit Strassenbahn fahren.

Das Schauspiel fant bei dem Schubert-Rialto Statt, und wurde sehr gut gespielt. Es heisst "Old English," und wurde ven Johann Galsworthy geschrieben. Zwischen den Akten haben Studenten von all den Schulen schone lieder gesungen. Naturlich haben Lindenwood dies anch getan. Das Schauspiel war um halb zwolf vollendet, und dann haben die zwolf Omnibus uns nach Hause gebracht.

Es sah sehr komisch aus so viele grossen, gelben Omnibus zu sehen. Wir sind nach Hause um ein Uhr ohne Muhe angekommen. Wir waren sehr mude, aber auch sehr zufrieden und sehr glucklich.

Dr. Reinhardt
Speaks at Lindenwood.

Dr. Aurelia Henry Reinhardt, president of Mills College, who has two children of her own, showed good understanding of youthful life in a recent chapel address at Lindenwood College. "It is absolutely necessary," she told the students "to believe in the worth while things." Naming a certain magazine of light value, she said, "Why find joy in reading that, when Homer, Dante, Shakespeare and Dickens offer something vastly more charming and more alluring? If joy is found only in a fox trot heaven help you and the college you come from." Dr. Reinhardt admitted that "the critical spirit" is as essential to college life as the bridge over the Missouri river is essential to transportation to and from St. Charles. She said that "great scientists and psychologists are coming more and more to realize that the heart of God centers in everything. The real approach to God is the individual approach."

Dr. Reinhardt came back with Dean Alice E. Gipson from Hot Springs, Ark., where both attended the sectional conference of the Association of University Women. As Dean Gipson came from the west, both these educators have an acquaintance of long standing.

Lindenwood College Preparing for Centennial Celebration Next Year

Girls' School at St. Charles Will Be 100 Years Old Next Year; Founded by Major and Mrs. George C. Sibley.

NEXT Saturday night at 7 o'clock in the Hotel Muehlebach, the alumnae of Lindenwood college, St. Charles, Mo., will attend a dinner given by Dr. John L. Roemer, president of the college.

The dinner is being given partly in honor of the fifteenth anniversary of the founding of the Kansas City Lindenwood club and partly to create enthusiasm and plans for the coming centennial of the birth of the college, which is to be celebrated next year.

Members on the committee in charge of the entertainment are Mrs. Harold D. Evans, Mrs. George Metzger, Mrs. Edward B. Gray and Mrs. Nell Donnelly. A. B. Sinclair has charge of the entertainment.

Dr. Roemer and Mr. C. A. Blocher will be the principal speakers. Each of the former presidents of the club will give a short talk.

Lindenwood college is one of the oldest colleges west of the Mississippi river. In 1827, six years after Missouri was admitted to the union, the college was founded. Maj. George C. Sibley, government Indian agent, then stationed at St. Charles, and his wife, Mary Easton Sibley, are responsible for its being. Major Sibley and his wife, both well educated persons, saw the need of a school for young women in the sparsely settled Southwest. For this purpose Major Sibley utilized the 120 acres of land adjoining St. Charles, land which he had taken as the only asset available for him as bondsman for a friend to the amount of $20,000. It was a beautiful site for a college as it overlooked the Missouri river with a forest of linden trees.

In 1831 a log cabin was completed with accommodations for forty girls and its doors were opened to the public.

School Proves Popular.

The school was conducted under Mrs. Sibley's direction for many years. It proved to be popular and it was not long until young women came by stage from all parts of the state and the surrounding country to enroll. Many of the first families of St. Louis were patrons and the school grew in numbers and prestige.

By 1835 the college was fully established but it was not until 1853 that it was incorporated. In that year also the property was offered to the Presbytery of St. Louis and a charter obtained and the college placed under the control of fifteen directors appointed by the Presbytery. The log cabins had disappeared and more pretentious buildings took their places.

Three years later the cornerstone of a brick building which still stands was laid. By that time Major Sibley felt that the responsibility of managing the college was too great and he and Mrs. Sibley deeded the property to the board of directors of the college and the presidency passed from him to the Rev. A. C. Schenck, who held the position six years. Dr. J. R. Barbour succeeded him. Dr. Barbour was president only three years when it was necessary to close the college. The Civil war was at its height and parents were afraid to send their children away from home.

Controversy over Control.

Later that year Prof. French Strother leased Lindenwood college, then under the control of the Presbyterian church, and again the school was opened. Professor Strother managed the institution for a number of years, spending much money on its improvement, when a suit in court decided that the property belonged to the northern branch and he was compelled to give up his lease.

Following him came Dr. J. H. Nixon in 1871. Other presidents were: Dr. Robert Irwin, D. D., the Rev. William Sims Knight, Matthew Howell Reaser, Ph D., Dr. George Frederic Ayres, the Rev. John Fenton Hendy, D. D., and John L. Roemer, its present president.

From the little log cabin which constituted the first building to be erected, the college has grown until now many luxurious and costly buildings are on its campus.

With the exception of the period just preceding and following the Civil war, each year has seen a new building or some improvement which has increased the efficiency of the school. From time to time friends have made substantial gifts to insure its larger growth and maintain high standards of scholarship. In more recent days the fortunes of Col. James Gay Butler of St. Louis and his wife, Mrs. Margaret Legget Butler, have been given until the college's grounds, dormitories and equipment amount to nearly $2,000,000.

LINDENWOOD "SOPHS" "HAZED" BY JUNIORS

Lower Class Girls Clothed as "Babies" for Others' Amusement.

Youth is still more youthful this week on the campus of Lindenwood College. Baby caps with a frill, teething rings and pinafores with "Baby" on them, were worn by more than sixty sophomores yesterday, by edict of the juniors, as this is "Junior Week." Dresses could not be worn much shorter than they are, but other symbols of babyhood were fastened on the sophs. Each one must carry a piece of soap and a package of raisins, and they must shout the hour, as "Eight o'clock," when the bell rings.

Miss Marguerite McNee put the sophs through their paces in an hour's assembly program yesterday. Each performer "taxied" to the platform in a baby carriage, vigorously wheeled by two other sophs, and was taken off in an exhausted condition, after tests had been exacted of her.

Miss Anna Margaret Brecht began singing, "Here comes the bride," when asked to recite Chopin's "Funeral March." Miss Kathryn Walker was required to build a poem around a quoted remark which she had inadvertently made in the dining room: "If corn and beans make succotash, what is made from peas and carrots?"

The juniors made much boasting of the fact that theirs is the "Centennial Class," and that they will graduate in 1927, when Lindenwood is 100 years old. Carrying out this tradition, they compelled a sophomore, Miss Virginia Sue Campbell, baby cap and all, to march at the head of their procession, carrying a volume, wide and long, "Centennial Plans." Miss Margerete Boles was compelled to give an illustrated lecture on "The Century Plant," drawing "1927" on the blackboard. This succeeded so well that Miss Elizabeth Barnes was sent to "draw her breath" on the blackboard.

SOPHOMORES IN BABY CAPS

They Also Ride in Perambulators at Lindenwood Junior Week.

Sixty sophomores at Lindenwood College performed on the campus yesterday with frilled baby caps, teething rings and white pinafores inscribed "baby," for the amusement of the juniors. It is Junior Week at the college, and the sophomores must obey.

The sophomores were required to ride to an assembly program in baby carriages. One sophomore was required to recite Chopin's "Funeral March," another to extemporize a poem and another to deliver an illustrated lecture on the century plant with chalk and blackboard.

Students Prepare Lindenwood Dinners.

Different dinners as to menu were managed for every night in the current week, by Home Economics girls at Lindenwood college. Being hostess at a self-prepared dinner is one of the requirements of a class of 16 girls under Miss Elizabeth Stewart, the department head. Each girl invites a member of the faculty as "critic," chooses another girl as helper, and one girl as guest, making a party of four. Five formal dinners were given in the week just ended. Monday night, Miss Loraine Lyster had as her central feature of a formal dinner, planked chicken, boned, and another course was Vanderbilt salad, followed by angel parfait, all served with Lindenwood color decorations, yellow and white.

Miss Mary Olive Crawley had deep red roses as her table decoration, and after grape-fruit baskets, she served fillet mignon and mushrooms, and strawberry shortcake. The grape-fruit baskets also appeared on Miss Miriam Garver's

Rev. Dr. R. C. Dobson Speaks at Lindenwood on 'Things that Abide'

Pictures Changeable Age, with Faith, Hope and Love Constant.

Rev. Dr. R. Calvin Dobson, executive secretary of the St. Louis Presbytery, preached a sermon last night at Lindenwood College, at vespers, on "Things that Abide." Picturing "a restless and changeable age," he quoted, "Faith, Hope, Love," as the scriptural "three things" that shall abide.

"What changes have taken place," he said. "Yesterday's valuable machinery has been cast into today's scrap heap. They tell us that the heavy Pullman cars, running in long trains, are to be succeeded by a few electric sleeping cars, running within a few intervals across the continent, and that these in turn may be displaced by aircraft.

The text-book on astronomy or psychology or botany or medicine that is ten years old is out of date. The cyclopedia which sold for $100 a few years ago is scarcely worth as many cents to the modern scholar of today. In society, in industry, in art, in politics, in literature, and religion, we are on the march.

"On the whole, the movement is upward and onward. The inventors, instead of marring our happiness and peace, are increasing them. Society in its adaptation of new forms and fashions and customs may and does, in some respects, reveal barbaric and savage tastes, but in general things are improving. Honest politicians and statesmen, in advocating changes and innovations, are only seeking to help our civilization. Teachers and scholars, in forsaking old theories and doctrines, are only keeping pace with progress.

"In the religious world, men who feared the work of the higher critic and the ridiculer are now persuaded that the pillars of our faith are able to withstand any wind that blows. There has been a kind of insane dealing with the word of God, just for the sake of tearing it to pieces. Such men have shown their own folly. The word of God standeth sure, and its Christ remains the same today, yesterday and forever.

"And now abideth faith, hope, love." The speaker pointed out the essential quality of faith in all callings and walks of life. The word "hope," he said, is found 140 times in the Bible. "It begets patience. It goes hand in hand with faith, and has to do entirely with the future. Men misuse the word when they say, 'I hope I have done my duty, and I hope that you are well.' No, 'I trust I have done my duty and that you are well. I hope that I may do my duty, and that you will keep well.' Hope has nothing to do with the present or the past.

"Love is the greatest of the three graces, because it is the most God-like. Faith and hope belong only to the creature, but love is an attribute of the Creator, and is co-eternal with God. 'God loved man from the foundation of the world.' Love gives genius skill. Love for dear ones at home turns the wheels of industry; sends out ships, whets the bravery of the adventurer; gives courage and skill to the artisan and laborer, valor to the soldier and hero, charm to the painter, grace to the building, and sweetness to the drudgery of life. Only when the heart loves, can the intellect and the hands do their best work."

26 ARE GUESTS OF DR. AND MRS. ROEMER

Lindenwood Seniors Entertained at Annual Luncheon.

Twenty-six girls, just as numerous as the letters of the alphabet, constituting the "pre-Centennial Class" of Lindenwood College, were guests yesterday at the annual senior luncheon at the Missouri Athletic Association, given by the president of the college, John Lincoln Roemer, and Mrs. Roemer. It was an elaborate affair, at a long table heaped with sweet peas, the class flower, in class colors, orchid and pink.

Very original place cards were in the form of a graduate in black cap and gown, carrying a "diploma" tied with yellow ribbon. This document was a bit of verse, afterward to be read aloud, characterizing special qualities of each guest. Besides the twenty-six members of the class, Dr. and Mrs. Roemer entertained also the Dean, Dr. Alice E. Gipson; Miss Florence Schaper, senior class sponsor, and Miss Ethel B. Cook, bursar.

