Impressions of First White Man to View 'Grand Saline' Found

Maj. George C. Sibley Describes in Diary,
Written in 1811, Wonders of Great Salty
Plain in Northwest Oklahoma.

Major and Mrs. George C. Sibley.

Globe-Democrat Staff Writer.

IMPRESSIONS of the first white man, Maj. George C. Sibley, United States Army, who ever saw the "Grand Saline," now called the Salt Plains, in Northwest Oklahoma, appear in Maj. Sibley's diary of 1811, recently unearthed among centennial archives at Lindenwood College. Maj. Sibley was a founder of Lindenwood in 1827. His diary gives a narrative of the ways of the Osages and other tribes of that time, which he observed in his capacity of United States Commissioner to the Indians.

He traveled on horseback in the Southwest, between May 11 and July 11, 1811, covering in that time "nearly 1000 miles." Before that period, his diary states, the Salines had been "unknown except to the Indians." The great salty plain is still one of the wonders of Northwest Oklahoma.

With an eye to his country's future, Maj. Sibley describes the vast extent of dazzling white salt crust, which he believes he is "safe within the mark" in stating to be "thirty miles in circumference." He thought it could be reached by commerce: "The Grand Saline is probably not exceeding eighty or, at most, 100 miles from a navigable part of the Arkansas, and I am of the opinion that a good wagon road may be easily made from one to the other in a pretty direct line. Whether an attempt will ever be made to draw this inexhaustible store of ready-made salt into the channels of commerce, or not, I will not now inquire; but if it should ever be found desirable to do so, I do not entertain a doubt of its practicability."

Accounts for Salt Mountain.

Maj. Sibley had, of course, read those fabulous words in President Jefferson's message to Congress, a few years preceding, after the purchase of the Louisiana Territory, in which the President had told of "a tribe of giant Indians," and of "giant bluffs carved into antique towers," with "prairie lands too rich to produce trees," adding as the climax of all, that "1000 miles up the Mississippi" there was "a vast Saline mountain system, all salt, 180 miles long and forty-five miles wide." Doubtless, too, Maj. Sibley had chuckled over the New York Evening Post's easy ridicule of Jefferson's extravaganzas: "La, wouldn't anything grow in salt? We had supposed there would be trees of salt," and so on.

His diary accounts for the "Jefferson Salt Mountain" story as having been created by "a waggish Spanish trader." "No white men," he writes, "as San Orelle and the chiefs assured me, had ever yet been known to have visited either of the Salines, and all that was known of them was through some vague Indian stories, told with much exaggeration by a waggish Spanish trader to Maj. Stoddard, whose well-known credulity on all that related to the wonderful in the far unexplored West was frequently abused. This story, passing through the medium of the Major's pen to Washington City gave rise to the famous 'Salt Mountain' story.

"A good wagon road" has long ago been made to the salt plains, and Maj. Sibley's story, like that of many another explorer, is of more interest in its incidental narrative than in his actual discoveries. Latitude and longitude were recorded, going first 'south, 60 degrees west, about 75 miles' from Fort Osage, then northwest 65 miles to the Konsee (Kansas) village; weaving onward through the hunting grounds of the Pawnee Loups, where he fattened apace," and finally leaving the Pawnees with a course 'south about 16 degrees east' to the camp of the Little Osages on the bank of the Arkansaw, June 4, from which the start was to be made to the Grand Saline.

"I was received with a hint of sober hospitality," he says, "bordering on affection, showing that I was not regarded by them as a stranger, but rather as one (in some sense) belonging to the tribe. They had been encamped where I found them, about 10 days, and had already killed upwards of 200 buffaloes.

Camps With Indians.

"As they proposed to continue their route toward the Great Saline in a few days, and my horses were much jaded, I concluded to remain with them till they moved on, and to travel with them for a few days; in order to witness what I was curious to see—a whole tribe, men, women and children, horses and dogs, with all their movable effects, enjoying the summer buffalo hunt in the vast prairies of the West. For their great hunt is literally a season of enjoyment with all these roaming tribes. It is whilst they are thus employed that they appear to the best advantage."

They passed to "a small prairie creek," south of the Arkansaw, and Maj. Sibley notes that "the moment you set foot on the southwest side of the Arkansaw River, you observe a striking difference in the face of the whole country. The river's branches that fall in from the northeast side are all clear and fringed with trees, but those from the southwest side are all deeply tinged with red and are deficient in trees and are slightly brackish. The soil is very red, the country is all prairie, and from its appearance when I passed over, it must very recently have been overrun with buffalo, but the buffaloes themselves had fled far away."

Thirty miles more, southeast now, to the hunting camp of the Great Osages, "who welcomed me with much kindness." Crossing two rivers, "both rapid, shallow and red," brought them to the Arkansas Osages, or Cha-nees. "I was received by the chief, Clee-mo, very cordially. Indeed I consider myself pretty much at home with any of the Osages.

Encircled by Sand.

"We now stand very nearly due west, and in that direction traveled about thirty-two miles over broken prairie, crossing a number of creeks, all red and rapid, and on most of them found some scattering elm trees. Under one of these we camped for the night, having now arrived at a sandy region by which the Grand Saline is entirely encircled. In the morning pretty early we pursued our way, still west, eight miles to the Grand Saline, over a range of barren sand hills (not red sand), on the sides of which were here and there a few dwarf thorn bushes not over 30 inches high, from which we gathered abundance of very large delicious red plums."

They passed "through an intervening skirt of cotton trees," the Indian guides being quite on the alert, as "some of their people had been waylaid and killed by a band of Padoucas in that very wood." They crossed then "a curious river, divided by sand banks into three channels, each about 20 yards wide, its water of a deep red color, running pretty rapidly southwest to the Arkansasaw.

"Being now safely landed over this curious looking river I found myself on a level, hard, sandy plain, the southern side or extremity of the Grand Saline, and I had leisure quietly to contemplate the wonderful scene before me, far surpassing anything that I had ever pictured to my mind from the descriptions I had obtained from Indians."

Here follows the first white man's description of the Salt Plain, written in 1811:

"It is a perfectly smooth and nearly level plain of red sand, so hard on the surface that our horses made no impression with their hoofs, except on the thin crust of salt with which it was entirely covered. As our horses moved about, the idea of riding over ground covered with sleet occurred to us all, and we remarked with one voice in the same breath, the striking similitude.

"My eye is pretty well practiced in making estimates of distance in the prairies, but here it was impossible, from the nature of the surface, white and shining, to arrive at any satisfactory conclusion from mere visual observation. I had no instruments. I questioned my intelligent friend, Sans Oreille (Osage War Chief), as to how long it would take to travel round it on the outer sandy rim of the plain. He had never been round it, but made a guess, as did the other Osages present. Finally I believe I am safe within the mark when I state, as I do now, that the Grand Saline is fully thirty miles in circumference. I mean the sandy plain that I saw covered entirely with salt on the 24th of June.

