HENRY CHADWICK.

"FATHER OF BASE BALL."

Henry Chadwick, the veteran journalist upon whom the honored sobriquet of "Father of Baseball," rests so happily and well, appears in portraiture, and so well preserved is his physical manhood that his 63 years rest lightly upon his well-timed life.

Since the age of thirteen he has resided in Brooklyn, New York and is an honored member of the distinguished society of old Brooklynites. He enterd upon the journalistic career in which he has attained eminent distinction, in 1856, his first work finding a ready field on the New York Times. In 1857 he associated himself with the New York Clipper, and has been identified with his great journal steadily for 31 years.

He took the initiatory in reporting base ball for the New York Herald in 1864, and in the sixties his brilliant contributions on national game affairs formed an interesting phase of metropolitan journalism, appearing in The Herald, Times, Tribune, Sunday Mercury, Sunday Times, Messenger, and Brooklyn Eagle, besides The Clipper.

"Father" Chadwick made The Clipper the authority on the national game during Frank Queen's regime. His work was a leading feature of the paper.

After 29 years of remarkable devotion to the interests of morning journalism in the metropolis, Mr. Chatwick retired in 1886, to accept an editorial position on the Outing Magazine, which, together with his work on the New York Clipper and Brooklyn Eagle, keeps his ready pen busy. He is one of the most valued contributors on The Sporting Life staff, and his work in other journals has made his name a household word as the "Father of Baseball."

He comes from a famous family of English birth, his brother, Mr. Edwin Chadwick, being the noted sanitary philosopher of England.

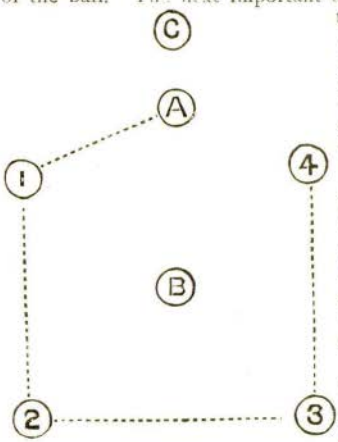
In his early days Henry Chadwick was quite a ball player. As early as 1847 when the game was in its infancy, he covered short stop on an amateur nine in the wilds of New Jersey—Hoboken.

From this early day to the present time he has been an ardent admirer of the National game, and has grown up with it from its puny adolescence to its glowing state of magnificent proportions, recognized to-day as the grandest of sports, the most healthful of recreations, and the most fascinating of all the out-door entertainments.

OLD BASE BALL.

THE GAME AS THE BOYS USED TO PLAY IT.—PUTTING OUT PLAYERS BY "STINGING" THEM OR HITTING THEM WITH THE BALL.

The game of base ball as played by "professionals" to-day and the game called base ball by the country boys of twenty years ago differ greatly, though there is no doubt that the present game is the legitimate evolution of the old one. Perhaps the most radical difference lies in the fact that in the games of the past it was the players who had the fun, and the games were played for recreation, and rarely for a consideration other than glory and the possession of the ball. The next important difference lay in the placing of the bases, or "byes" as they were then often called, and as many a reader of these lines will doubtless remember. The accompanying diagram will make this point clear.



THE BASES.

"A" is the position of the striker or "batter" as he was then denominated; "1" "2" "3" and "4" are "byes," "4" being the home "bye" and the termination of the runner's journey around what was then the square, and not the diamond.

The pitcher—he was usually called the "bowlder," a relic of cricket nomenclature—stood at B and the catcher stood at C. There were no regular outfielders, and the game could be played by six boys—three on a side.

But while half a dozen could play the game, half a dozen rarely did, and the number was often twenty or more. In such a case the field was covered by the superfluous playes as they chose.