In a "round robin" taken of all the class, there were so many matrimonial probabilities apparent that Dr. Roemer offered an award to "the girl that gets married first." This is to be a wedding supper at the college, and an exemption from any minister's fee, provided the happy couple come back to Lindenwood for the marriage.

Bobbed heads are just as popular in this class as they were last year. All but three of the twenty-six have now bobbed locks. The classics are predominant in the college courses now being completed. Sixteen of the graduates will receive the degree, Bachelor of Arts, and only eight the degree, Bachelor of Science, while two are to gain the Bachelor of Music degree.

The average age of the class is 22 years and two months, ranging upward from 19. Ten states are represented, fourteen of the graduates coming from Missouri; two each from Illinois, Kansas and Arkansas, and one each from Iowa, Oklahoma, Nebraska, Colorado, North Dakota and Indiana.

The members of the class, all of whom were present, are: Misses Eleanor Brown, Helen Lee Maupin, Marguerite Hersch, Verna Meyer, Esther Dyar, Viola Boschert, Sara Birdena Lett, Virginia Foristell, Dorothy Towers, Alice Betty Hansbrough, Cora M. Wallenbrock, Margaret Knoop, Marian Kordstemon, Grace Larson, Ida F. Hoeflin, Mrs. Clara G. Schulz, Misses Louise Clough, Helen Harrison, Betty Bramlitt, Phyllis Hackmann, Dorothy M. Hall, Isabel M. Education Needed to Combat Modern Life, Says Dr. Roemer

"New Earth Confronts Us — Old Things Have Passed Away."

How modern life forms a puzzle for "the man with a measuring line" was discussed yesterday morning by Rev. Dr. John L. Roemer, president of Lindenwood College, in a sermon which he gave at the Tyler Place Presbyterian Church, Spring and Russell avenues, of which he was formerly pastor. It was based on the text, Zach. ii, 1, in which the "man with the measuring line" is pictured as meticulously laying out the boundaries of the restored Jerusalem, only to be interrupted by an angel, who said, "Run, speak to the young man. Jerusalem shall be without walls. The Lord will be the glory in the midst of her."

"Present-day standards of life and a new earth confront us," Dr. Roemer said. "Old things have passed away. Things are strangely different. The man with the measuring line has difficulty in finding the old boundaries. They have been overrun. There seems to be nothing for him to do but give up in despair and live in the glory of the good old days of the past."

"A Strange Country."

"In this day of autos, radios, movies, flying machines, short skirts and bobbed hair, some of us feel as if we had just landed in a strange country. We cannot get ourselves adjusted to the new order of living."

"The present generation is a topic of earnest conversation. It always furnished the passing generation with topics of conversation, but the 'present generation' we see today has outdistanced all others. Youth of today is not viewed from the new conditions that confront them. They cannot live as we lived. They are strangely different. Manners, customs, ideals are at variance with the former days. Agony of soul is our heritage, if 'measurements' and not life are our chief concern."

"Eternal Principles."

"While the conflict of modern life with the old is on, let us ever remember that the eternal principles of life are more important than ancient boundaries."

Dr. Roemer pointed out modern educational methods as greatly at variance with the "measuring line" of the past. "Every enterprise of business, every form of social advancement is demanding educated people. It pays to go to school. The great demand upon tax-supported schools and private schools is unprecedented. The school tax cannot decrease, the gifts to private institutions are enlarging to meet enlarging exactions. The Mark Hopkins theory of education has passed out. Only the finest equipment will be tolerated. The good teacher must be better today. The personal equation is magnified under modern conditions."

"No Fixed Bearings."

"The man with the measuring line is lost in this field. He can find no fixed bearings. A meeting of educators is even confusing, there is such a variety of theories and methods. Thank God there are no fixed standards. Education must meet every demand of every generation. No captains of industry are more alert to efficiency and production than administrators and faculties of our schools."

"Measurements may make for contraction, not expansion. Measurements may see the outer and neglect the inner meaning of life."

"The man of the measurements is not absent from the voting booths and the halls of legislation. He is insisting on doing things as they once were done. The walls of tradition must not come down, though the state suffers."

United States Constitution.

"The Constitution of the United States is the greatest written Constitution in the world. It has its right in the class room and the counting room to make itself known. Too much stress cannot be laid on its earnest and intelligent study."

"But we must remember our fathers did not write it for their day only. They did not write it to confine the future in the present. They wrote it to be a spirit of life. To some of those who declare themselves speaking in its name, national life would be restricted to blue prints of geographical lines. We would live to ourselves and fail to conceive any relation or responsibility to the great world of which we are a unit. But, thank-be to a large-hearted, large-visioned people, we have found ourselves first interested in life. The spirit of the Constitution transcends its vocabulary."

Since there are nearly 200 Missouri girls in the student body, there were many hands to make dainty wisteria and other blossoms for producing a Japanese effect in the gymnasium. Silken lanterns, singing birds and young girls in Oriental costume further suggested the Japanese idea.

Of the twenty-six graduates June 1 at Lindenwood College, 16 have a teaching career in view, according to a straw census of the class, taken at the annual luncheon at the Missouri Athletic Association, given by Dr. and Mrs. John L. Roemer. Dr. Roemer announced that this will be called the "pre-Centennial Class," and as an amusing award and encouragement of matrimony, he promised to "the first bride of the class" that she and her wedding party should have an elaborate wedding supper at the college, provided they came back to Lindenwood for the ceremony.

It was also shown that six out of the class intend to go on with their studies, doing graduate work, four are planning on staying at home, and one will go into business. All the girls of the "pre-Centennial Class" are bobbed-hair girls, except three, and as it happens, these three are residents in St. Charles, one of them being the May Queen.

Those present included Dr. and Mrs. Roemer, Dr. Alice E. Gipson, dean; Miss Florence Schaper, of the faculty, class sponsor; Miss Ethel B. ST. LOUIS CLUB W

New officers of the St. Louis Lindenwood College Club were elected for the college's centennial year Tuesday, May 18, at the club's annual luncheon meeting at the Missouri Athletic Association, as follows:

President, Mrs. W. K. Roth; first vice president, Mrs. Harry Montgomery; second vice president, Mrs. D. M. Hardy of Waterloo, Ill.; treasurer, Miss Janet Stine; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Edgar Blankenmeister; recording secretary, Miss Laura Ellwanger; auditor, Mrs. Robert Ryan.

Among the speakers was Dr. John L. Roemer, president of the college, who spoke on "The Message of the Centennial." He announced that as a special welcome to returning girls the old Sibley Hall, a dormitory dating to the '50s, will be renewed and equipped with modern improvements, both as to its exterior and interior. A very large porch will be erected, and the "old girls," as far as possible, will be invited to rooms in Sibley during the projected four days of centennial celebration. Eminent speakers and musicians of world-wide renown are to take part in the entertainment.

He expressed himself as delighted with the prospects for a scholarship endowment fund, as promoted by former students and alumnae, who in this way are carrying out an oft-expressed ideal of Mrs. Mary Easton Sibley, founder. Dr. Roemer said that a strict adherence to standards in scholarship has been kept this year, and some students were dropped; nevertheless, the year has been the best in Lindenwood's history. Mrs. Roemer, dean of students, was also a guest, and Dr. Alice E. Gipson, dean, and Miss Alice A. Linnemann of the faculty.

Mrs. F. Littlefield, president of the Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs, of which the Lindenwood Club is a member, expressed centennial greetings.

The program by members of the club was introduced by Mrs. Joseph White, the retiring president, and Mrs. C. S. Franke, toastmistress. The general theme was "Memory." Mrs. A. J. Kotkis spoke on "The Centennial." She recalled the founding of the college, "just six years after the State of Missouri was admitted to the Union," thus making it the oldest women's college west of the Mississippi River.

"The Centennial and Our Alumnae" was carried forward by Mrs. Harry Montgomery, whose history extended back to the time Maj. and Mrs. George C. Sibley, founders of Lindenwood, "well known for every art of refinement and culture," set apart for the college 120 acres of land overlooking the Missouri River, on the site still occupied.

After the addresses by Dr. Roemer and Mrs. Littlefield, a presentation on behalf of the club was made to Mrs. Joseph White, retiring president, by Mrs. Leonard Scott. This gift was a beautifully engraved silver compote, in recognition of Mrs. White's leadership through several years.

The treasurer's report, by Mrs. Arthur J. Krueger, recounted $500 paid into the Sibley memorial scholarship fund in the last year, and also $10 annually given to the college art department as a prize in dress designing.

Festivities at Lindenwood College.

Coronation of Queen Ida on the Green Hills will be the event of Saturday, May 29, in hours just before sunset, beginning at 5:45 o'clock at Lindenwood College. Thousands of guests will sit on the hillside, around the natural amphitheater in which the dances and pageantry will be given. "Queen Ida" (Miss Ida Hoeflin) is to be attended by Miss Bertha Pepperdine, maid of honor, and Misses Louisa Cochrane, Emma Monier, Doris Davis and Mary Dean Scott.

The "daisy chain" of the seniors, forming an avenue through which she will pass, is traditionally appropriate to Lindenwood, since the white and gold daisy is the college flower. Daisies, too, are to be in a "field," each one a freshman, to the number of 144. The production will be under the direction of Miss Barbara Eschbach, assisted by Miss Gene Gustavus and Miss Hoeflin.

The musicians, Misses Florence Ziegler, Dorothy Wallace and Genevieve Rowe, will play music telling the story of the dances which will be given with processional and jesters and a May pole dance.

As twilight draws on, the festival program will change to the commencement play, "Just Suppose," to be presented by the Lindenwood Players, under the direction of Miss Harriet Diven, of the oratory department. The leading parts will be taken by Misses Lillian Aderhold, Adria Spielberger, Margaret Madden, June Taylor, Mary Louise Bloocheer, Marian Eldredge, Frances Baggett and Dixie Mason.

A feature of the commencement season will be the art reception and exhibit, from 3 to 6 o'clock, Friday afternoon, May 28. The baccalaureate sermon will be given by Bishop F. F. Johnson, Sunday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, and the 26 graduates will receive their degrees Tuesday morning, at 10 o'clock. A commencement concert will be given Monday night.

Phi Beta Kappa
For Lindenwood Dean.

A pleasant "journey's end" awaits the vacation trip of Dr. Alice E. Gipson, dean of Lindenwood College. Her trip is to be made somewhat hastily, immediately after the Lindenwood commencement, next Tuesday, as she has been summoned to the University of Idaho, her alma mater, at Moscow, Idaho, to receive the distinction of Phi Beta Kappa. This will be the University of Idaho's first year of conferring Phi Beta Kappa, and it includes Miss Gipson in its charter chapter. After graduation at the university in her native state, Miss Gipson took graduate work in Yale, where she received her Doctor of Philosophy degree.

LINDENWOOD OFFERS
ART EXHIBIT PRIZES

Much interest is taken in the annual art exhibit and reception in the art department of Lindenwood College, from 3 to 6 o'clock Friday afternoon, because of the numerous prizes offered in competition this year. The St. Louis Lindenwood College Club will bestow $10 upon the art student showing the best costume of her own design. There also are first and second prizes, given by Mrs. Paul F. Donnelly of Kansas City, a former Lindenwood College student, for the best designs of house dresses and aprons. If these are of sufficient merit, she will use them as models in her business. Mrs. Donnelly is giving correlated prizes in Lindenwood's home economics department, clothing section, for the best made garments.

Friday afternoon's art exhibit will show applied design, commercial art, charcoal drawings, water colors, batik, tied and dyed, gesso, lacquer and painted china, with many other articles of home decoration. The painting of hats, scarfs and dresses, so popular this season, will be a part of the exhibit.