"The salt crust was pretty, uniformly of the thickness of a wafer, in some places nearly thrice that thickness, and was the production of less than twenty-four hours of sunshine, interrupted by frequent intervals of cloudiness. For ten days previous to my arrival at the Saline, till two days before, it had been excessively rainy. Such torrents had fallen that the two small rivers that run on each side of the plain, nearly encircling it, were, after two days' cessation of rain, nearly swimming our horses, and had evidently inundated the whole plain, as appeared from the driftwood that lay scattered over it. Still more evident from a little fish that I picked up more than two miles from either stream. Sans Oreille affirmed that the two streams ordinarily do not contain as much depth of water as would swim a dog.

"If I had arrived two days sooner than I did I should have found but a very slight appearance of salt, probably none at all, and the whole plain flooded. But if we had got there twelve or fifteen days earlier we should have found it entirely covered over with a beautiful, clean, white crust of salt from 2 to 6 inches in thickness, of a quality quite equal, I think, to the imported 'blown salt,' perfectly clean and fit for use.

Highly Gratified.

"I was highly gratified. This beautiful, white, dazzling surface, bordered by a fringe of verdant green, has the effect of looming, as the sailors call it, producing to the unpracticed eye much delusion. The plain was sprinkled over with numerous small herds of buffaloes, only one of which (consisting of some thirty or forty) appeared to be at all disturbed. That one herd appeared to be so near that I was unable to resist the temptation for a chase. My horse was fleet, though somewhat tired; however, I called to a young Osage, who was well mounted on a trained buffalo horse and equipped with bows and arrows (far better than any other weapons), to accompany me.

"At first he declined, saying the buffaloes were too far off; but, seeing me resolved on the chase and willing, I suppose, to let me convince myself, he set out with me. The buffaloes were crossing our course at right angles and were going at their utmost speed. What I had supposed would prove 500 yards to intercept them turned out to be more than a mile. We met our chase, to speak nautically, exactly at right angles from where we started, and the Osage dispatched two of them in the most graceful style, while I shot uselessly two others with my pistols. I am sure we saw the rest of the drove running in the same direction fully half an hour, and yet they appeared almost within gunshot. So great and deceptive is the looming on the salt plain."

They helped themselves to "some nice cuts" from the dead buffaloes for their suppers and struck off to the Little Osage hunting camp.

"They were living most luxuriously on buffalo beef, tongues, marrowbones, hominy, dried pumpkins, plums and other dainties. All was mirth and merriment. I never witnessed so much apparent happiness so generally pervading an Indian nation. And being pretty much at home with them, I entered into the spirit of their enjoyment, at least so far as was consistent with my station—a consideration that I have made it invariably a point of duty never to lose sight of.

"I have ever felt it to be very wrong for any white man having the advantages of a Christian education (and much more so, if he occupies an official station among them) so far to forget himself in presence of the Indians, on any occasion, as to compromise his proper dignity of character, by any frivolity of conduct or conversation. My own influence with the tribes within my agency has been very much increased by a scrupulous adherence to this rule."

There was an expedition to the other saline, known as the rock saline, southwest seventy-five miles from the Osage camp. The trip was considered dangerous, and a war escort of ninety-four young braves accompanied him. This rock saline, which suggests Jefferson's "Salt Mountain" in a small way, is described by Maj. Sibley: The first white man to see it, the same as the Grand Saline.

"The rock saline is on a smaller scale," he writes, "being not more than 500 acres in extent. It is surrounded by very high hills, formed chiefly of gypsum of various qualities, and flint and red clay. From the crevices of these hills issue many springs of salt water, which spreading slowly over the flat is converted by the action of the sun to hard salt, more or less abundant according to the weather. A long continuation of very hot, dry weather produces a solid mass of salt from 5 to 12 inches thick, very much resembling a large pond of water covered with rough ice. At one of the springs I hewed out a piece of salt 16 inches thick, then dug about a foot below the surface of the ground, and still found a solid mass of salt. An Indian, seeing me digging, laughingly asked me if I expected to dig to the bottom."

FORMER INDEPENDENCE GIRL WRITES A SPLENDID ARTICLE

Miss Mary Mason, daughter of Captain Paul B. Mason, and a student of Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo., has recently had a most interesting essay published in the literary supplement of The Linden Bark, the college paper. This paper published only a few of the best themes written by the students of the college. Miss Mason's essay, the title of which is "The Old Quay at Bideford, England," is clever and most interestingly written.

While she was a student in the Independence high school, her scholastic standing was so high that she was given a membership in the National Honor Society chapter of our school.

Miss Mason lives at 208 East Locust.

"The Old Quay at Bideford, England."

I was sitting on that old rotting wharf at Bideford, in the county of Devonshire. The late afternoon sun was hot and enervating, and I was rapidly growing more sleepy. Suddenly a faint rasping voice seemed to come from under me:

"Young sir," it said, "let me tell you my story. It is a part of England's greatest history, and I thought it might interest the heir of England's greatest lords. One hundred and fourteen years ago to night I first told it to a young French sailor, whose ship was docking here at that time. It was a clear, windy night and he restlessly walked to and fro on my back."

I murmured, more astonished than I had been in my life, for the voice to continue, that I would be most pleased to listen to its tale. I stretched out in a more comfortable position and gave my attention to this strange utterance.

"I was built during the reign of Henry VIII when he was beginning to take a greater interest in things marine. At that time I was used mostly by fishermen who docked their little smacks by me, and on me they threw their ill-smelling piles of fish.

"As time went on Bideford became more important as a port, and during Elizabeth's reign it was as much used as any harbor in England. I became the meeting place of ships from every part of the world, Portuguese whalers, with their swarthy crews, strange Chinese craft, Russian ships with cargoes of fur.

"I have felt the reassured tramp of soldiers' feet when ships of the hated Spaniards were sighted off the coast. Across me have rushed merry sailors, eager to push off to Francis Drake's great ship, which was to voyage around the world, and bring fresh fame to Bideford and to England. I have seen and heard the tender goodbyes of rough-bearded fishermen and their wives, of young sailors and their clinging sweethearts; the goodbyes of the young Spaniard, a prisoner, who was escaping home, and a young Devon maid, whom he afterward married. I have witnessed terrific storms and seen great schooners thrown against the rocks.

"During the war with the rebellious Americans, many ships embarked from me, carrying unnumbered soldiers and sailors, that never returned. The gallant Nelson left here on his way to Trafalgar, and sailed back, landing his victorious ships to port.

"I will pass over the events of several hundred years, for it is growing late, and tell you about one day late in the year of 1914 when embarked from my side the pick and flower of British manhood. Young Irish, Scotch, and English lords and dukes and marquises, whose military training had been a part of their education, and who answered the call for men immediately. These filled the lines while others were being trained and were mowed down by the thousands. Many a noble family was in mourning in those days.

"Now nothing more warlike comes to my sides than millionaires' yachts and swift white sailed boats that come down for the races. No longer do great ships leave to explore unknown continents as did Walter Raleigh's vessel on its voyage to the Virginias, nor do they set out for distant battlefields. Frequently a trading vessel stops on its way to the larger harbors of Liverpool and Southampton.

"It has been most kind of you so to listen to an old quay's tale. I am glad that I had much more to recount to you than I told to that lad from France that night so long ago. I hope that sometime I may have more stirring events to tell you, if in the meantime I am not torn down."