And now for the rules and workings of the game. The two best players were selected to "choose sides," and they sometimes decided who should have first choice of players by tossing up a stone, upon which one of them had solemnly spat. One called out "wet" and the other "dry;" the falling of the stone decided the matter. But the more common method was for one of the two "choosers" to toss a ball club into the air;the other would catch it and then there was a superimposing of grasped hands. This method was called "choosing up," and the one who held the club last had first choice. But he had to have a firm grip, and it was decided whether he had a fair hold by his ability to toss it over his head. If he had hold by but one finger he often failed. Sometimes this important matter was settled by "driving down." If the grasp on the club was less than a full hand (no allusion to the great game of poker intended), it was not enough. The accompanying cut will best explain this.

CHOOSING UP.

The batting order came in the same order that the players were chosen, and the best players, thus had first bat always, for the "choosers" would, of course, always choose the best players first. Players were out if they struck at a ball three times and missed, providing it was caught always. One bound was always allowed the catcher, and sometimes two. If a batted ball was caught on the fly or the first or second bound it was out also, and if a ball was batted over the fence it was "out." But whoever got the ball first was "in," and a rousing bat was sure to cause a general stampede, and afforded the players plenty of practice in vaulting. There were no fouls properly speaking. If the ball was batted ahead of the striker he was entitled to a run if he could get it. But a "tick" or a "tip" was not a hit. Who doesn't remember the old couplet—

A tick and a ketch
Will always fetch?

A runner was out if the ball touched him or the "bye" he was running for. but the "outs" of those days didn't bother to touch the "ins" when they were running—they just threw the ball as hard as they could at the flying "in," and if it hit him he was "out." Sometimes he was out of temper as well, for the impact of a hard ball thrown with all the force of a good right arm wasn't funny. In some sections the boys called this "stinging," and the game was sometimes known as "sting ball." The ball wasn't so hard then as now, but the boys would sometimes be hurt all the same. One out all out, was the rule, very many will remember.

A STINGER.

There were no umpires those days; the ins and outs quarreled or fought out their differences by themselves. There were no called balls and the pitcher—"thrower" he was called— could use any style of deliver" he choose, only he couldn't send the ball too swiftly.

"Town ball" was another form of the same game, and there were also "one old cat," "two old cat," and "three old cat," "long Dutchman," etc.

The ball games of a score of years ago weren't so scientific as the game of to-day, but there was lots of fun for the boys of those days.—The Referee.

EUROPEAN TOUR OF THE BOSTON AND ATHLETIC CLUBS IN 1874.

The season of 1874 was memorable for the trip of the Boston and Athletic Clubs to England. The clubs left Philadelphia on the steamship Ohio, July 16 of that year. The Athletic contingent numbered about 40 persons including the following players: McBride, Clapp, Anson, McGeary, Sutton, Battin, Gedney, McMullen, Murnane, Fisler, and Sensenderfer. Boston sent Harry Wright, George Wright, Spalding, Burns, Shafer, McVey, Leonard, O'Rourke, Hall, Beals, Sam Wright, and Kent, first baseman of the Harvards, The party arrived in Liverpool July 27. Fourteen games of base ball were played at Liverpool, Manchester, London, Sheffield and Dublin, the Bostons winning eight games and the Athletics six. The Englishmen were much astonished at the wonderful celerity and dexterity displayed by the base ballists in fielding. In cricket, the 18 Americans met with great success, defeating the Marylebone. Prince's and Surrey clubs in London, the Sheffield club, Manchester club and the All Ireland club in Dublin. George Wright bore the palm for the largest score in a match, rolling up 50 runs at Manchester. Nothing occurred to mar the pleasure of the tour, and all spoke highly of their treatment while abroad. The ball tossers left the other side Aug. 27 on the steamship Abbotsford, and after a stormy voyage arrived in Philadelphia Sept. 9.

ADRIAN C. ANSON.

CAPTAIN OF THE CHICAGO BASE BALL CLUB.
CHAMPION LEAGUE BATTER OF 1879, 1881 AND 1887.

Adrian C. Anson. was born at Marshalltown Iowa. in 1853.