Miss Alice A. Linnemann, head of the department, will be assisted in receiving by the officers of the art class, Misses Hilma Black, Marion Garver and Grace Walker, the last two of whom are St. Louis girls, and also by three students, who will receive certificates in art, Misses Lucille Ward, Beryl Wade and Elizabeth Rhoads.

Miss Pauline Short Writes Poem for College Paper

Miss Pauline Short, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul L. Short of this city, appears in a clever poem, "The Water Pipe," in the May Literary Supplement of the Lindenwood College "Linden Bark," a campus weekly of the college at St. Charles, Mo. Miss Short is taking special studies in English at Lindenwood, and will complete her college year next week with the commencement which occurs June 1. Pre-centennial festivities are being held at Lindenwood, as the hundredth year of continuous existence for this college begins July 1.

The following is the poem by Miss Short:

The Water Pipe

I'm just a leaden water pipe
Joining with the sink
Although I like to say I'm lead
I'm really made of zinc.

Squeak and squawk, and gurgle too,
And sounds beyond description,
For when the water's turned on full,
I take a real conniption.

I scream and yell and carry on,
In manner truly shocking
And sometimes when I don't work right
I set the whole hall rocking.

So, if an uproar you should hear Don't call the firemen in
For someone's running water
And it's just my usu'l din.

LINDENWOOD SPRING FESTIVAL TOMORROW

Lindenwood college will hold its annual spring festival tomorrow with outdoor dancing, pageantry and processional, and a play in the evening. Miss Ida Hoeflin, the May Queen, has been assisting in physical education. She will also assist in the management of the spectacle.

Miss Barbara Eschbach, head of the department, will have general charge of the affair. "Just Suppose," with a cast of Lindenwood students, will be presented following the dance in the evening.

LINDENWOOD TO HOLD SPRING FETE TOMORROW

The annual spring festival at Lindenwood College tomorrow afternoon and tomorrow night will consist of outdoor dancing, pageantry and processional, followed by a play, "Just Suppose," by the Lindenwood players.

Miss Ida Hoeflin, the May Queen, has been assisting in physical education during the present college year, and so it happens that the queen herself will assist in the management of the beautiful spectacle. The pianists, playing in the open at the edge of the natural amphitheater of the golf course, will be Misses Genevieve Rowe, Florence Ziegler and Dorothy Wallace.

To each class belongs a part in the program—the "daisy chain" to the seniors; "pastoral maidens" are the juniors; May pole dances are to be given by the sophomore class, and the freshmen will be "daisies" in a field, that flower being the conventional emblem of Lindenwood.

The queen's attendants will be Miss Bertha Pepperdine, maid of honor, and Misses Louisa Cochrane, Emma Monier, Doris Davis and Mary Dean Scott, maids.

The May queen at Lindenwood College, Miss Ida Hoeflin of St. Charles, wore a coronation dress yesterday quite different from the traditional, in Empire design, with a beautiful motif painted by Miss Margaret Bostic of the college art department. This queen, who is tall, of vivid brunette beauty, intends to go forward with her work in dramatic art next winter, in New York City.

The outdoor ceremony, at which the dances, music and pageantry were all charmingly presented, brought hundreds of visitors to the campus. Pianos were hidden behind shrubbery on the hilltop, and the green of the golf course of about thirty acres, was a fitting setting for the festival. The story opened with Pan and his playmates, the Naiads and Dryads, charmed with the magic of May, when Apollo and his attendants drove them back to the woodland glades. Then the "butterflies" awakened the "flowerers," each one being an impersonation. The queen, attended by Misses Bertha Pepperdine, Louisa Cochran, Emma Monier, Doris Davis and Mary Dean Scott, marched through the avenue of the seniors daisy chain, attended by small pages, who strewed flowers in her path and placed a white satin cushion for her to kneel upon, when crowned. The May pole dance by the sophomores, the jesters' dance, the tumblers, and the dance of the "field of daisies," were for her entertainment, before the "throne," where she sat, surrounded by her attendants, and with the seniors at her feet. The beautifully appropriate music from Delibes, Grieg, Schumann, Mendelssohn, Schubert, Gounod, Verdi and other composers was remarked.

As twilight came on, the program changed into a play, "Just Suppose." This was given by the trained Lindenwood Players, under the direction of Miss Harriet Diven of the oratory department. The girls taking the principal roles were Misses Lillian Aderhold, Adria Spielberger, Margaret Madden, June Taylor, Mary Louise Blocher, Marion Eldredge, Frances Baggett and Dixie Mason.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred E. C. Hall of Bristol road, Webster Groves, entertained yesterday for their daughter, Irene, giving a bridge luncheon for five tables. The guests were classmates of Miss Hall's at Lindenwood, St. Charles.

Miss Virginia Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Miller has been elected, at Lindenwood college, St. Charles, Mo., to be secretary-treasurer of the student government board. This is an unusual honor requiring scholarship as well as faithful adherence to the standards of the college. By a new constitution adopted at the election meeting, the scope of the board has been enlarged and a "president" provided for each of the five dormitories.

Bishop F. F. Johnson Gives Baccalaureate Sermon at Lindenwood

Twenty-Six Girls to Receive Bachelor's Degrees Tomorrow.

Bishop Frederick Foote Johnson of the Episcopal Diocese of Missouri gave the annual baccalaureate sermon before the precentennial class of Lindenwood College, yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock, in Roemer Auditorium. Twenty-six young women who tomorrow will receive bachelor degrees, and eighty-three will receive diplomas or certificates, marched in procession, with the students and faculty. Hymns and anthems were sung by the Lindenwood choir.

Bishop Johnson preached on "Joseph's Dreams," as told in Genesis 37, and the effect on Joseph's brethren of the telling of the dreams.

"Joseph dreamed a dream and told it to his brethren, and they hated him. He dreamed another dream and told it, and they threw him into a pit.

Dreamers Unpopular.

"Dreamers of dreams never have been popular. Roger Bacon was the early star preceding dawn of experimental science and philosophy. Yet his discoveries in chemistry and astronomy and mechanics, which were all forerunners of the inventions and discoveries of modern science, were condemned as heretical, and Bacon himself was accused of being possessed of a devil and was punished with a dozen years of close confinement in a cell.

"There were those who were sure that George Stephenson, 100 years ago, had gone quite off his head and ought to be sent to the Tower of London. Why? Because he said that he was going to attempt to run a traveling engine driven by steam from Woolwich to London at the amazing speed of fourteen miles an hour!

"It isn't right to speak with scorn of dreaming dreams and seeing visions. What but a vision is it—an ideal brighter than the shining of the noonday sun, or the pattern of something loathsome creeping in the slime—what but a vision is it that impresses itself on the highly sensitized film-substance of the mind and soul, bodies itself forth in deeds, and sends you and me out into the world to carry into life our blessing or our curse?"

The "Bark," is issued weekly, with a supplement once each month. Miss Lange was last year one of the editors. She will be through with her year's work on June 1, when elaborate commencement ceremonies are to be held, as this season marks the entrance of Lindenwood upon its Centennial Year. The college was founded in 1827, by May Easton Sibley, wife of Maj. George C. Sibley, U. S. A. The Centennial will culminate in May, 1927.

Fascination of Uniforms.

(By Mary Alice Lange.)

At the tender age of nine, I fell in love with the boy who lived across the street, for the sole reason that he was a telegraph boy and was the exalted wearer of a Western-Union uniform. And since that time, every uniform of whatever sort has quite taken my heart away.

It must be the brass buttons which lend the fascination to a uniform, for surely the uniform itself is no more striking than any other well-tailored suit. Brass buttons! What visions the words bring up! Dashing young princes, debonair officers and even, well, why not? Firemen and watchmen.

At a dance, the boys in Tux will be the Lord Weatherbys until the West Pointers arrive. Have you a little West Pointer in your town? Well, if you haven't, I can't tell you what you've missed. He is usually very little known before he goes away to become a stalwart defender of the U. S. A. And he comes back standing straight in his blue-gray uniform, his brass buttons shining, a medal or two decorating him. Right then and there, every little Frat boy with his immaculate Tux and "hot line" steps back, quite outshone by the valour of the United States army.

But after all, it should not be the uniform but what is inside it that counts. However, I fear, that, forever and aye, it will be the uniform for which we fall. And as for myself, I must admit that I would fall in love with a one-legged policeman if he wore brass buttons.

56 Out of 100 Men Are Dependent at 60, Dr. Davis Says

This Despite Enthusiasm of Youth, Lindenwood Graduates Told.

Despite the enthusiasm of certain youths who imagine that with the world their oyster they will soon accumulate a million dollars, statistics show that instead of the average man leaping into the millionaire class the chances are that at the age of 60 he will be dependent upon someone else for his daily bread, according to Dr. Ralph Marshall Davis, former St. Louis pastor, now of Chicago, speaking at the recent commencement address at Lindenwood College. Dr. Davis, now pastor of Hyde Park Congregational Church, Chicago, was formerly pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in this city.

"We will take 100 youths who are now 25 years of age," said Dr. Davis. "They have an ambition to gain wealth and each sets a goal of $1,000,000 for himself. Each sets out to accumulate that amount of money."

2 of 100 Reach $10,000.

"Do they reach their goal? Statistics as prepared by insurance companies tell us that they do not. If we call the roll thirty-five years from this date, when each of the youths is 60 years old, we find that thirty-six do not answer the roll at all. Of the sixty-four remaining, two have as much as $10,000; two more have between $1000 and $5000; four have something, but it consists largely of life insurance policies that are not collectible until after death. The remaining fifty-six are dependent upon some one else for their bread and butter."

Advises Life of Service.

Dr. Davis advised a life of service rather than a "quantitative basis" for living.

"You say, 'It is mine, mine, mine!'" he said. "It is not. You will be extremely fortunate if by the time you are 47 years of age you have a penny. God is wise in that He doesn't throw happiness upon a quantitative basis."

ALUMNA IN CALIFORNIA HOLDS LINDENWOOD DAYS

Mrs. Victor E. Rhodes of this city, president of the Lindenwood College Alumnae Association, has received word from a number of regional vice presidents of the alumnae, appointed to help boost Lindenwood's centennial in 1927.

Prominent among these is Mrs. C. H. Baker, formerly Miss Nellie Ingram, a graduate of Lindenwood in 1896, who has many friends in St. Louis. Mrs. Baker's home in Pasadena, Cal., at 1080 Arden road, is to be headquarters for Southern California hospitality on behalf of Lindenwood. Every Thursday afternoon, from the present time until June, 1927, there will be a "Lindenwood College Assembly" there.

These weekly affairs are to welcome all who may be anywhere in the vicinity and have known Lindenwood. Although about 3000 miles away, the California Lindenwood "girls of yesterday" are actively pushing the centennial, and have asked all their prospective guests to bring items of interest, past or present, about Lindenwood College; bring plans and suggestions for the centennial; and bring contributions for the Mary Easton Sibley scholarship fund.

To Give "At Howes."

Plans of wide import for the Centennial of Lindenwood College have been entered upon in California, according to announcement received by Mrs. Victor E. Rhodes of this city, president of the Lindenwood Alumnae Association. Seven vice presidents in different parts of the country were appointed, increasing the board of the alumnae association. Mrs. C. H. Baker, formerly Miss Nellie Ingram, was one of these for California. She has sent word that a series of "Thursday afternoons" are to be held regularly each week

Lindenwood is constantly emphasizing its English department, this being a five-hour obligatory study for all freshmen, and the English teaching staff is one of the largest of any of the colleges, in proportion to the number of students.

California To Have Lindenwood Assembly.