The voice became indistinct and mingled with the waters whirling around the old piles. I started and roused myself. Had I been asleep and dreaming, or had I really heard these strange things? Standing up I shook myself, then started home. I walked along the beach, passed the new quay, concrete, and bright with electric lights. I had spent the entire afternoon at the beach and it was now dusk. Would this new wharf ever see the strange and thrilling sights that the old one had? Would it ever see ships starting out for conquest or for battle, loaded with gallant, eager men whose acts would make glowing history? I wondered.

"FRIENDLY ENEMIES" AT LINDENWOOD COLLEGE

The faculty of Lindenwood College will present its annual play Friday night, February 4, at 7:45 o'clock, in Roemer Auditorium. The production this year is to be "Friendly Enemies," by Samuel Shipman and Aaron Hoffman, and the proceeds will be for the Mary Easton Sibley scholarship fund.

Dr. Fannie Fern Smith, new professor of biology and botany, will play the role of "Henry Block"; another leading part, "Karl Pfeiffer," is to be taken by Miss Mary C. Olsen, professor of history.

Miss Cora Edwards, vocal music, is to be "Walter Stuart"; Miss Florence Schaper of the sociology chair, will be "Nora"; Miss Mary Terhune, Spanish teacher, will be "Marie Pfeiffer"; Miss Gene Gustavus, physical education, "William Pfeiffer," and Miss Harriet Diven of the oratory department, "June Block."

The play has been coached by Miss Lucia P. Hutchins of Lindenwood's oratory department, assisted by Miss Josephine Chandler. Music will be furnished by the faculty orchestra.

The faculty play always ranks as one of the most clever skits of the year at Lindenwood. A number of local hits and original jokes will be interspersed with the lines of the play.

THE CHELSEA REPORTER

CONDUCT OUT OF COLLEGE

(By Mildred Milam)

The keenest intelligence in Lindenwood has recently made her keenest observation. The intelligence is, of course, the Campus Hound, author of the Linden Bite. The observation is that the actions of girls in public places are what they and the school they are from are judged by. Most girls do not seem to realize this. When they leave the college, instead of being their own sweet selves, they try to act cute, and when they attract some attention they think they are 'getting over big'. This is not the case. On the contrary, they succeed only in getting themselves criticized for their boisterous behavior. Some people, more broad minded than the average laugh tolerantly, for they know that these are only silly little girls who will realize some day that they are not on the right road to popularity. Then they will become their natural selves again.

But meanwhile, the school is judged by the actions of its students. When girls go out and pick up dates they think they are having a thrill. They are, in reality, only gaining ridicule and disgust for themselves, as well as disrespect for the school.

Girls come to Lindenwood from all parts of the country. When they go home each one is a personal representative of the school, and it is her responsibility to see that she does nothing that will in any way cause the standard of the school to be lowered. How else can people judge a school than by the product it turns out? They cannot come in person to see it.

The reputation of Lindenwood has been built up by a hundred years of toil, a hundred years of hard, faithful work. Is it to be jeopardized now by a few silly girls seeking a thrill? A reputation is a very precious thing. It cannot be bought and it cannot be acquired in a year or even a few years. It takes many years of faithful, unremitting work to build up a good reputation, especially such a one as Lindenwood has. Is this thing, more precious than gold, to be thrown away by a few girls because they lack the proper school spirit?—Linden Bark, Literary Supplement.

(Note: The above article is re-printed from The Linden Bark, student publication of Lindenwood College for Girls at St. Charles, Mo. Miss Milam, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Milam of Chelsea, is in her first years attendance at this college.)

BANK CLOSED TO BLOCK RUN WHEN CASHIER ENDS LIFE

First National of Jerseyville, Ill., Checking to Learn if
F. D. Heller Was Short in Accounts.

EXAMINER CALLED

He Had 14-Room Home and Lived Well on $150 a Month Salary—Bank's Deposits $300,000.

Residents of Jerseyville, Ill., are waiting to learn if there is a shortage at the First National Bank, which closed its doors yesterday after Frank D. Heller, cashier for 20 years, killed himself at his home.

It was learned from an authoritative source that the bank's affairs were not in proper shape three weeks ago when Federal bank examiners called. Edward Nelson, president of the bank, told the Post-Dispatch on the telephone that the examination of the books had not progressed far enough to determine whether there is a shortage.

The bank had more than $300,000 in deposits. It is capitalized at $50,000.

Prompt action by the board of directors shortly after noon yesterday, when news of Heller's suicide got around the town, prevented a run. The bank closed and a small crowd of depositors which gathered around the doors was told that no money would be paid out until the examination had been completed.

Van S. Sailer of St. Louis, a Federal bank examiner, arrived in Jerseyville yesterday morning and conferred with Cashier Heller and other officials. Shortly after this conference Heller went to his home for lunch. He talked despondently to his wife and soon afterward shot himself in the head with a revolver. Mrs. Heller said at the inquest, yesterday, that he had been melancholy for about three weeks and that his mental state had become more troubled during the last week.

Salary $150 a Month.

More startling than the closing of the bank to townspeople was the news that Cashier Heller might have been responsible. Heller, a dignified man of 51, had been one of Jerseyville's foremost citizens. Thinking back on his life now his friends say in a surprised way: "He did live pretty high for a bank cashier."

Heller's salary for a long period was $100 a month, but in recent years it was reported as much as $150 a month, but never more. As is the case with many small town bankers, he had a number of irons in the fire, including stock in the bank, and his income in total was vague.

Occupied 14-Room House.

The Heller residence is a 14-room frame house on the outskirts of town. The family always dressed well and had good automobiles. Cashier Heller was a stockholder in the Jerseyville Ice & Fuel Co. and the Jerseyville Nursery. How he managed to live as a leading citizen, buy interests in other businesses and send a daughter to Lindenwood College on a salary of from $100 to $150 a month has become suddenly a mysterious conjecture in Jerseyville. Before he killed himself and the bank closed few ever thought about it. Heller was accepted as a solid substantial business man.

He was a member of the Presbyterian Church and the Heller family is socially prominent in Jerseyville. There are two daughters, Helen, 18, and Virginia, 14. Heller's career in Jerseyville began when he went to work for the First National Bank as an errand boy. He was the second largest stockholder of the bank.

Search for Halo on Everything, Advises Rev. R. C. Dobson

Presbyterian Pastor Delivers Vesper Address at Lindenwood.

Rev. Dr. R. Calvin Dobson, executive secretary of the St. Louis Presbytery, gave the vesper address last night at Lindenwood College in Roemer auditorium, speaking on "The Glory of the Commonplace," with the text from the Psalms, "Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things."

Dr. Dobson spoke of the experience of Moses when he discovered God in the burning bush; of Jeremiah when he discovered God in the budding almond tree, and of Wordsworth's conception of the primrose flower as "the court of Deity." The autograph of a famous woman in a birthday book was quoted, who said her greatest wish was that "life might never lose its halo."

Halo on Everything.