He first played with the Forest City Club of Rockford Ill. in 1871, joined the Athletics of Philadelphia in 1872 and accompanied that club to Europe in 1874 when he made quite a record as a cricketer making the highest individual score in the match against the All-Ireland eleven. In 1876 "Ans." as he is familiarly called, joined the Chicago Club from which time his connection with this organization has continued uninterrupted. Captain Anson's fame as a ball player is national. His long connection with the Chicagos and his successful management of a prominent team entitles him to the enviable record he has made for himself. He is a big hearted giant standing over six feet in height and weighing nearly 220 pounds. On the field he is as active as a boy of 18 years. As a batter he stand pre-eminently at the head.

HARRY WRIGHT.

MANAGER PHILADELPHIA BASE BALL CLUB.

Harry Wright the well known manager of the Philadelphia Club, was born in the city of London, Eng., in the year 1832. He came to America when a mere youth. He was a member of the old Knickerbocker Club of New York in 1863. In 1886 the "All-England Eleven" Cricketers came to America on a professional tour and Harry filled a position in the team during their trip. In 1868 he gave up cricket to act as captain of the Cincinnati Base Ball Club. In 1869 he managed and played center-field for the Red Stockings who went through the season without losing a single game. He, organized a club for Boston in 1871 remaining with it until 1879 during which time it captured the pennant five times. In 1880 he managed the Providence Club and then accepted an offer from the Philadelphia Club. Harry Wright has done great and good work for the National Game.

CHICAGOS FAMOUS SECOND BASEMAN.

Fred Pfeffer, the second-baseman of the Chicagos was born in Louisville, Ky., in 1860. He first appeared on the "Diamond" in 1879 in his native city. In 1882 he played short stop in Troy, N Y. The following season he joined the Chicagos and has guarded second base for that club ever since. He ranks as one of the best—and many think the very best—second baseman in the profession. In addition to his phenomenal work at second base, he is considered one of the best "all around players," on the diamond to-day. His unbounded popularity is merited by honest work. Fred never plays for a "record" his club's welfare being the consideration with him. His admirers can always count on his "playing ball" and that of a first-class quality.

His first engagement was with the semi-professional Resolutes of Renovo, Pa. in 1877. He afterwards played with the Williamsport club, the Athletics of Phila., the old Philadelphias, the Mutuals of Janesville Wis., and the Buffalo club In 1878 he was with the Crickets of Binghamton N. Y. until July when he joined the Providence club. Here he remained until 1883 when he became a member of the first NewYork League team and he is still with that club. He was originally a pitcher but his arm gave way and he is now settled as a short-stop. He captained the NewYorks for three years but resigned last season on account of a misunderstanding with the management.

CHAMPION LEAGUE BATTER OF 1884.

James H. O'Rourke, of the New York Base Ball Club, was born in East Bridgeport, Conn., in 1852. His first engagement was with the Mansfield Club of Middletown, Conn., in 1872.

It was his fine work with this club that secured him an engagement with the Boston Club in 1873. He remained with the Bostons until 1879, when he went to Providence with George Wright and helped that team win the championship the second year of their existence.

In 1880 he returned to Boston, but remained but one year, when he accepted a position as captain and manager of the Buffalo Club.

He remained with this club until 1885 when he joined the New York Club, receiving the largest salary ever paid a ball player, viz., $6200. He has remained with this club ever since. He is a first-class catcher, a heavy batter, a first-class base runner, and always in condition to play.

ROGER CONNOR

FIRST BASEMAN OF THE NEW YORKS.

CHAMPION LEAGUE BATTER OF 1885.

Roger Connor hails from Watertown Conn. His first appearance on the ball field was with the Monitors of that city in 1876. For the past six years he has been a member of the New York Club.

Connor is a man of immense stature, stands over six feet in height and weighs over 200 pounds. At the bat he ranks with the best in the profession, heading the batting list in 1885. Mr. Connor, is a man of gentlemanly deportment at all times and a valuable member of the team with which he has so long been identified.

LARGEST ATTENDANCE AT A BALL GAME.