Lindenwood's College Assembly, which occurs every Thursday morning in Roemer auditorium, is to be repeated with a fac-simile in Pasadena, Cal., upon a smaller scale but an assembly of enthusiasm each week in behalf of Lindenwood's hundredth anniversary. Mrs. C. H. Baker, formerly Miss Nellie Ingram, a graduate of Lindenwood, has opened her home, at 1080 Arden road, Pasadena, for the Lindenwood assembly of all alumnae or former students within range at the time, every Thursday afternoon, from now on until next June. Other members of the Lindenwood club of Southern California assist Mrs. Baker as hostess.

The purpose of the far-west gathering is not alone to show loyalty as alumnae, but also to bring the California former students together in acquaintance and friendship. The idea of a generous gift in honor of the Sibley Memorial scholarship is to be kept to the fore, and other suggestions will be sought each week for perfecting the celebration of the centennial. A pretty remembrance of the Southern California "girls" exists already at Lindenwood, in a beautiful rose-garden, the plants having been sent from the club members, and principally from the rose-garden of Miss Nellie Boal, a former student here.

LINDENWOOD HAS ALUMNAE IN ALL BUT FIVE STATES

Research statistics of Lindenwood College compiled in the college alumnae offices in the Arcade Building, show that there are only five states in the United States where there is no former Lindenwood student residing. These states are all remote from the Mississippi Valley. They are Delaware, New Hampshire, Nevada, South Carolina and Vermont.

The estimates are based on replies received for the compilation of Lindenwood's centennial directory of alumnae and former students. 3056 girls having been heard from. A few of them live abroad, one in Japan, one in Germany, one in East India, one in Africa, one in Mexico, one in Cuba, and five in Canada. There are also two Lindenwood girls in Hawaii, and one in the Philippine Islands.

The distribution according to states is geographically proportional, about one third of the 3056 being in Missouri. The rest of the states are led by Illinois, Kansas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, although there is a contingent of eighty-eight in California.

EIGHTY YEARS of Living in an UNCHANGED HOUSE on The RIVER BANK

Miss Clementine Cole, Chester, Ill., Teacher, attended Lindenwood College in 1863-64 and is one of the two oldest living former students of that institution.

Shady Trees grown in 80 years, around the 10-Room House which Miss Cole's Father built.

By JULIA C. UNDERWOOD, Globe-Democrat Staff Writer.

TO LIVE in a house unchanged for eighty years; to be one's self eighty years and yet not a "back number"; to be so well and affectionately known in the community that almost anyone will say, "Why, of course, I know where she lives": such is the happy Indian summer of Miss Clementine Cole of Chester, Ill., daughter of the late James M. Cole and granddaughter of Nathan Cole, Sr. (father of the Nathan Cole who was once Mayor of St. Louis), a New York settler in St. Louis, to whom one of this city's chief charms was his own golden wheat field, reaching along the area where Fourth street is now.

Miss Clementine Cole shares with Miss Della Gibbs of 5259 Northland avenue the distinction of being oldest in attendance (1863-64) of any former students of Lindenwood College now living, and this fact will bring special honors at Lindenwood's centennial next May.

The house in which Miss Cole spent her eighty years has a particular value to her. It was, in fact, built for her to be born in. Out of the old log house of the kind everybody lived in then, the parents moved in February, 1846, into the new residence, a great contrast with its ten large rooms, and in March, 1846, the daughter, Clementine, saw the world for the first time within the walls of this house.

The house still stands, and if its claim to life be determined on the ground of stability, comfort and picturesqueness, it is likely to stand for years to come. Miss Edwina Morse, well known in the St. Louis schools for her work through many years as assistant to Mrs. Matilda Riley as supervisor of drawing, was always an enthusiast about this old house at Chester. It appealed to her from an artistic point of view, and but for Miss Morse's untimely death two years ago she would have returned to add a few more touches of beauty to the stanch old structure, built of hand-wrought weatherboarding on a solid stone foundation, with a front porch 42 feet long. Miss Morse was a niece of Miss Cole, daughter of Miss Cole's sister, Mrs. Ellen Cole Morse.

Miss Cole's life has been that of a teacher. "Almost everybody in Chester has gone to school to her," declared one of the residents. Teaching sat easily upon her. It was with her a vocation, rather than an avocation. "I always liked to learn things myself," wrote a poem which was published, "In Ashes."

Hard Maple Tree 75 years old, which Miss Clementine Cole saw planted, in front of the old residence.

"Like the mythical bird of ancient lore May it rise from its ashes by the river shore,
To grind golden grain from prairie and hill;
May I live to see it, the new Cole's Mill."

Her verses, some people say, did much to give heart to the new enterprise. When the mill was completed, therefore, of course, they wanted Miss Clem to write another poem, this time a poem of triumph. Everybody knows that poems are not made to order. She went twice through the mill, but couldn't get any inspiration. Then one morning, when she was in the upper part of the old home house, looking out of the window she saw a spiral of smoke going up where there had been no smoke for ten long months. The mill was done.

"Can it be possible?" she exclaimed. No trouble now to write the poem. It is often quoted, beginning:

"A musical note comes over the hill,
'Tis the busy hum of a new Cole's mill,
How tonic and cheering to hear once more

Its steady grind by the river shore."
In the countryside around Chester one sees occasionally today the old snake-rail fence, separating farms. Quilt-patches are the recreation of some of the young women on the porches. In this environment, it is not so difficult to imagine conditions of a century ago. Miss Cole's grandmother, Mrs. Nathan Cole, used to tell her grandchildren stories of her journey by water to St. Louis from Pittsburgh, in the '20s. A thrilling part of the story was the difficulty in climbing the "high bank" to get up into St. Louis (such as it was) from the landing. The town of Chester is linked with the winning of the Illinois country for the United States by George Rogers Clark and his following of Kentuckians in 1778. Clark captured Kaskaskia after a forced march from the Ohio River, and converted the French inhabitants into good Americans.

At Fort Gage, on July 4, 1878, was celebrated the centennial of its capture by Col. Clark. Miss Cole has had published some data which she remembers in connection with these events, in which she says, "The Shawneetown road is part of the Old Trail, beginning at Fort Gage, running northeast to Steeleville. The trail turns southeast, and follows a winding course to Shawneetown." She recalls stories told in her father's home by Harry Wilton, a mail carrier from Kaskaskia to Shawneetown. "One of his regular stopping places was at Milligan's, in Perry County. They adopted an Indian girl, left motherless, whom they educated. But when she grew up, she went away with the Indians and never came back."

When Clementine Cole attended Lindenwood, in the winter of 1863-64, she was 17. Her roommate was Miss Sallie Gamble of Louisville, Ky. The girls of Lindenwood put on an original play, based on the classic story of "The Decision of Paris." Each girl was a "goddess," competing for the award as the most beautiful. Clementine took the part of "Minerva," and a girl named Mildred Buckner was "Juno."

The Easton girls, Medora and Betty, nieces of Lindenwood's founder, Mrs. Mary Easton Sibley, were in attendance. There was a group of girls from Mexico, Mo., whom she remembers, Mildred Buckner, Lizzie Bolton, Lizzie Clark, Julia Gamble, Maggie and Nora Hamilton, Mattie Johns and Alby Watson were St. Louis girls. Missouri Post was a St. Louis County girl, and another was Addie Axtell, who lived at Overland, St. Louis County, as Mrs. Oscar P. Baldwin, till her golden wedding on June 8, 1915. At that time Miss Cole was again begged for a poem, and she responded with some verses containing the lines:

" 'Tis but 'last week' since you and I
Were carefree chums in '53."

The curriculum of those days is worth recalling. At Lindenwood she studied higher arithmetic, ancient history, Bible, Latin, natural philosophy (physics), and grammar.

Rules for college girls were more strict then than now. The student's correspondence was limited to home folk and two girl friends. The latter were chosen by her mother. Nor could the girls come to St. Louis with the frequency permitted today. Miss Cole was very much envied because during the school year she was permitted twice to visit the city. The first occasion was during the Christmas holidays, when she came in as the guest of her Lindenwood friend, Miss Delia Gibbs, whose father was a woolen merchant in St. Louis. It was very, very cold that winter. They crossed the Missouri River on the ice.

Her second visit to St. Louis was for a special reason—to attend the Sanitary Fair, given in the spring of 1864 to help in humanitarian work of the war. She was allowed to come because a cousin of hers was to be there who was a soldier in the civil war.

Among the memorable sights at this Sanitary Fair was Nellie Grant, Gen. Grant's daughter, then a little school girl, who played the part of the "Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe." She sat at the top of a monstrous, ragged shoe, and dolls for sale peeped out of the broken soles and sides of the shoe in diminishing multitudes. This was a popular attraction. Afterwards, at the time of the Philadelphia Exposition in 1876, Miss Cole called at the White House, Gen. Grant being then the President.

In the last few months Mrs. Morse and Miss Cole have thought it best to come in to Chester to a town residence, letting others live in the old house. But they often go back. In front of the house are two large sugar maple trees. Miss Cole remembers back seventy-five years when one of these trees was planted. The sills of the old house, 16 inches deep, are fastened in place with wooden pins, not nails; they have never been replaced and are still in good condition. Chimneys are straight and trim. The weatherboarding and the whole house seem little touched by the years. With its double gables, the house is of a style of architecture duplicated in many parts of the South and Southwest. When Miss Cole was in New Orleans one of her friends was the famous newspaper contributor of the New Orleans Picayune, whose nom de plume was "Katherine Cole," being in real life Mrs. Fields. She invited Miss Cole to her home outside New Orleans and to the latter's surprise she found that Mrs. Fields' house was exactly the duplicate in appearance of her own old home built in 1846 at Chester, Ill. Except that one was yellow and one was gray, they could hardly have been told apart.

In the days when Miss Cole's father farmed this place he shipped grain, apples and other fruit down the river to New Orleans.

Always the river has given romance and interest to the surroundings. She remembers well the raging of the Mississippi River in 1881, when on April 21 it broke into the bed of the Kaskaskia and Kaskaskia Island was created. Devastation was in its wake. The church had to be moved inland. There was an upheaval of the cemetery and the dead in their graves had to be taken up and placed for safe keeping in new grounds at Fort Gage.

In her new town home she can look from her back porch down to the river. It would seem that she could scarcely do without this companion of eighty years. Across the Mississippi River, softened by its mists and vapors, there have been almost 30,000 sunsets in the West, since sunrise first came to this woman who loves the trees and the flowers and the farm animals and all the people. Those who know her well hope earnestly that the warm colors of the sunset may brighten her years for a long time to come.

MISS MARY TERHUNE WILL TEACH SPANISH AT LINDEN- WOOD COLLEGE

St. Charles, Mo., Aug. 30.—Miss Mary Terhune, of New Albany, is announced as the new teacher of Spanish at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo., where there is a large modern language department. Miss Terhune has had special preparation for her work in Grenoble University, France, and she has spent two recent summers in Mexico. Following her graduation at the Western College for Women at Oxford, Ohio, she obtained a master's degree at Columbia University, New York.

Lindenwood has 500 girls enrolled in the four-year college course, and the school year just beginning on September 15 will be the hundredth year. The college was founded in 1827 by Maj. George C. Sibley, U. S. A., and Mrs. Sibley, who was a daughter of Judge Rufus Easton. They were pioneer families and the "young ladies' seminary," as it was then called, was founded on their home estate. Dr. John L. Roemer has been president for the last twelve years.

Miss Terhune is the accomplished and learned daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Terhune, of the Hutchinson Presbyterian church. She grew up in a home of intellectual, social and Christian refinement, hence is exceedingly well qualified for her splendid position.

U. W. to Teach at Girls' College in Missouri

Special to The Times.