"If we have the right sort of eyes and the right kind of spirit," the speaker said, "we will be able to see the halo on everything. Life is made up of commonplace things. Marvelous experiences are unusual. We need to find the halo on the people we meet every day."

"We need to see the halo of possibilities in the youth of today. Arnold of Rugby once said that if the time ever came when he received a new pupil in his class without a new emotion it was time for him to be off.

"We need to see the halo on the head of the prodigal and the alien people in our midst. We need even to see the halo on ourselves. Someone told Horace Greeley, when he finished one of his orations, that he had not done his best yet. There is the halo of a greater accomplishment.

Millet's Angelus.

"Whatever our vocation may be, we need to see the halo on our work. This is illustrated in Millet's painting of the Angelus, where the strong light rests on the spade and the wheelbarrow—tokens of toil.

"Christ made the halo rest on a common experience we call death. He took away its terrors and made death no longer frightful.

"The glory of the commonplace is shown in the beatitudes of Jesus. He said, 'Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God.' Simple purity shall be so rewarded. Faith shall enable us to see the glory of the commonplace everywhere."

LINDENWOOD PRODUCES CENTENNIAL CALENDAR

Miss Grace Walker of Kirkwood, and Miss Mildred Smith of Augusta, Kan., both students of Public School Art at Lindenwood College, have designed an unusual and attractive calendar for the centennial year of the college. Every Lindenwood Student received one of these calendars, which have the heading, "A New Year Greet's You and a New Century Greet's Lindenwood," on New Year's Day.

Two generations of girls are represented in the illustration. On one side are three young women representing the student, the graduate, and the sports of 1827. These figures, with their tight waists, ruffled and trailing skirts, and croquet mallets, form a striking contrast to the Lindenwood girls of 1927, with their short, comfortable dresses, shingled heads, and their golf clubs. Between these pictured groups, one can see a drawing of the small log cabin which composed all of the buildings of the college 100 years ago, and above it appears a mammoth birthday cake, holding 100 lighted candles.

Christmas Used by Many to Impose on Charity, Says Speaker

Requests for Donations in 1926 Surpassed Other Years, He Finds.

Requests for this year's Christmas benefactions were "five times as great as in previous years," at Markham Memorial Presbyterian Institutional Church, 1614 Menard street, it was stated by Rev. Dr. George Wales King, in an address yesterday at Lindenwood College in Roemer Auditorium. Closing of numerous industries, putting men out of work, has impoverished families, which made no provision for maintenance.

"They immediately were without funds and possessed nothing but their flivver. Yes, they had a flivver, purchased when the man was getting good wages, but when the wages stopped, they couldn't realize anything from their car. They couldn't even burn it for fuel. It takes but a short time for really hard times to fall upon people who do not possess thrift."

Deceive Charity Givers.

At the other extreme, Dr. King told several amusing stories of extremely "thrifty" individuals or families who had ways of deceiving charity investigators. He knew of one case, which he heard of accidentally through a neighbor, where a family moved the piano and other good articles of furniture into the front room, locking the door and leaving the rest of the house bare, with every appearance of poverty, when the charity agents called. "No less than six organizations had been helping that family."

Unsigned letters, he said, had been received in the same hand by several charitable organizations, one of which responded, describing the case of "a poor old man, alone in the world, with two little boys to take care of," where investigation showed that he was a prosperous, well-paid mechanic, and his sons, 26 and 28 years old, were each earning excellent wages.

Instances of Poverty.

In contrast, Dr. King told of a Hungarian woman, so reticent and loyal to her best standards, that she refused to take assistance, although she and her children were greatly in need. She excused herself, saying "her husband would not like it," her husband being very ill. She asked that instead of giving her a Christmas basket, prayers be offered for his recovery. He died on Christmas Day.

In another case Dr. King discovered a family of wife and small children who were living for eight days on one dollar, the husband having the promise of work at the end of that period. Quoting the Scripture passage, "It is more blessed to give than to receive," he said: "It is, indeed, far more blessed to give than it is to be in a condition necessary to receive aid."

Dr. King thanked the Lindenwood girls for gifts aiding in the Christmas for poor people around Markham Church.

RUTH BAKER WRITES
"ON CHOOSING A ROOMMATE"

Miss Ruth Baker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Baker, Jr., has been recognized in Lindenwood College for an essay on "Choosing a Roommate".
The article appears below as it was published in the campus paper "Linden Bark".

It is quite an accomplishment for a freshman to write such an article.
Miss Baker is doing work of a high quality in college this year.

The task of choosing a roommate is something that comes sooner or later to all those who enter college or university life.

This is Miss Baker's version of:
"Choosing a Roommate".

Choosing a husband has often been cited as a difficult problem. Choosing a roommate is doubly difficult and seems to be your greatest problem as a freshman. A husband goes to work and stays away most of the day. A roommate is like the poor, ever present. Some times she even goes to class with you. If she is very devoted she always escorts you to the library, the post office, to meals and down town.

A husband is usually indifferent concerning the decoration of his wife and home, as long as their general appearance pleases him but the eye of a roommate is all for details. To her a soiled handkerchief flung carelessly upon the dresser, an inartistic smear of powder upon the cheek, are criminal.

Unlike a husband a roommate does not pay for the household accessories.
Yet she expects you to have them, and furthermore, she expects them to harmonize with hers.

A roommate shares your joys, your sorrows and your food.

A studious roommate is an irritation to your conscience. A frivolous roommate is a hindrance to your absorption of knowledge. A temperamental roommate thinks that you are distracted.

Who can find a congenial roommate? For her price is far above ru-bies and constitutes one's greatest problem as a freshman.

Christ Personifies the Living Word, Says Dr. N. L. Euwer

Semester.

"The Living Word," as personified in Jesus Christ, "the test and proof of all the Holy Scriptures," was presented by Rev. N. L. Euwer, assistant pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, at vesper service at Roemer Hall, Lindenwood College, last night. This was the concluding service of the fall semester. The spring centennial semester, for which many former students are returning, will begin Friday.

Rev. Euwer emphasized the value of a spiritual, personal interpretation of the word of God. In this connection he defended the clergy in general against random charges of unbelief.

"I would like to be one to give assurance," he said, "that ministers of the church believe the Bible. Men and women who create a suspicion in the minds of others as to any minister's acceptance of the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament, do great harm and should by every possible means of grace seek to have their suspicious minds transformed to a perfect charity.

Confidence in Ministers.

"I have confidence in all the ministers I know that, without any mental reservation, they will answer affirmatively the question in its official form put to our candidates for the ministry: 'Do you believe the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament to be the word of God, the only infallible rule of faith and practice?'"

Speaking of the familiar doctrine that "religious speech and teaching should be tested by the scripture," he said also that the supreme test should be the "living word," as revealed in the personality of Christ. "In all ages mankind has been seeking for something more than ideas. They have wanted a person, like Jesus, in whom they might see goodness face to face."

As to the Bible, it was defined as "a book that finds men and makes them better. It makes the false man true, the foul man clean, the mean man generous. It purifies and exalts and transfigures human character."