The Athletics of Philadelphia gained much notoriety in 1866 by going through the season with but two defeats; one at the hands of the Atlantics of Brooklyn and the other at the hands of the Unions of Morrisiana, N.Y. The feeling between the Brooklyn and Philadelphia boys ran very high, in fact much higher than at the present time between their successors. They met in Philadelphia. Oct. 1, 1866, and it was estimated that the crowd, outside and inside of the grounds, that gathered to see the game, numbered 40,000, the largest crowd ever known to have gathered to see a base ball contest. The crowd was so great that after one inning had been played it was found impossible to continue the game, and it was postponed until Oct. 22. To prevent a repetition of the former scene, an admission fee of $1 was charged, the largest fee up to that time ever asked for a ball game, yet over 2000 paid admission to the grounds while several thousands tood outside of the grounds. The Athletics, scored 31 runs to 12 for their opponents in seven innings, when the umpire called the game on account of darkness,

BASE BALL ON THE OCEAN.

September 1887 Dr. Chauncey A. Fields of Plainfield, N.J., was a passenger on the City of Chicago, and he discovered that there were at least eighteen good ball-players on board. They were divided into two nines, one being known as Chicagos and the other as the Mets. A ball was secured that was soft and considerably lighter than the regulation base-ball, and attached to it was an almost invisible linen cord of the doctor's own manufacture. One end of the cord was tied to a spot near the pitcher's base. The cord was sixty feet in length, so that the ball could be knocked to any part of the deck without being sent overboard. During the passage a game was played every afternoon, and the spectators were charged 25 cents each. The games, which were very exciting, resulted in a fund of $100 being collected for the Sailors' Home.

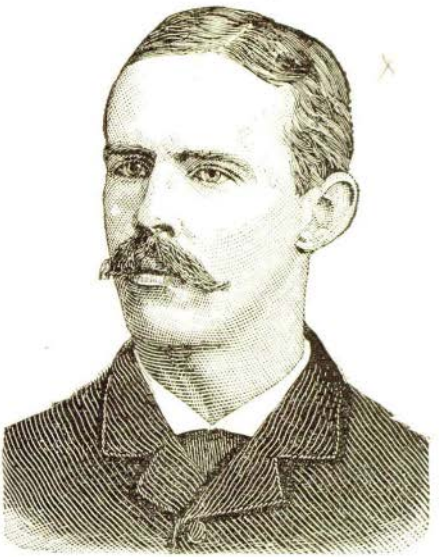
MICHAEL J. KELLY.

THE GREAT ALL AROUND PLAYER OF THE BOSTONS.

"Mike" Kelly, as he is familiarly known to lovers of base ball was born in Troy, N. Y. in 1857. When scarcely twenty years old he made his first appearance as a ball player with the Olympic club of Paterson, N. J. Before the end of the season of 1877 he blossomed forth as a professional in the Buckeye Club of Columbus, O. In 1880 he joined the Chicago League Club, where his fame as a ball player spread from Maine to California. In February 1887 Kelly was released to the Boston Club, the latter organization paying no less than $10,000 to the Chicago's for this transfer, the price paid being unprecedented up to that time in the history of the game. Kelly is genial, witty and intelligent, a great general in a contest, well versed in every point of play, and eminently qualified for the position he has attained.



JOHN G. CLARKSON.

ONE OF THE STAR PITCHERS OF THE LEAGUE.

John G. Clarkson, the star pitcher of the Chicago Club, was released by President Spalding to the Boston Club, April 3, for the sum of $10,000, and immediately signed a contract for the season of 1888. Clarkson first attracted attention as a pitcher with the famous amateur Beacon Club of Boston; in 1881 he accepted a position as pitcher on the Worcester professional team. While with this team he established a reputation for skill and staying powers.

In 1883 he accepted an offer from the Chicago Club, where he remained up to this season. As a pitcher, he has no superior in the profession, and very few equals. In taking position in the box he stands with one foot firmly planted in either corner of the lower end of the square. Moving his right foot quickly across the box, he brings his arm back and, throwing his body forward, delivers the ball. His attitude is graceful and pleasing to the eye, and his work very effective.