ST. CHARLES, Mo., Saturday, Sept. 4.—Miss Margaret Carol Dunn, graduate and former instructress of the University of Washington, has accepted a position to teach history and English at Lindenwood College, attended by about 500 girls, at St. Charles, Mo. The institution is commemorating its centennial year and Westerners may be interested especially in the fact that Maj. George C. Sibley, U. S. A., cofounder of Lindenwood with his wife (Mary Eaton Sibley), was the first white man to journey over the Great Saline, of which he has written copious notes in his diary of the time, being for many years a United States Indian commissioner.

Dr. John L. Roemer, Lindenwood's president, is announcing four days of special centennial program, May 28-31, 1927.

Since leaving Seattle, Miss Dunn obtained a master's degree at the University of Chicago.

Publishes Book of Poems

Miss Norma Paul Ruedi, schoolgirl, who has published book of poems which has been well received.

Miss Norma Paul Ruedi, a former resident of the Ozarks in Missouri, has the distinction of having written a book of poems, which has been published, and yet she is just now entering the freshman year at Lindenwood College. Her parents reside in Galena, Kan., where she has recently completed high school, and Norma is no older than the average high-school graduate.

Her little volume, published by the Avondale Press, is entitled, "If Dreams Came True and Other Poems." It deals not in precocious flights, but takes up familiar objects of childhood and youth—dolls, a Persian kitten, school companions, examinations, tea time, a picnic pool, and other familiar strains. There are also a few romantic bits, "Kismet," "Imitation," "Lady Moon."

She is at work, this vacation, on a second book, which is to be a novel based on a love-story in the Ozarks.

Her older sister, Miss Green Ruedi, graduated at Lindenwood College two years ago.

PRESBYTERY TO VOTE ON TWO CHURCH SITES

Meeting to Be Held Monday at Memorial Building on Skinker Road.

New locations for two Presbyterian churches are to be voted upon at the fall meeting of the St. Louis Presbytery Monday afternoon and night at Memorial Presbyterian Church, Skinker road and Wydown boulevard. The first is the Manor Presbyterian Church, which it is proposed to move from Helen and Emma avenues to a site two blocks south, at Helen and Theodore avenues.

The other new site is for the Normandy Church in Los Angeles, where it is proposed to buy a building lot at North Hills drive and South Sunset drive.

Reports will be made on the $15,000,000 pension plan, of which Will H. Hays is the national head. National missions and foreign missions are also to report.

The Committee on Christian Education, of which Dr. R. S. Calder of Lindenwood College is chairman, will present a plan for a field day on October 1. Rev. G. A. Percival of St. Paul's Church, subchairman, will give the outline for a young people's institute, which is being arranged for September 30 to October 1 at the Second Presbyterian Church.

The commissioners who attended the synod meeting at Hollister, Mo., will report.

By the new plans of presbytery, which allow much of the work to be done in committees, the time of the fall meeting will be greatly shortened. The business session is to begin at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon, after which a dinner is to be served to the members of the presbytery by the Memorial Church.

Lindenwood College Bulletin, this school's monthly magazine, comes out in a new centennial cover this week, announcing the opening, September 15, of Lindenwood's centennial year. The cover symbolizes the college's history in a column of Linden leaves, with the college coat of arms at the center and the centennial celebration, May, 1927. It is stated in the foreword that the students of the year are "a selected 500, chosen from many student applicants, who will march through the months which are intended to be best in standards, best in scholarship, best in song and story, of any that Lindenwood has ever known."

Sibley Hall has been rebuilt, a new Colonial porch extending three stories high across the east wall and giving a new entrance. A veneer of ornamental brick covers the entire structure, and the interior is now provided with many new bathrooms and other modern equipment. This is the oldest of the dormitories, being named in honor of the founders, Maj. George C. Sibley, United States Army, and Mrs. Mary Easton Sibley, his wife. St. Louis County Well Represented at Lindenwood College

Lindenwood College, at St. Charles, Mo., will enroll for its centennial year a larger number of St. Louis County girls than in any previous year. It is anticipated that the year's events commemorating the one hundredth anniversary will make the college sessions of particular interest, and all students will have much to paste in their "memory books."

From Webster Groves the following young ladies are registering as freshmen: Misses Dorothy Elizabeth Edwards, daughter of J. C. Edwards, principal of the McKinley Intermediate School; Dorothy Alley, daughter of C. W. Alley, whose older sister also attended Lindenwood; Helen Buchanan, daughter of G. H. Buchanan, and a former student at the University of Missouri; June Elizabeth Nagel; Irene Hall, daughter of Alfred Hall, whose family recently removed to Webster Groves from Germantown, Pa.; Frances Tanner.

From Ferguson Miss Martha Cook, daughter of J. G. Cook, is registering in the same class.

Much original research is being made concerning the beginnings of Lindenwood College, as the school's history is linked with that of the nation. Maj. George C. Sibley, U. S. A., early Commissioner to the Indians, was co-founder of the college with his wife, Mary Easton Sibley, in 1827. Maj. Sibley made explorations all through the Southwest, and was the first white man, as his diary records, to visit the Grand Saline. His wife was of the fearless pioneer type, and made the trip on horseback, from Washington to St. Charles, in 1815, when she was 15 years of age. Her father was Judge Rufus Easton, an appointee of President Jefferson, and first postmaster of St. Louis. His son, Alton B. Easton, was the founder of the City of Alton, Ill., which received his name. Judge Easton was not only a Federal Judge, but he bore a secret commission from the President, to investigate the alleged treason of Aaron Burr.

A., which usually has 100 per cent membership at Lindenwood; of the honor societies, Alpha Sigma Tau for merit in scholarship, and Alpha Mu Mu for musical proficiency; of the athletic association which pledges students gaining a certain number of points in physical education; and of the Lindenwood Players, who always entertain the student body several times a year.

She also mentioned the cultural opportunities of the various departmental clubs, such as the English Club, the Spanish Club, the French Club, the Latin Students' Club, the International Relations Club, the activities in science, in art and in home economics, as well as the college newspapers. By taking an interest in these things outside the classroom, the student develops along different lines and has scope for a fuller life, she said.

Life an Investment, Dr. Roemer Tells Lindenwood Girls

Ultimate Aim of Educa- tion Is Moral Force, Col- lege President Says.

Life as "an investment" was presented in terms of every-day business last night by Rev. Dr. John L. Roemer, in the opening vesper service of the year at Lindenwood College. As president of the institution he counseled the 500 young women before him that "character, industry, fidelity and service are investments that yield life returns that cannot be computed in dollars and cents."

To the girls as citizens, Dr. Roemer quoted a bank axiom, "saving and using are fundamental to right living," adding: "Citizenship is of the highest type when the citizen has something invested in the community in which he lives. Possession and responsibility go hand in hand.

Education Moral Force.

"Biography is a fascinating study because it is the revelation of returns made upon invested life. Invest life in the things most worth while."

The speaker commented on that view of education which expresses itself in financial terms. "The bread and butter theory makes education an easier way to make a living. It cannot be disputed that an education better qualifies one to reach more eminent material heights than one who has none. But the ultimate aim of education is to make the student a better citizen, a moral force in the community. We are evaluating people differently these days. We owe more to men whose life influence is wholesome than to men whose only eulogy is: they have the riches of this world."

Dr. Roemer spoke of a present-day "pernicious doctrine of getting something for nothing."

"Get-rich-quick concerns prey upon the resources of one who is trying to escape devotion to the god of industry. Remember, 'Every man's task is his life preserver.'"

Help Fellow Men.

The Old Testament story of Joseph, who "became premier of Egypt because he was willing to direct affairs of state in time of famine," was told as an illustration of the responsibility which must be borne if one would have leadership.

The students were urged to "invest in the serviceable things of life, saying that the highest self-development is reached when personal achievement is used to help fellow men. "What would you think of an Edison who knew the secrets of electricity and failed to reveal them to mankind, because he wanted them for his own use? The greatest teacher the world ever knew had this for his motto: 'I came not to be ministered unto, but to minister.'"

A Young Kansas Poet.

Miss Norma Paul Ruedi of Galena, Kas., whose volume of verse about little everyday things, "If Dreams Came True and Other Poems," was published this spring by the Avondale Press, New York. Miss Ruedi was salutatorian of this year's graduating class of Galena high school and will enter Lindenwood college in September. She is the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul J. Ruedi.

Convocation.

A "world of wonder" was presented to the students of Lindenwood College, in the annual Convocation address which formally opened the centennial year of the college, by Rev. Dr. S. Willis McKelvey, Presbyterian pastor, Kansas City, last night at Roemer Hall.

"Never did a generation," said Dr. McKelvey, "face so fascinating a world as youth does today." His subject was, "The Renaissance of Wonder."

"Never did reality and truth," he said, "in such wealth of beauty and utility and benediction, entreat and encircle life as today. The certainty and dependability of those conditions in this natural world which give us the telephone and the radio and the airplane and the telescope are commanding in their significance.

"The astronomer bids us wonder as he shows great Betelgeuse, 215,000,000,000 miles in diameter. He tells us that if the streams of light from the sun were shut out for 72 hours, our lakes and rivers and oceans would become solid ice, and not a breath of life could live on this earth.

"If the miracle of the harvests were to fall throughout the world, one-half of earth's inhabitants would perish that year; and if it continued another year, all life would perish.

"Man has been placed in this world of wonder, with the gracious command, 'Go forth and conquer.' Every advance has come through discovering some new law of energy, and every law of nature is a good law, because obedience to it brings only and always rich blessings. That is to say, love is manifest in all law.

"This is no world in which to live and wrap your mind up in a napkin. God is the maker and sustained of it all. God built it all for us, and in love he bids us go forth and have dominion. If you serve in agreement with God's truth, you will succeed, you will triumph."

PASTOR DEPLORES CHEATS IN ADDRESSING STUDENTS

A student is better off to "flunk every subject" in a college course than to "win by cribbing," Rev. Dr. William B. Lampe of West Presbyterian Church declared yesterday in an assembly address at Lindenwood College.

"When you cheat in examinations," he said, "there is only one person who is cheated, and that is yourself. Don't think you fool your professors. They know exactly what you are. You are only fooling yourself. You are losing a chance to make some real progress. You are putting your character into a mold that ultimately will fail."

Dr. Lampe illustrated "the hair line of truth" by a vivid description of a football game he had seen, in which the honest player gave up his opportunity for the goal, simply because he had "stepped on the ball," although it was a case where no one but himself saw it.

The speaker at Lindenwood's assembly next Thursday morning will be Rev. L. V. Buschman of the Tyler Place Presbyterian Church.

Honored by Faculty

MISS ALICE LINNEMANN.

Honors unusual in any college were presented to Miss Alice A. Linnemann Friday night at a dinner dance at Lindenwood College, to celebrate her twenty-fifth anniversary as a member of the faculty of that institution. Miss Linnemann, who is head of Lindenwood's Art Department, graduated from this college with the degree Bachelor of Letters and after traveling in Europe became teacher of art in the college. She has studied art in vacations at the Chicago Art Institute, at Columbia University and in California, but the school year has always found her at Lindenwood, where she not only taught a popular study, but more than once assumed administrative duties, carrying the school along in the illness of the chief executive in two different seasons about fifteen years ago.

Dr. John L. Roemer, president of the college, presented Miss Linnemann with a substantial purse as an appreciation of her services on the part of the college and the Board of Directors. A reception line was formed, in which everyone passed forward to congratulate Miss Linnemann.

Through her efforts as an officer of Lindenwood's national alumnae association, Miss Linnemann has done a great deal to promote interest among former students in the Sibley memorial scholarship fund, which is to be presented at the close of this centennial year. She is in correspondence with hundreds of former students and is generally able to locate "the missing" when others have failed. Miss Linnemann's home is in St. Charles and she is a cousin of Dr. B. Kurt Stumberg, house physician of the college, and a member for many years of the Board of Directors.