"We would defend the Bible as the stronghold of faith. We would praise God for such hold as it has upon men today. There is a secret in the book, and the secret is to be found in the transition from the written word to the personal word.

"God, who had spoken at sundry times and in divers manners in the prophets, spoke finally in his son. God's last word is Christ; who says, 'He that hath seen me, hath seen the father.' The purpose of the scriptures is to lead us to Christ, the living word."

Jerseyville Girls in Lindenwood Musical.

Miss Helen Massey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Massey and Miss Frances Ware, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Ware, both of this city, who are attending Lindenwood College at St. Charles, Mo., appeared in a musical recital presented by students of the college on Tuesday afternoon. The program consisted of piano, vocal and violin numbers. Miss Massey sang three solos, one of which was "Celia" from an old French melody. Miss Ware sang "Sleep Song" and a selection by Salter.

Miss Elizabeth Sauer Writes Essay.

Miss Elizabeth Sauer of Evansville, a student of Lindenwood College this winter, has recently had one of her essays published in the college paper. This paper, the Linden Bark, publishes only a few of the best themes written by the students of the school.

The essay has the title, "A Small Apartment," and it is most cleverly written theme. It reflects the spirit of the modern college girl. Moreover, the style of Miss Sauer's writing is very original and unique, and it is expected that many more of her themes will be published. The essay as it was printed appears below:

A SMALL APARTMENT.

By Bettie Sauer

Webster says: "A closet is a small apartment or recess in a room for clothing." I have no right to dispute Mr. Webster's word, and I do not, except in that one little statement he makes in the last part of that definition. I agree with him when he says that a closet is a "small apartment," but, when he limits his definition to clothing; it is then that his definition ceases to fit my own little cave in the wall.

My closet is the source of my greatest sorrow. Twelve-thirteenths of my time I spend hunting for things in its grotesque interior, and trying to restore the countless things in its confused interior to a semblance of order. The other thirteenth, those rare times when I have succeeded in getting the thousands of things (at least the visible ones) arranged in an orderly manner. I stand before it and gloat over the orderliness as a miser would over a bag of gold. I call my friends in to look at this object of my adoration, and am disappointed when they do not become enthused

My little playmate, who shares my room with me, does not like trunks in the room. To keep peace and harmony in our domicile, I shoved my trunk into my closet. What difference would one little trunk, more or less, make in that closet? Not much, certainly, except that certain things have a peculiar audacity for falling behind it. I make a desperate attempt to retrieve fallen articles; at the end of fifteen minutes I am still standing on my left ear, while my right big toe is engaged in a fantastic polka. "Ah! there I have you, insolent creatures!" And as I emerge, my clothes almost torn off, my hair disheveled, I succeed in bringing down upon me all my dresses. Surely the gods are against me. "Oib! Zeus, what have I done to offend thee?"

Sometimes I think there is a little old man, a mean wretched, little old man who lives in my closet. He stays in there all the time, and lives on my food. He must have a huge appetite, because my food disappears like magic. I guess he does get hungry though, he gets so much exercise, knocking down my clothes, musing up my drawers in my trunk, and hiding the mates to my shoes. I know that little old man is the cause of all my grief with that closet of mine; but I'll keep on feeding him, and I'll keep on picking up the clothes he knocks down, hoping that I shall never see him.

MISS MARION ROBB HAS POEM PUBLISHED

Miss Marion Robb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Robb, who is a sophomore at Lindenwood college, St. Charles, Mo., has recently had a poem published in "Linden Bark," one of the college publications. This is an honor, for only the best literary contributions are published. Miss Robb is a member of both the French and International Relations clubs at the college. The poem which she contributed is as follows:

AT TWILIGHT

At Twilight when the stars creep forth to shine
In golden light above the earth's dim black,
Above the sombre purpled forest pine,
Far, far above the highest mounts arched back;
This dim remoteness bears away my thought
To distant years and there I seek to gain
The answers if, in ages past forgot,
I lived incarnate or is life in vain?
I know not if it could be God's intent
To close my mind at mem'ry's very door,
To hide the way my ancient life was spent
And leave my quest unanswered evermore.
I only know that this life gives me thee
And love alone must live eternally.

Of Unusual Merit

Miss Josephine Holdren, daughter of Judge and Mrs. J. W. Holdren of this city, has recently been honored at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo., where she is a sophomore. The English literature classes had to write ballads, and Miss Holdren's offering was considered so good that it was published in the Literary supplement of the college weekly, the Linden Bark. The poem in full appears as follows:

A NIGHT OF ROMANCE

By Josephine Holdren.

The moon awoke and raised her golden head,
I waited by the ivied garden wall,
As from the eastern sea, her azure bed,
She climbed the steps that lead to heaven's hall.
Arrayed in shimmering mists and dust of stars
With trailing robes of purple spreading far,
She dallied, till quite suddenly her bars
Pierced to our garden where the roses are.
Their fragrance stirred some memory in her heart,
She hastened till her light searched every bit,
Each sweet, dear flower; each shadowed, farthest part,
Till finding by her light, one face not lit,
She wept; and longing shed dim tears of dew.
We both, my dear, had looked in vain for you.

Religion Mother

Art Editor of Globe-Democrat Addresses Lindenwood Students.

Mrs. Emily Grant Hutchings, art editor of the GLOBE-DEMOCRAT, gave an address last night on "Religion the Mother of Art," at the vesper service of Lindenwood College, in Roemer auditorium, at 6:30 o'clock.

"The attempt to visualize God is the beginning of all art," said Mrs. Hutchings. "We find that in all the pagan religions, as well as in the religions based on the Bible, art has played a considerable part. Moses' 'Thou shalt not make any graven image,' was an attempt to overthrow the art of paganism. When an old religion dies and a new religion is taking its place, the first thing the new religion does is to destroy the art works of the old religion, because it is the art works that appeal to the imagination of primitive people."

Mrs. Hutchings traced modern religious art from its beginning in the pictures on the walls of the Catacombs, then on through the revival of art in the thirteenth century. "The church had established itself to such an extent that it was in a position to encourage art, and it was this which preserved to us the germs of civilization throughout the dark ages and brought about the renaissance in both literature and art."

The speaker pointed out the transition stage in religions of today, saying that the tendency toward nature rather than to conventional figures seems to indicate a more spiritual quality. She referred to the last painting of George Innes, Jr., recently unveiled in Tarpon Springs, Fla.

Its title is, "The Lord is in His Holy Temple." "The picture is pure landscape, and yet it is so full of reverence that no one could fail to realize it has a religious meaning.

"The same is true of the decorations by Edmund Wuerpel, in the Church of the Unity, St. Louis. Instead of using figures of saints, he has used trees to personify the devotional spirit of religion."

This ballad is one of the poems Miss McClanahan composed for her literature class and was liked so well that the English instructor gave it to the "Linden Bark" to be published:

The Old Father
(By Nellie McClanahan)

There lived in the far north country
A maiden fair to see,
Her mother dear, was long since dead,
And her father old was he.

"Oh, father leave me not alone,"
And wept so sorely she,
Her father's heart was filled with fear,
For very old was he.