PHENOMENAL GAMES.

Phenomenal games by reason of their length have been numerous, and of these may be mentioned the 5 to 5, 15 inning game at Louisville, Ky., July 8, 1876; the 8 to 5 16 inning game between the same clubs, July 10 following, when the Mutuals won. May 11, 1877, on the Boston grounds, the Harvard University and Manchester, N. H., clubs played 24 innings without a run being scored on either side, the Harvard battery being the famous Ernst and Tyng, and for Manchester Snigg and Carl. Coggswell of Manchester put out 31 men on first base without an error, while catcher Tyng put out 36 men behind the bat. On May 1 of the same year the St. Louis and Stars of Syracuse played 15 innings, without a run being scored on either side. The pitchers were Nichols and McCormick. July 9, at Columbus, O., the Buckeye and Tecumseh clubs played 18 innings, with the score, one run each. June 29, 1878, at Philadelphia, the Yeager nine of Philadelphia defeated the Girard College nine, 10 to 7 in 21 innings. O'Brien and Milligan, afterward with the Athletics, caught for the two teams. August 7, 1882, Radbourn of Providence made a home run in the 18th inning, the only one in the match with Providence at Detroit. June 4, 1880, the Providence-Chicago game stood 1 to 1 16 innings. June 24, 1882, Metropolitan and Philadelphia clubs scored 2 runs each in 15 innings. June 16, 1884, the Boston and Providence game stood 1 to 1, and in that season Providence beat Boston 4 to 3, 15 innings.

The most interesting game this year (1888) up to the time of going to press, was between the Washington and New York clubs April 23, at Washington, the score at the end of 12 innings being 1 to 1 when the game was called on account of darkness.

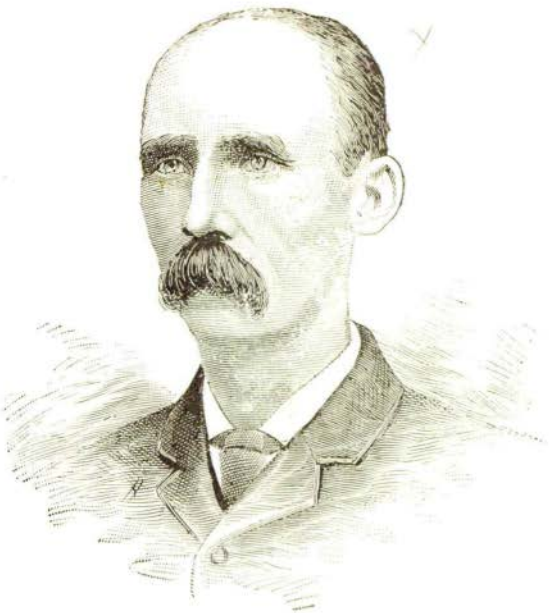
DAN BROUTHERS.

FIRST BASEMAN OF THE DETROITS.

CHAMPION LEAGUE BATTER OF 1882 AND 1883.

Dan Brouthers was born at Sylvan Lake, N. Y. in 1858. He first appeared as a ball player with the Active Club of Wappinger Falls, N. Y., in 1876. Afterwards with the Haymakers of Lansingburg, N. Y., Troy, N. Y., league club, Baltimores, Brooklyns, and Buffalos. In 1885 he was transferred from the Buffalo to the Detroit Club, with which team he is still connected. Like Anson and Connor, Brouthers is a man of great physic and weight As a first baseman he is one of the best in the country. Mr. Brouthers is deservedly popular with the patrons of the game and is considered one of the stalwarts both at the bat and in the field.



JAS. L. WHITE.

THIRD BASEMAN OF THE DETROITS.

CHAMPION LEAGUE BATTER OF 1877.