Miss Linnemann has been of great service to the college, not only in teaching a popular study, but also in preserving a spirit of fellowship among all former students. She knows personally over 1,000 former Lindenwood students, having been an officer of the alumnae association since it was organized. PRESBYTERIANS HOLD EDUCATIONAL FORUM

Nation-Wide Series of Meetings Planned by Church's National Board.

The first of forty forums throughout the country which have been planned by the National Presbyterian Board of Christian Education to bring together the home, church and school in one great educational movement, was held here yesterday at the Second Presbyterian Church, Taylor avenue and Westminster place, with Rev. Dr. William C. Covert, general secretary of the board, presiding.

Yesterday's meeting will be the pattern for later meetings in thirty-nine other cities. It brought together representatives of colleges, seminaries, training schools, Sunday schools, missionary groups, women's organizations and all manner of Presbyterian educators to discuss the work of the Board of Christian Education, a merger of separate educational interests.

After 10 o'clock devotions, Dr. Covert gave the keynote of the discussion in the following words: "If the total forces of Christian education are not correlated in a new and more effective way the leadership of the church is threatened."

Dr. John L. Roemer, president of Lindenwood College, speaking later, declared that many colleges are giving a "cafeteria" education through an ill-advised use of elective studies. The church school, he argued, is at least at an advantage in this modern confusion because it has a definite "aim" to strive for.

A luncheon at the First Presbyterian Church, and a second meeting at night, presided over by Dr. Chester E. Jenney, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, concluded the day's session.

MARK TWAIN'S COUSIN URGES LITERARY HOBBY

Cyril Clemens, a cousin of "Mark Twain," urged the students of Lindenwood College yesterday to cultivate a hobby. He spoke on "Literature and Life."

By becoming interested in some subject, he said, and associating facts from casual reading with that one subject, the student becomes well informed. Almost all great men, he said, have cultivated some hobby, apart from their vocation in life.

He illustrated "backgrounds" by suggesting the propriety of studying one author in contrast with some earlier author. One of these examples was a study of Dickens with Thackeray as a background.

Pillage. Pigeon-hole and Possibility are the three ways that man can look upon man, declared Rev. John W. MacIvor, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, speaking at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, yesterday.

Explaining his alliterative catalogue, he remarked: "We find those classifications all through life. The business man who looks at his business from the standpoint of 'pillage' will simply carry on for what he can get out of his fellow-man; the pigeon-hole man will work for eight hours, doing what he has to do and then forgetting about it; but the man who sees possibility will dream for all that man is and attempt to make his dreams come true."

"Peter was only a fisherman," he added in analogy that placed the disciple of Christ in the "pigeon-hole" class. "He was naught else. But there is a way of looking at man as 'possibility' and that was Christ's way when he said to St. Peter: 'Follow me and I will make you a fisher of men.'"

Turning in his discussion upon the power of Christ, Dr. MacIvor cited the play "Ben Hur." "The author of that story was asked by Ingersoll, the agnostic, to write that book to belittle the place of Christ in history. But after honest study of the Christ Jesus, the book was written contrary to the convictions of Wallace and contrary to the purpose of his friend.

"This also was true of Papink. He was an atheist, but a simple study of the story of Christ made him believe."

Lindenwood College Rededicates Historic Sibley Dormitory

Hall Was Built in 1856 and Named for Founders of School.

Rededication of "Old Sibley," a renewed and remodeled three-story brick dormitory at Lindenwood College, yesterday afternoon, beginning at 2 o'clock, was witnessed by several hundred guests from St. Louis, as well as by the student body and faculty. This ceremony inaugurated a series of historic events of Lindenwood's centennial year, which will culminate in an original pageant and other exercises May 28-31.

Dr. Lucinda L. Templin, college historian, told the thrilling pioneer history of the Sibleys, who founded Lindenwood in 1827, and for whom this hall was named when they built it in 1856. Maj. George C. Sibley, U. S. A., who lived from 1782 to 1862, was Commissioner to the Indians, with headquarters at Ft. Osage. He was a son of Dr. John Sibley, who served in the Revolutionary War. Maj. Sibley's letters and diaries tell of close association as a friend and counsellor of different Indian tribes in the Southwest. Dr. Templin quoted a letter of his saying: "Frequently we are honored with an Osage chief or war captain to dine or sup with us, and very often we are favored with a company of princesses and young ladies of rank, dressed out in all the finery of beads, red ribbon and vermilion, silver ornaments and scarlet blankets."

First White Man.

Maj. Sibley was the first white man to see the Grand Saline, that salt plain in what is now Northwest Oklahoma. He was one of a commission of three in 1823, appointed by President Adams to survey the Santa Fe Trail, from Western Missouri to New Mexico. In 1844, being an ardent Whig, he was a delegate to the Whig national convention at Baltimore, and his journals tell of the manner of Henry Clay's nomination.

Mrs. Sibley was Mary Easton, daughter of Judge Rufus Easton, the first Postmaster of St. Louis, and United States Judge of the Territorial Court. After pioneer years spent in horseback riding over various Eastern States, and traveling by the same mode of conveyance to the young ladies' seminary, which she attended in Shelbyville, Ky., she was married, at the age of 15, to Maj. Sibley, who wrote in his letters describing her "amiability and accomplishments." How she accommodated herself to the "wild country" was shown in the fact that she did not buy silks and satins for her trousseau, as was the custom of the brides of that time, but she fitted herself in bright-colored merino dresses. These later were much admired by the Indians.

RICHARD SPAMER EXPLAINS VITAPHONE TO STUDENTS

Much interest was shown by the students of Lindenwood College at the weekly assembly in Roemer Auditorium, yesterday morning, in an address on "The Vitaphone in Its Relation to Advanced Music," by Richard Spamer, music and drama critic of the GLOBE-DEMOCRAT. Spamer told of the various processes of study of light and sound, so as to synchronize the two, and give voice to the picture, with the same motion of the reproducing machine. He anticipated the introduction of color, to make absolutely perfect the wonderful invention.

Spamer described the address of Will H. Hays as a complete illusion, the audience feeling that the speaker was really before them. He likewise told of the orchestra in full play, with its conductor, all in perfect harmony. A number of questions were asked by his student audience.

Following the lecture, Spamer was guest of the Rotary Club of St. Charles at luncheon, together with Dr. John L. Roemer and Secretary Guy C. Motley of Lindenwood.

Honoring the Dead.

The sign of an older civilization is shown in a reverence for the graves of "the fathers," which is growing here and in the country generally, promoted perhaps by the charity of the French people in pledging themselves always to keep green the graves of the American soldiers who are buried in France. In St. Louis, Markham Institutional Church has recently paid it annual pilgrimage, with flowers and hymns, to the grave of its founder, William Markham. Last Friday the graves of the Sibleys, husband and wife, were honored at Lindenwood College, as a last word in the Sibley Hall dedication. While a band played a dirge, the students marched in procession, with great wreaths of autumn foliage and a large basket of white and yellow dahlias. These they placed on the graves and the band played "Nearer, My God, to Thee." It was a touching ceremony, affecting all who were present, and tears were shed, even though these people lived 100 years ago.

LINDENWOOD COLLEGE HOLDS 'SOPH.' WEEK

"Soph. Week is on at Lindenwood College. Nearly 200 freshmen may be seen on the campus or in the buildings, dressed for variety in very long bloomer skirts, tied in a frill at each ankle and long-belted Russian blouses. Each one carries an eye artistically blackened, and each freshman apparently has lost one tooth in the front row.

In contrast, the sophomores are daintily clad in white silk, hand-painted in forget-me-not blue, with a blue scarf draped over one shoulder.

At 11 o'clock yesterday morning, the freshmen were commanded by the sophomore president, Miss Ruth Bullion, to go through their "stunts." One of the funniest was that of Miss Mary Dix of St. Louis, who "imagined" she was the Goddess Venus. Standing at one side of the stage, it was her duty, every few minutes, to exclaim aloud, "I am Venus," with emphasis on the verb.

Adria Spielberger is still collecting oratorical honors. Her high school years at Phillips were just one leading role and oratorical contest after another. Now as a sophomore at Lindenwood College in St. Charles, Mo., she has received the college's largest tribute to her speaking ability. She was chosen to deliver an address, dedicating a flag for Sibley Hall at the one hundredth anniversary celebration of the college. The address was written by Colonel Nicholas Bell of St. Louis, whose mother attended the school in 1837.

Against the gala background of the celebration and before a statewide gathering of people, Adria's voice rang out clearly and earnestly, if press notices are to be believed. It does not require a militant feminism to admit that Adria has a decisive way of delivering patriotic speeches that in the olden days belonged exclusively to man.

Miss Helen Massey, the accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Massey of Jerseyville, has recently been elected secretary and treasurer of the Alpha Mu Mu Sorority at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo. Alpha Mu Mu is an honorary musical sorority on the campus. It is a special honor for Miss Massey to be chosen to this office, as she is a sophomore, and the selection is usually made from the upper classes. The standards are quite high, and it usually takes a girl until her second year to become a member. The position is the more responsible this year, for the sorority is planning to go national, and there is a great deal of correspondence to attend to. However, all who know Miss Massey are positive that she will be very capable in her position.

Recently Alpha Mu Mu gave an informal tea (Wednesday, Oct. 27th), and Miss Massey read a paper on "Folk Music", which was enjoyed immensely by all present.

Lindenwood College is celebrating its hundredth anniversary this year, and it has been planned that the centennial year shall be the biggest and best in the school history.

KNOW MEXICO, EDUCATOR URGES

Understanding of Southern Republic Important, Dr. Devine Avers.

That Mexico is "the most important country in the world for Americans to understand," was asserted by Dr. Edward T. Devine of the American University, Washington, D. C., yesterday morning in an address, "Mexico of Today," before the students of Lindenwood College. He said that although throughout the last 100 years the United States has had almost continual friction with Mexico, nevertheless the relation of the United States with that country is more important than the nation's relation with England, France, Germany, Russia, China or any other country.

He emphasized the natural wealth of Mexico, saying that in silver she is the richest country in the world, and is second only to the United States in petroleum oil, being also rich in lead and copper, "potentially rich in the production of sugar, the citrus fruits and rubber."

Indian ancestry in Mexico was pointed out as making the country very different from the United States. "Mexico is an Indian nation, not a transplanted European nation. More than one-half her population are full-blooded Indians, and there is a very large Indian heritage in the blood of the other half. You will not find anywhere in Mexico a statue of Cortez, who conquered Mexico, but in the most conspicuous place in the national capital, on the Avenue of the Insurgents, you will find an imposing statue of the Indian whom Cortez tortured."

Referring to the strong Spanish blend in the Mexican race, he told of early Spanish culture, recalling the fact that the great university in the City of Mexico is three-fourths of a century older than Harvard, and has existed almost continuously since its founding. Spanish legal tradition accounts for the Mexican principle that the metals in the ground (including oil) do not belong to the owner of the soil, but to the nation.

Unique and attractive was every feature of the "Centennial Tea" given by the Lindenwood Players, the dramatic club of Lindenwood College, last Thursday. The tea was held in the quaint old-fashioned parlors of Sibley Hall and quite in keeping were the hooped-skirted costumes of the Civil War period which were worn by all members of the club. The entire faculty and department of oratory were guests of the Players at this social function which was well planned and artistic in every detail. The dimly lighted parlors, the beautiful antique furniture, and the girls in their daintily colored frocks, created a very quaint and unusual atmosphere. The short program consisted of two readings, "When Grandma Was a Girl," by Adria Spielberger, and "Pauline Pavlowa," by Margaret Madden.