"A handsome lover shall you wed,
My daughter fair to see,
For soon I shall be leaving thee,"
For very old was he.

And soon a handsome lover came,
And fell in love d'ed he,
She knew they soon must wedded be,
For her father old was he.

"My daughter makes a beautiful bride,
For very fair is she,
And now prepare my winding sheet
For I lay me down to die,
For her mother dear is long since dead,

Lindenwood Alumnae at Elaborate Dinner by President Roemer

Over 100 Hear Announcement of College Centennial Exercises.

Lindenwood College former students and their husbands or escorts, to the number of more than 100, were entertained at a dinner party at the Missouri Athletic Association last night by President and Mrs. John Roemer of the college. It was an elaborate affair for the purpose of giving formal announcement of the college centennial exercises May 28-31, to which all the 3000 living former students of the college have been invited.

Jonquills and ferns decorated the table, and souvenirs of dainty dolls in white and yellow, Lindenwood colors, were at each plate.

Although certain Missouri histories give Lindenwood's founding as having occurred in the year 1828, Dr. Roemer said that letters and diaries of Maj. and Mrs. George C. Sibley, the founders, show the beginning of the school in 1827. He told of Maj. Sibley's service as a pioneer, much of which is recorded in the archives of the Jefferson Memorial, as well as in data preserved at Lindenwood.

A centennial pageant to be given the night of May 29 was described by its author, Miss Lucia Hutchins. It will show a facsimile of the log house which the Sibleys built, to which girls came forty miles on horseback for their schooling, and there will be Indians, a covered wagon, and a yoke of oxen as a part of a panorama of color, action and romance, with a caste taking in practically all of the 500 girls now in college.

Mrs. Sibley as an expert horsewoman was referred to by Dr. Roemer, who told of the early days when the Presbytery hesitated at raising a few thousands necessary for a building, and Mrs. Sibley rode away to Philadelphia, coming back with pledges and checks amounting to $4000. He told of the graves which Lindenwood cherishes in the back of its campus, including not only those of the Sibleys, but also of Judge Rufus Easton, her father, who was first postmaster of St. Louis and for whom Easton avenue in St. Louis was named.

"Mrs. Sibley wrote a letter more than 100 years ago," said Dr. Roemer, "and said the time was coming when woman would take her place alongside of man, and there was no reason why she should be second to him in education. That was a most unusual opinion in those days."

Mrs. Sibley, notwithstanding her strong religious tendencies, was an excellent dancer, and there are letters preserved in which she takes some of her church critics to task by saying that they would better devote themselves to generous giving to charity and church purposes than to object to her lively disposition.

Another record preserved relates an incident of St. Charles when it was the capital of the State of Missouri, when the stovepipe in the Capitol building fell down and the legislators made a written bargain with the townspeople that "if they would buy the stovepipe the legislators would put it in place."

Anticipating the Sibley Memorial scholarship to be established next May, in fulfillment of Mrs. Sibley's wishes, Dr. Roemer said that in the last fifteen years 539 girls needing help have been aided. With the proposed endowed scholarship more assistance will be possible. It is hoped to raise $100,000.

George W. Sutherland of the Board of Directors, whose wife is an alumnae, spoke on the financial system. C. A. Blocher, field agent, and Mrs. W. K. Roth, president of the St. Louis Lindenwood College Club, spoke. Mr. and Mrs. Roth, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Montgomery, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Blankenmeister and Miss Janet Stine sat at the main table with Dr. and Mrs. Roemer, Dean Alice E. Gipson and Miss Alice Linnemann of the Alumnae Association.

Songs and the Lindenwood hymn were sung by a quartet composed of Misses Dorothy Gartner, Mildred Godey, Euneva Lynn and Clara Bowles, under the direction of Miss Cora Edwards. Miss Hutchins read Booth Tarkington's "Here Comes the Bridegroom."

New Members Added Lindenwood Editorial Staff.

Three additions have been made to the staff of Linden Bark, the campus weekly at Lindenwood College, for the present centennial semester. Two seniors, Misses Ayleen Baker and Bessie McNary, the latter specializing in home economics, have joined the editorial staff, as has also Miss Frances Stumberg, a daughter of Dr. B. Kurt Stumberg, a member of Lindenwood's board of directors.

Lindenwood Alumni Dinner.

As guests of Dr. and Mrs. John Roemer, more than 100 alumni and friends heard last night the first announcement in detail of plans for the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of Lindenwood College, May 28-31. The occasion was a dinner given by Dr. and Mrs. Roemer to members of the Lindenwood College club at the Missouri Athletic Association.

Lindenwood yellow and white decorated the tables, with mounds of daffodils and fern linked together by yellow ribbons. Doll Valentines in yellow and white were the favors.

The celebration will have a number of interesting features, among them a pageant which was described by its author, Miss Lucia Hutchins. The pageant will depict the stirring early days of the college when Maj. and Mrs. George C. Sibley founded the school. Mrs. Sibley, said Dr. Roemer, in that time had a vision of the importance of education for women, declaring that the time would come when women and men would be on an equal plane.

In discussing the Sibley Memorial Scholarship fund which will be established next May, Dr. Roemer said that in the last fifteen years 539 girls needing financial help to gain their education, had been aided. It is hoped to raise a fund of $100,000.

Other speakers included: George W. Sutherland of the board of directors, C. A. Blocher, Mrs. W. K. Roth, president of the club. Songs were sung by the Lindenwood quartet and Miss Hutchins gave readings.

Lindenwood Alumnae Dinner.

The Lindenwood College Club Alumnae and their husbands or escorts were entertained at a dinner party last night at the Missouri Athletic Association, at which President and Mrs. John Roemer were hosts. The decorations were in yellow and white, the college colors. Large bowls of jonquils and ferns were placed at intervals on the U-shaped table and the favors were small yellow and white French dolls. Announcement was made by Dr. Roemer of the college centennial exercises, which will be held May 28-31 and to which all of the 3000 loving former students of the college have been invited.

Although certain Missouri histories give Lindenwood's founding as in the year 1828, Dr. Roemer said letters in diaries of Maj. and Mrs. George C. Sibley, the founders, show the beginning of the school in 1827. Dr. Roemer related several outstanding incidents in the early life of the college, telling how Mrs. Sibley rode on horseback to Philadelphia to get money and pledges necessary for the building, when the Prebytery hesitated about raising the funds. He also told of a letter which Mrs. Sibley wrote more than 100 years ago, saying that the time was coming when woman would take her place alongside of man and there was no reason why she should be second to him in education. That was a most unusual opinion in those days. A centennial pageant to be given on May 29, was described by its author, Miss Lucia Hutchins. It will show the growth of the school and all of the 500 girls in the college will take part.

A Sibley Memorial scholarship fund will be established next May and it is hoped to raise $100,000 for the purpose. In the last 15 years, 530 girls needing financial help for their education have been aided and this proposed added fund will make it possible to help more girls.

Sings and the Lindenwood hymn were sung by a quartet composed of Miss Dorothy Gartner, Miss Mildred Godey, Miss Euneva Lynn and Miss Clara Bowles, under the direction of Miss Cora Edwards.