James L. White was born in Canton, N. Y., in 1848. For twenty years he has been identified with the game of base ball. In 1868 he joined the Forest City Club of Cleveland, he remained with that team until 1873 when he joined the Bostons. In 1876 he became a member of the Chicago Club but returned to Boston the following year. 1878 found him with the Cincinnati League Club, three years later he went to Buffalo. In 1885 he joined the Detroits with which team he is still playing active ball. The "Deacon" is one of the best known players in the country, and carries with becoming modesty the honors he has earned upon the diamond.

LONG-DISTANCE THROWING.

Henry Chadwick has this to say on the subject of old-time throwers: "Some tall throwing was done by players in the old time, but no one up to the present time has been legally credited with excelling Hatfield's efforts. Hatfield's throw of 400 feet 7½ inches, made in October, 1872, rates as the best record, according to Clipper records. Ed Crane claims to have thrown a regulation ball 406 feet at Cincinnati in 1884, and 402 feet in St. Louis the same year; but the throwing was not sufficiently authenticated in the correctness of the measurement to go on record." Harry Wright related some years ago an instance which presents some tall throwing by Hatfield Harry in a letter to the Clipper in July, 1868, says: "Yesterday we had some 'ball tossing' on our ground that, I believe, has never been equaled in this country or in England. There had been some bets made that Johnny Hatfield could not throw a base ball 127 yards clear. If there was any wind he was to throw across it. If he succeeded he was to get a suit of clothes. In the betting, distance was the favorite. I was umpire. We measured off the ground and about 3 o'clock he took his first throw. Distance, 123 yards. Second throw, 129 yards 1 foot. Third throw, 132 yards. A total in three successive throws of 1,153 feet. As there was a slight breeze, and as some said it helped him, I got him to throw the ball back His first throw was 127 yards 1½ feet. Second throw, 127 yards 1 foot. Third throw, 126 yards A total of 1,112 feet 6 inches, and a grand total in six throws, three each way, of 2,265 feet 6 inches. Now this you can depend upon as being correct, as I measured the distance myself, and Messrs. G. B. Ellard, Brainard, Waterman, Howe, and several other well-known ball players were present. It was a regulation base ball he threw."

PRIZES FOR PLAYERS.

The American Association has made a good move in the right direction, by an offer of three cash prizes for the first three clubs of 1888, $1,000, $750. and $500. respectively which will be awarded and the money divided among the players. Besides this the members of the team that wins the championship will receive handsome gold medals. Suppose such a system had been in vogue in the League all these years, many of the players would be wearing a whole row of gold medals on their vests, and their bank accounts would be materially increased.

THE WORD'S SERIES 1886.

COMPLETE RECORD OF GAMES FOR THE Championship of the World BETWEEN THE CHICAGOS CHAMPIONS OF THE NATIONAL LEAGUE AND THE ST. LOUIS BROWNS CHAMPIONS OF THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION.

In this series the system of having two umpires and a referee was tried. John Kelly was selected as referee, and John McQuaid and Joseph Quest acted as umpires. It was not a success, and the old system of having but one umpire was carried out for the balance of the series.

UMPIRES OF THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION, SEASON 1888.

JOHN H. GAFFNEY.
ROBERT FERGUSON.
JOHN McQUAID.
HERMAN DOESCHER.

THE WORLD SERIES, 1887.

Complete record of games for the championship of the world, between the Detroits, champions of the National League, and the St. Louis Browns, champions of the American Association.

In these games the double umpire system was adopted, and gave great satisfaction. The umpires were J. H. Gaffney, manager of the Washington League Club, and John Kelly, manager of the Louisvilles, both men possessing large experience in the position.

The clubs played fifteen games in all, St. Louis winning five games and the Detroits ten games. The attendance at these fifteen games was over fifty thousand. The receipts amounted to about $42,000; expenses, $18,000, leaving a balance of $24,000, which was equally divided between the two clubs. The clubs traveled in special cars, and the whole affair was carried forward on a scale of magnificence never before attempted in the Base Ball world.