Dr. Alice E. Gipson, dean of the college, presided over the tea table. The receiving line consisted of the sponsors of the club, Miss Harriet Diven and Miss Lucia Hutchins, both of the oratory department, and the officers of the club, Betty Birch, president; Dorothy Dunseth, vice-president; Adria Spielberger, secretary, and Margaret Madden, treasurer.

'Old-Time Religion' Not Satisfactory Now, Dr. Jenney Declares

Faith Must Progress, He Says in Sermon at Lin-
denwood College.

The "old-time religion" as a thing which means "different things to different minds," was discussed at the vesper service at Lindenwood College in Roemer Auditorium last night by Rev. Dr. Chester E. Jenney, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of St. Louis. The phrase, he said, is heard in "every time of spiritual or moral transition."

"To one group," he said, "who pride themselves on their education and sophistication, it means an old faith long discarded. Other people hear the phrase with a homesick longing; it speaks to them of days when religion was fixed and certain. These look on the first group as on those who have taken away their Lord, and they know not where they have laid him."

"Neither of these two groups ask what 'the old-time religion' really was. If they did it might be that the former group would not show contempt and the latter group would not be so anxious to have it back."

Rest Not Promised.

Dr. Jenney said that in order to find out the meaning of "old-time religion" one may well look into the lives of those who made religion vital and genuine. He told of Abraham, Moses and Elijah, each of whom sought "the presence of God," although harassed and troubled. Passing on through the life of Jesus and of St. Paul, the speaker said: "I search in vain through the gospel story for the promises of peace and rest, and find that this is not promised save to those who are made perfect in their suffering."

"Ask the Pilgrim Fathers. John Robinson, their pastor, warns them of the mistake made by many of the reformers up to his time, the mistake of resting in the past. He tells them they must go on, to give a new light and a new hope to all mankind."

Adventurous Faith.

"The first mark of religion is an adventurous faith. Faith is not something to save; it saves us. It is nothing we have to defend; it defends us. It is no image molded in the past, on which we hang garlands. Faith, genuine faith, is a thing of which men speak seldom, but which drives them on toward the conquest of life."

Dr. Jenney, who was an army chaplain overseas, said: "Faith that sounds like a book on military tactics did not save France. France was saved by Foch, and the soldiers of every nation and tongue that followed him, saved at Mons and on the Marne by men who were unafraid and eager, anxious to live but willing to die, that they might grasp within their hands a permanent peace among mankind."

Davis Girl Takes Part in College Recital

St. Charles, Mo., Nov. 10— (Special) — Miss Lillian Wolf, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Wolf, of Davis, took part in a recent recital, the first of the college year, given by members of the music school of Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo. She sang two songs: The first, "When Roses Bloom," by Reichardt; and the "Birth of Morn," by Leoni. Both were well suited to her sweet mezzo-soprano voice. Miss Wolf was president of the Junior Auxiliary of Davis last winter. She is extremely interested in music, and is now a pupil of Miss Cora N. Edwards at Lindenwood. The college recitals are of particular significance this season, as this is the centennial year at Lindenwood.

MARY MOST POPULAR NAME AT LINDENWOOD

A census of the student enrollment by the campus weekly, Linden Bark, at Lindenwood College, shows that Mary is the most popular name this year among 500 students.

There are thirty-four Marys at Lindenwood, a coincidence of interest, because this is the centennial year of Mary Easton Sibley, who founded the college.

Next in rank of numbers at Lindenwood comes Elizabeth, of whom there are thirty. The third most popular name is Ruth, which is tied with Margaret. Virginia and Dorothy are next in number.

X Birthday congratulations to Mrs. John Lincoln Roemer, dean of students at Lindenwood College, were expressed in the annual dinner dance given by the freshmen Tuesday night. The affair was given in Butler Gymnasium which was profusely decorated with yellow and green festoons. A large mirror globe was suspended from the center of the ceiling, on which were constant flood lights of yellow, green, red and blue.

The menu was elaborate ending with the procession of "birthday cakes" one for each guest, all the dining room being temporarily darkened except for the candles on the cakes, while the "Lindenwood Hymn" was sung.

X Miss Lenore Scheffield was chairman of one of the committees on arrangements. Miss Ruth Twenhoefel and Miss Margaret Feickert are also freshmen at Lindenwood. X Miss Florence Wolfert is a sophomore there.

MISS BOWMAN FEATURES IN PLAY AT LINDENWOOD

Miss Josephine Bowman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Bowman, 1033 Madison street, has displayed her dramatic ability at Lindenwood college, St. Charles, Mo.

On the evening of Nov. 9 she took the leading part in the play presented at the freshman party which was given for Mrs. Roemer in honor of her birthday, it was learned today.

Miss Bowman, dressed in the costume of the Lindenwood girl of a century ago, was very sweet and charming as she received the various girls who, symbolic of different phases of college life, danced around her and demanded her attention.

Since Lindenwood will celebrate its 100th year in the spring, the play with its picturesque costumes was very appropriate. Excellent taste was shown in the choice of Miss Bowman as the heroine, it was said.

LINDENWOOD STUDENTS REVIVE OLD PUZZLE

In Doubt Whether Founder Was Born in 18th or 19th Century.

The revival of the current popular question of nearly twenty-seven years ago, at the beginning of 1900, "What century is it?" is being seen at Lindenwood College, in a discussion of Mrs. Mary Easton Sibley's nativity. She was born January 1, 1800. As founder of the college in 1827, making the college in its centennial year, her history involves a discussion concerning the date mentioned, as to its belonging to the eighteenth or the nineteenth century.

"Ask any freshman," says Linden Bark, the campus weekly, "in what century Mrs. Sibley was born, the date being January 1, 1800, and the freshman will immediately reply, 'In the nineteenth century, of course.'"

"But that is wrong. The first years of the nineteenth century began January 1, 1801. At the close of the year 1799, 99 years of the eighteenth century had passed. Include the year 1800, the 100th year, and you have completed the eighteenth century, and are ready to begin the nineteenth century with the year 1801."

The freshmen are reluctantly convinced. But it is considered very fortunate that Mrs. Sibley was born on the day she was, as it makes it so easy to tell, in every event of her life, just how old she was.

Ardmore Girl's Story Chosen

MISS BOLES IS HIGHLY HONORED

"Kurt, the Dog Policeman,"
Wins at University of Missouri Journalism School.

Miss Margaret Boles of Ardmore, a student in the journalism school at the University of Missouri, who was a student at Lindenwood college, St. Charles, Mo., in 1924-25, is the author of an article which has been published in a volume entitled, "The Doorway to English." The book in which the article "Kurt, the Dog Policeman," appears, was compiled by L. W. Rader, supervisor of English in the St. Louis schools, and P. H. Defendall, principal of the Blair school, St. Louis, for the purpose of better instructing children how to organize thought and give correct and forceful expression to such thought. In doing this they tried, as far as possible, to obtain original student compositions to use as illustrations.

Here is Miss Boles' story.

Kurt, the Dog Policeman

Nobody seems to know why it is but the popular mascot for a college seems to be some sort of a dog. No particular kind of a dog—just a dog. So of course, being a very up to date woman's college, Lindenwood college at St. Charles, Mo., has a canine mascot. The girls chose a big, beautiful German police dog, Kurt von Lindenholz, commonly known as Kurt.

Kurt's grandfather was Nemo von Hohelut, of the Pallade Kennels in New York, who was nine times champion of the Madison Square Garden dog show, and his father, Komel, was equally famous. His mother also comes from a very distinguished dog family. So Kurt is quite well-bred enough to be a proper mascot for such an old and famous college as Lindenwood.

Kurt was born on Feb. 1, 1921, and has 10 brothers and sisters. He came to the college on April 1 of that year, having been presented to the president, Dr. John Lincoln Roemer, by Dr. Kurt Schaefer, attending physician of the college and member of the board of trustees for whom Kurt is named. "Von Lindenholz" means literally "of Lindenwood," so the name is very much in keeping with the institution of which Kurt is a most important member.

BY ARDMOREITE

as Model for Book

It has been said of a German police dog in general that he is a "one man dog." This is indeed true, as every dog lover well knows, and Kurt is no exception to the rule. He is devoted to his master and can always be seen near Dr. Roemer as he walks about the campus. Strange to say, Kurt cares nothing at all for girls, although he has spent most of his life in a place where girls make up the greater part of the population.

One of his duties is to go with the nightwatchman as he patrols the campus at night. He understands the duty and is always alert and watching for any signs of prowlers. He knows the guards by their badges and caps and has often refused to attend a man until he has donned these emblems or his official duties.

For a long while there was another mascot with whom Kurt shared honors on the campus. This was the small, woolly, beautiful white Alaskan Spitz dog, "Lin." Lin was a great deal older than Kurt and had acquired precedence with his age. Kurt gave Lin his preference in all things and was a devoted friend to the smaller dog. When Lin died in June 1925, Kurt missed him a great deal and seemed to grow lonely. During the first few weeks Kurt went often to Lin's grave on the side of the hill near the old cemetery and there grieved for his dead comrade. Often he could be heard howling in the cemetery at night and would be found near his companion's grave. When school began again, however, Kurt was called in such active service in guarding the campus and performing his other duties that he no longer had time to harbor his grief and soon became once again his usual solemn, grave, slow, intelligent self.

An amazing story is told which well illustrates Kurt's remarkable instinct or intelligence, whichever it may be. As has been mentioned, he never notices the girls at all. He is, however, a staunch friend of the lady faculty members and acts as escort to those who live off the campus when they are leaving the grounds at night. When he first came to Lindenwood as a puppy of course all the students noticed him and tried to play with him. He ignored them and maintained his usual calm indifference. One young lady was especially eager to win his favor but he ignored her advances as completely as he did those of others. This girl graduated one year and became a member of the faculty of her alma mater the same autumn, only the vacation months having intervened. Kurt immediately had her placed as a member of the faculty. She had long since given up all hopes of winning the favor of Kurt's elusive dog nature. Imagine her surprise, therefore, when she found him escorting her home at night when she would leave the campus late! The dog knew there was a difference between the person as a student and as a member of the faculty, but how he knew no one can tell. Perhaps it was the added dignity which being a member of the faculty gave to the girl, or perhaps it was just his canine instinct which told him there was a difference, but, whatever it was, Kurt knew and performed his duty accordingly.

Lindenwood College Hears Sermon by Carondelet Pastor

National Dangers Given as Monopoly, Anarchism and Infidelity.

"National Dangers" was the subject of a Thanksgiving sermon yesterday at Roemer Auditorium, Lindenwood College, by Rev. Dr. John H. Moorehead, pastor of the Carondelet Presbyterian Church.

"We must in this country," he said, "possess our possessions if they are to remain. America is far from perfect. Repulsive blotches mar the face of our fair land. As Carlyle said long ago, 'Cease to brag to me of America and its model institutions and constitutions. America, too, will have to strain its energies, crack its sinews and all but break its heart, as the rest of us have had to do, in thousand-fold wrestle with the pythons and mud demons, before it can become a habitation for the gods.'

"Notwithstanding our ability as a nation to defend ourselves against all enemies both from within and without, all thoughtful people admit that we are wrestling with the 'pythons and mud demons' which seek to destroy all we hold dear. 'Thy land shall be married.' To whom?

Danger of Monopoly.

"There is a greedy, all-grasping python which aims at the control, if not the ownership, of this whole country. We call it monopoly. It seeks to control politics by dictating nominations to office, and then deciding the elections. Rumors are already afloat that at least two men elected to the United States Senate at the November election are to face charges, which, if true, will deny them the honors they have sought and apparently won.