Miss Hutchins read Booth Tarkington's "Here Comes the Bridegroom."

President and Mrs. Roemer Lindenwood Club Guests.

The St. Louis Lindenwood Club, with President and Mrs. John Lincoln Roemer, and Miss Alice Linnemann, as guests of honor, was entertained Monday afternoon by Misses Janet and Adele Stine, at their residence in Webster Groves. Memories were revived of the late Miss Mary Ann Garrett Stine, a great-aunt of the present Misses Stine, who was a Lindenwood student in 1838. She was then 15 years of age. Her two younger sisters, Letitia and Ann Lavinia Stine, were students there at the same time. Letters home were read, telling of studies under Mrs. Mary Easton Sibley, who excelled as a teacher of music. Later, Miss Adele Stine delighted those present by coming into the parlor clad in an ancient gown of Miss Mary Ann Garrett Stine. It was in the style of 90 years ago, of fawn colored silk, made with drop shoulder effect, and sleeves shirred to the cuff, with fine white lace cuffs and collar, also a cameo brooch.

Mrs. George W. Sutherland gave an address on "China," her daughter being a missionary in that country. Vocal solos were rendered by Misses Iris Fleischaker and Vivian Nichols.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

Lindenwood Alumnae See Styles of 1838,

Thoughts and styles of 1838 were brought at first hand to the St. Louis Lindenwood College Club meeting last Monday afternoon at the residence of Miss Janet and Miss Adele Stine, in Webster Groves. One of their great-aunts, Miss Mary Ann Garrett Stine, who attended Lindenwood at the age of 15, in 1838, had written several letters home concerning her studies and environment, and these were read by Miss Janet Stine. The great-aunt had been a pupil of Mrs. Mary Easton Sibley, for whom the alumnae are raising a memorial scholarship. The young woman died at the age of 22, and some of her possessions were left to the Stine family. Miss Adele Stine came downstairs wearing one of these, a fawn-colored, twilled silk dress of the period, characterized by its long shirred sleeves and drop shoulders. Lace cuffs and collar were worn, and a cameo pin. Two other great-aunts were also spoken of, Letitia and Ann Lavinia Stine, who were sisters, 9 and 11 years old, and attended Lindenwood with the elder sister, in 1838.

Mrs. George W. Sutherland gave a talk on "China," her daughter being a missionary in that country, and a former teacher at Lindenwood, of which Mrs. Sutherland is a graduate. Dr. and Mrs. John Lincoln Roemer and Miss Alice Linnemann, head of the college art department, were guests of the club, together with two students, Misses Vivian Nichols and Iris Fleischaker, who sang.

An invitation was extended by President Roemer to the dinner in honor of the club, which he gave Friday night at the Missouri Athletic Association.

The decorations were in white and yellow, Lindenwood colors, and souvenir gifts were a traditional Lindenwood doll in white and yellow, carrying a college pennant. Yellow jonquils adorned the tables. Among those sitting at the main table were Dr. and Mrs. Roemer, Dean Alice E. Gilson of the college; Miss Alice Linnemann, head of the Lindenwood art department and adviser of the alumnae association; Mr. and Mrs. Victor E. Rhodes, Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Roth and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph White, Mrs. Rhodes being president of the alumnae association, Mrs. Roth president of the St. Louis Lindenwood College Club, and Mrs. White the last preceding president. Dr. Roemer made a short talk, announcing the centennial reunion of former students at the college in May.

The St. Louis Lindenwood College Club was transported back ninety years in a program given Monday, February 7, at the residence of Misses Adele and Janet Stine, former Lindenwood girls, in Webster Groves. Three of their great-aunts in the Stine family, Misses Mary Ann Garrett Stine, Letitia Stine and Ann Lavinia Stine, were students together at Lindenwood in 1833. The first named, who was then 15 years old, wrote letters home, which Miss Janet Stine read to the club. She told of being taught by Mrs. Mary Easton Sibley, and said: "Oh, if I could only play as well as she can." Later Miss Adele Stine appeared in a dress of the early period, an heirloom from Miss Mary Ann Garrett Stine, who died at the age of 22. Dr. and Mrs. John Lincoln Roemer and Miss Alice Linnemann, head of the art department, were guests of the club. Mrs. George W. Sutherland gave an address on "China." There were vocal solos by Misses Vivian Nichols and Iris Fleischaker of the student body.

Historical Program.

Misses Janet and Adele Stine of Webster Groves entertained the St. Louis Lindenwood College club with a timely historical program out of their own family records, Monday afternoon, February 7, at their residence. In 1838, there were three Stine girls—Mary Ann Garrett, Letitia and Ann Lavinia—all enrolled at Lindenwood, as it was then called. Their ages were 15, 11 and 9. Mary Ann Garrett, Stine, the oldest, sent letters home, which her great-nieces, the present Misses Stine, have preserved, and which they read to the club Monday. References to classes taught personally by the founder, Mrs. Mary Easton Sibley, were of particular interest, the young writer 'expressing a wish fervently that she might play the piano as she does.' A dress of the time, preserved for 90 years, was exhibited, Miss Adele Stine wearing it, with the cameo brooch, and lace collar and cuffs of the time. The dress was of twilled silk in fawn color, with drop shoulders, and sleeves shirred all the way down.

Other numbers on the program were an address by Mrs. George W. Sutherland, an alumna, on Vivian Nichols and Iris Fleisch—"China," and vocal solos by Misses Aker, of Lindenwood's music department. President and Mrs. John Lincoln Roemer and Miss Alice Linneman of the college.

Perrichon, and the supporting cast will consist of Misses Miriam Robinson, Pauline Davis, Frances Stumberg, Lillie Blumenstiel, Audrey Weinberg, Maxine Block, Rosalind Sachs, Aline Davidson, Elizabeth Tracy, Beth Campbell, Ruth Bullion, Elizabeth Frenkel and a group of "commissioners" and "voyagers."

Death Ends Careers of Two of St. Louis' Oldest Teachers

Miss Delia Gibbs, 78, and Miss Mary I. Atkinson Die Within Hour.

Death on Monday of Miss Delia A. Gibbs, for thirty years principal of the Cote Brilliante School, and Miss Mary I. Atkinson, who taught in the St. Louis schools for fifty years, brought an end to the careers of two of St. Louis' oldest teachers.

Miss Gibbs, who was 78, died at 6 o'clock Monday night at her home at 5259 Northland avenue. She was one of the founders of the Cote Brilliante Presbyterian Church. Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at an undertaking establishment at 4440 Olive street.

Miss Atkinson, who was 80, died at 7 o'clock Monday night at the Missouri Baptist Sanitarium of the infirmities of age. She started teaching September 15, 1866, at the Carroll School at Tenth and Carroll streets. She resigned in June, 1915, from her position at the Pope School.

Miss Gibbs was the daughter of William Pendleton Gibbs, wealthy woolen merchant of St. Louis and

New York. She was born in Virginia, where her parents lived for many years.

Attending Lindenwood Seminary at St. Charles from 1856 to 1864, Miss Gibbs in later years became known as one of the "pioneer students" of the institution, and Lindenwood College counted much on having her as one of the central figures on the centennial celebration to be held in May.