"There is no criticism for the capitalist when he makes and uses his money honestly. Large enterprises are impossible without large corporations. But the same principles that are applied to the poorest men are to be applied to the richest. If a poor man takes his neighbor's property without adequate compensation, he is a thief. But when a corporation damages the people's property without adequate compensation, it is a gigantic thief. What is wrong on a small scale is wrong on a large.

Money Power.

"Shall monopoly dominate our country as it has other nations? Are we willing to marry the nation to the money, power, that has its hands on every ton of coal, sack of salt, bag of sugar, and purposes to take the wealth of our people and tuck it away in a few silken wallets?"

The speaker mentioned anarchism as "another suitor for the hand of this nation."

"In anarchism there is no place for God, heaven or hell, except what it can make on earth. It has slaughtered kings and queens and presidents. It makes the holding of property a crime, and would burn your dwellings and turn everything over to thieves and murderers.

*Globe-Democrat,
Nov. 26-*

"Shall the toilers of this country allow themselves to be deceived by this smooth, though lying monster, who never owned anything but a knife or a bomb?"

A third peril mentioned was infidelity. "As God solicited the hand of ancient Israel, according to the figure of speech employed by Isaiah, so Jesus Christ, his son, is desirous to have this nation and the whole world love him."

The Lindenwood quartet, composed of Misses Clara Bowles, Eunice Lynn, Dorothy Gartner and Mildred Gode, sang a "Hymn of Thanksgiving."

Entrance to Good English,
by St. Louisans

"The Doorway to English," by L. W. Rader and P. H. Defendall. (Johnson Publishing Co., Richmond, Va.) Reviewed by Julia C. Underwood.

Writers, young and old, will find food for thought, as well as merit, in "The Doorway to English," by L. W. Rader, M. A., supervisor of English in the St. Louis schools, and P. H. Defendall, M. A., of the Blair School, St. Louis.

The book is obviously intended to be scholastic and instructive, and it's both, but moreover there are in 't flashes of entertainment here and there, those little sidelights that the apt mind and agile brain must let slip in the most serious moments.

Rules for writing and debating are interlarded with examples which serve to illuminate the text and hold the interest of the reader. Quotations are freely used. Washington Irving is drawn on for several specimens of luminous and correct descriptive powers, and Daniel Defoe is made to contribute a page and a half of dear old "Robinson Crusoe."

Lindenwood College at St. Charles, gets high praise for a true story about a dog, written by a sophomore, Miss Margarete Boles, in 1925. It is one of several articles about dogs, some of which are cited as good; others serve as horrible examples.

Some of the quotations from Ralph Waldo Emerson, John Greenleaf Whittier, and Charles Dickens bring back the memory of days when there was literature in the 'readers' used in the little red schoolhouse.

Speaking of dogs and dog-stories, here is one in this book about a Newfoundland dog which rescued his owner from drowning. It is of course an old story, but what makes it particularly interesting is the assertion that the Newfoundland dog of today is not curly-haired, as was the one we used to see pictures of, protecting children. The present-day Newfoundland is said to be a straight-haired dog, something like the Belgian police dog, or German shepherd, whichever one chooses to call him.

LINDENWOOD STUDENTS HEAR JUDGE HOLT CAMP

Judge C. W. Holtcamp urged the students of Lindenwood College to acquaint themselves with business yesterday, in an address at Roemer Auditorium. Many women, he said, become "frightened to death" when they enter a courtroom. He told of one who came recently with her hands shaking so in nervous terror that she could not open a package of papers.

"When I explained to her how easily everything could be adjusted in this estate," Judge Holtcamp said, "you could see the greatness of the burden which was lifted from her mind."

He showed that when money or property is inherited, this by no means insures the prosperity and future welfare of the recipient. Investments are to be wisely made, and unless one knows something about such things beforehand, her plight is apt to be a sorry one. Judge Holtcamp counseled the girls that as "future citizens" they must be prepared for unexpected turns of fortune. The most perplexing situation any of them could confront, he said, would probably be the death of their fathers.

Judge Holtcamp exhibited a very ancient volume of Probate Court records in St. Louis, beginning May 6, 1806, its first and second pages being in French.

LINDENWOOD PRESENTS NEW COLLEGE SONG

A new song, "I Saw Miss Lindenwood Start Up Centennial Hill," was launched at Lindenwood College preceding the college's centennial year Friday night at a dinner party given by president, faculty and students to the Rotary Club, the Optimist and Exchange clubs.

Miss Marion Suleeba, dressed in her mother's long wedding gown of flowered taffeta covered with white silk net, her long hair dressed in the style of colonial days, wearing a hat with a plume and carrying a colored parasol, entered the dining room, curtsying right and left as the 500 students sang:

I had a dream the other night,
When everything was still,
I dreamed I saw Miss Lindenwood
Start up Centennial Hill,
When first she started out to school
With skirts and curls both long,
To even start at all to school
Required a will quite strong.

She was followed by a student who bridged the 100 years, Miss Hazel Wells, the "modern girl," dressed in a peachblow evening dress of fashionable abbreviation, her short hair curled tightly to her head. Then the girls sang:

But now she's reached centennial mark,
She's bobbed her skirts and curls,
She has new pep and freedom now,
For best of college girls.

The centennial song is the product of the college sophomore class. It is to be much in vogue after Lindenwood reopens on January 5 for its hundredth year of continued existence.

Miss Lange Wins Christmas Prize Story.

Under the heading, "Christmas Story Won by Sophomore," the Lindenwood Bark, official magazine of Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo., says: "An announcement, which has been eagerly looked for to by the entire student body, was made December 10, by Dr. Gipson. This was the naming of the girl who won the Christmas story contest, Mary Alice Lange, Leavenworth, Kansas, former associate editor of Linden Bark, was the lucky girl. Miss Lange is a Sophomore and will receive an A. A. degree in June."

Miss Lange is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adolf Lange, Jr. Her picture will appear in today's St. Louis Globe-Democrat as this is the first time a sophomore has won the prize story in the college; it heretofore has always been won by a senior. The story entitled "Santa Claus's Mask" follows:

"They called him the 'Hunchback,' not because there was anything wrong with his back, but because in his ugly face his movie educated associates saw a likeness to the hideous Hunchback of Notre Dame. At that, there was nothing really wrong with his face except that his nose was too short, with large nostrils, his mouth too big. The ugliness lay in his eyes—big and black they were, with a constant expression of something dreadful, accentuated by his heavy black beetling brows. There was nothing so terrible about his figure—he was little, long-armed and young—nothing to be feared. Yet feared he was. Children who came to the toy department of the Big Store cringed closer to parental skirts when they saw the ugly little Hunchback come trundling a load of bundles along. Clerks did not wish to be near him. Even the Big Boss as he passed through the toy department wondered why he was kept there—and forgot as soon as he left.

"And how he did hate the name they gave him. He begged to be called plain Tommy Briggs—his name. But to all he was the Hunchback.

"But among all those who scorned him so, he had a friend and a real one. And it was Joe Stone, the handsomest clerk in the big store, working in the toy department in the basement because, as he said, 'he was starting at the bottom, working up,' who was his friend. It was Joe Stone who never forgot to say good-morning and good-night to the one whom they called the Hunchback. It was Joe Stone who guessed, and not that to their depths, the thoughts and longings that lay behind the unappealing countenance. He knew, partly by talking to him, and partly by instinct, that the Hunchback wanted an education. And he knew, too, that the world would never find a place for plain Tommy Briggs except as Bundle Boy. And most of all, he knew that the biggest desire in the Hunchback's heart was not to have people turn away from him, not to be scorned, looked down upon. He guessed, too, that a smile instead of a shudder from some child would be the biggest thing in his whole sordid existence.

"But it took one little incident to give Joe Stone the Big Idea. There had been great plans going on all over the toy department for the toy land to be opened the next week. Tinsel ornaments, holly, glittering lights, decorated trees—all were to brighten the erstwhile gloomy basement, and biggest thing of all, there was to be the usual Santa Claus. Everybody in the department knew that Joe Stone would be that Santa Claus. He knew it himself weeks before the Big Boss had told him. His suit was ready for the formal opening of Toyland. It hung in all its completeness in the men's wash room. Mask, beard, cap, boots—nothing lacking. And Joe Stone was not so old that he did not get a thrill from looking at it and wishing that the time might come when he could wear it. It was just after closing time one gloomy night that the thing happened. Joe walked into the wash room whistling, his eyes almost running ahead of him to gaze upon his precious Santa Claus suit. There it was, except, why where was the mask? Joe's eyes searched the room. There was only the Hunchback with his back toward him, standing before the mirror. But from the mirror there gazed at Joe Santa's benign countenance. 'Why,' exclaimed Joe. The Hunchback wheeled and snatched off the mask. His face was red. 'I was just a tryin' on your mask,' he stammered.

"Why, that's all right, old kid," said Joe smilingly. 'I guess there's no wrong in that, is there?'

"The Hunchback started to go. Joe was trying on the mask himself. "Good-night," from plain Tommy Briggs.

"So long, old kid, see you in the morning," returned Joe easily.

The Hunchback was almost out of the door when he turned. There was something in his eyes that not even Joe had seen there before.

"I guess—I guess you've never felt like I have, with a face like mine, with people always turning away, I guess—I guess that mask don't mean to you what it does to me." And with what sounded like a sob, he was gone, leaving a somewhat taken-back Joe Stone. Slowly Joe raised the mask, looked at it, and then in the mirror at his straight forward Irish face, his blue eyes and yellow hair. 'No old kid,' he murmured softly, shaking his head softly, 'I guess I don't.'

The next morning the Big Boss was late. He had been writing a letter to Santa Claus at the dictation of Boss, Jr., and there was a glow in his heart. He felt philanthropic indeed. His greetings as he passed through the Big Store was especially cherry. And as he came to his office and found Joe Stone waiting for him, he slapped him on the back. He might even have granted Joe a raise if he'd asked for it, but it wasn't a raise he asked for.

"Sir, I want to ask a favor" was all he said.

The Big Boss smiled. He knew these "favours" and right now, he didn't care.

"It's this" went on Joe, "I don't want to be Santa Claus".

"No?" said the Big Boss, surprised, "and why not?"

"Well I can't very well explain. There's a little guy down in the Toy Department that they call the Hunchback. Maybe you know him. Well anyway, kinda think he'd like to be that is if you don't care".

The Big Boss was not smiling now. If Joe had not known that the Big Boss was not one of these prepetual Glad Hand men he would sworn there were tears in his eyes.

As it was, after all, the Boss wasn't such a human machine and he understood. "Why, of course" he said. "It's your own business. I'll let the other man know. Joe turned, "Thank you sir. It, it means an awful lot to him—and to me, too". The Boss placed his hand on Joe Stone's shoulder.

"And moreover", he said quite emphatically, "There's a place in the Men's Clothing that I'd like you to have".

It was four days later that Toyland opened—and Joe Stone spent his last day in the basement. Nobody would have guessed to look at the surface of the thing, the ugliness of the Toyland Santa Claus' real face—nor the happiness in his heart. And as Joe Stone might have said, "Horatio Alger wasn't such a dumb guy, after all".

A feature in next semester's work in the home economics department at Lindenwood College, will be a course in textiles to enable students to distinguish which materials are most practical and most lasting, and thus save money in buying their wardrobes. Miss Thora Strain, a new teacher, who is in charge of this class, says the whole idea of the course is to be practical, everything being done from the standpoint of housekeeping rather than of abstract science. All sorts of materials are tested with simple tests which any housewife could use in her home.

Each girl is to write a composition which would be suitable to use as a chapter in an approved textbook on textiles. Some of the typical "problems" which will be treated in these essays are: "Should I Object to Rayon in My Hose?", "What Stains Will Commercial Stain Removers Successfully Remove?" and "What Kinds of Silk and Wool Dresses Can Be Successfully Washed?"