Taught School Forty Years.

Miss Gibbs taught in the Cote Brilliante School nearly forty years. She began in the early '70s, when Cote Brilliante was a suburb of St. Louis, with orchards, corn fields and hunting grounds surrounding the little schoolhouse of two rooms. A deeply religious woman, she assisted in founding a union Sunday school, which met for several years in the Cote Brilliante Schoolhouse. She was a teacher there Sunday after Sunday, and the late Samuel Cupples donated a site at Marcus and Labadie avenues for a permanent location.

About thirty years ago the Sunday school became the Cote Brilliante Presbyterian Church, Miss Gibbs being a charter member. She remained constantly in attendance until about fifteen years ago, when rheumatism and arthritis compelled her to give up active life. She had long since been made principal of the Cote Brilliante School.

Although confined to a wheel chair in late years, she remained active to the end, keeping up her correspondence and welcoming many friends.

Miss Gibbs is survived by three cousins, E. B. McDonald of Webster Groves and Misses Nora and Bessie McDonald of 4943 Lindell boulevard.

Rev. Robert R. Biggar, pastor of the Cote Brilliante Church, will officiate at the funeral, and the elders of the Cote Brilliante Church will be pallbearers.

DR. W. O. THOMPSON TO VISIT PRESBYTERY TODAY

Dr. William O. Thompson, moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly, is to visit the St. Louis Presbytery today. He will be a guest tonight at a dinner for which 500 reservations have been made, at the West Presbyterian Church, Maple and Maryville avenues, and is to address a general meeting at the same church at 8 p. m.

At 11 o'clock this morning, Dr. Thompson will speak at chapel, at Roemer Auditorium, Lindenwood College.

Too Much Talk Failing of Christendom, Says Presbyterian Prelate

Rev. Dr. W. O. Thompson Addresses 1000 at Meeting Here.

Too much talk and not enough real work for service to Christ is the failing of a great part of Christendom today, in the opinion of Rev. Dr. William O. Thompson of Columbus, Ohio, moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly, who addressed a general meeting of his church folk in the St. Louis Presbytery last night at West Presbyterian Church, Maple and Maryville avenues.

"The church today must be measured only by its power of service," declared the churchman, "for the special benefits which are supposed to lie in one or another dogma of doctrine, can no longer be accepted. The acid test is service to Christ, who stands at the hub from which all Christian religions emanate."

The dean of Presbyterians attacked the eloquence wasted in fundamentalist and modernist controversies with the same vigor he struck at the harangue against "youth of today," "modern sins" and the variety of present-day topics of similar kind which continually come into the foreground. "Useless," he pronounced it, in that it is not of service to Christ.

Just to Be Talking.

"Talk, just to be talking," he branded these controversies. "Remember that Christ never came on earth to teach men to grow more corn to the acre. He cannot be bothered with harangues about special theologies or philosophies, or isms. We are here to serve him as best we know how, and all our efforts should be bent in that direction."

"Unless the church has great objectives, spiritual faith and the moral force to serve Christ, it can never be more than a very respectable club," was his summation.

He dwelt briefly on the church and school, declaring they can never be divorced, for where the church has raised man to a high spiritual level, he will demand the intellectual equivalent which the schools have to offer.

Is University Official.

Rev. Thompson, besides holding the highest position in the Presbyterian Church, is also president emeritus of Ohio State University. He was introduced to the assemblage by Rev. R. R. Biggar of the Cote Brillante Presbyterian Church and moderator of the St. Louis Presbytery. He and Rev. Thompson were children in the same Ohio village and attended school together for a number of years.

The assemblage last night drew an attendance of approximately 1000 from the forty Presbyterian churches of the St. Louis group. Dr. Thompson's visit is the high point of "visitation week" in the local church circles when members of the St. Louis ministry interchange pulpits in the interest of expanding church membership. The visit of the national moderator is an annual one and the occasion of one of the largest and most important informal meetings of the year.

DR. W. O. THOMPSON TO VISIT PRESBYTERY TODAY

Dr. William O. Thompson, moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly, is to visit the St. Louis Presbytery today. He will be a guest tonight at a dinner for which 500 reservations have been made, at the West Presbyterian Church, Maple and Maryville avenues, and is to address a general meeting at the same church at 8 p. m.

Wellesley Woman Visits Lindenwood

Miss Florence Jackson, vocational advisor at Wellesley College, is spending the week at Lindenwood College. She is having conferences with various students, particularly with members of the sophomore class, whom she met last year when they were pursuing their freshman studies.

Rev. Thompson visited Lindenwood College at St. Charles yesterday morning and Xenia Theological Seminary in University City yesterday afternoon.

At Lindenwood and Xenia Seminaries Dr. Thompson told of his recent visit to Porto Rico, Cuba, Santo Domingo and Haiti, where, he said, the Catholic Church had been rooted from its absolute domination of former Spanish rule days, with Protestant Christianity now in the foreground. Haiti alone, he declared, was still largely savage in its spiritual outlook. "A bit of Africa set down in the Antilles," he said.

The Lindenwood College Glee Club furnished song interludes at last night's session at West Presbyterian Church.

Missionary Address.

Mrs. R. M. Graham, of New York, who is giving addresses among the missionary societies of the Presbyterian churches here, will address the student body of Lindenwood College Sunday night, at 6:30 o'clock, in Roemer auditorium. Mrs. Graham is field secretary of the Presbyterian Foreign Mission Board, and is at the Avalon Hotel, Taylor and Pershing avenues.

Dr. Thompson spoke twice previously yesterday, in the morning at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, and in the afternoon at Xenia Theological Seminary in University City.

LINDENWOOD STUDENTS

Lindenwood College students were told last night of "sister women" all over the world, in an address by Mrs. R. M. Graham of Philadelphia, field secretary of the Presbyterian Foreign Mission Board, at vesper service at Roemer Hall.

"There are approximately 874,000,000 women and girls in the world," said Mrs. Graham. "In round numbers there are 448,000,000 white women and girls, 343,000,000 yellow, 69,000,000 black and 14,000,000 red." It was shown that the Christians, numbering 235,000,000 women and girls, outnumber any one other religious belief. Nearest to them come the Mohammedans, with 109,000,000 women and girls; while of the "Animists" (spirit worshipers) there are about 68,000,000 women and girls, and of Buddhist women and girls about the same number.

Bright balloon-cherries, pendant from greenery, were a feature of a Washington's birthday party given Friday night, at Lindenwood College, in the Butler Gymnasium. In former years the annual party has been the occasion of announcing the college May queen, but as this year's queen is to be of great importance because of her part in the centennial pageant, it was decided to give a special party in her honor, on the night of March 11.
The affair Friday night was therefore a formal upper-class party, in which the sophomores, of whom Miss Ruth Bullion is president, were responsible for the decorations. The walls were festooned in red, white and blue hunting, and the cherry foliage formed the ceiling. Miss Delta Neuman and Miss Sue Campbell, as class officers, took a leading part. Preceding the dance, President and Mrs. John Lincoln Roemer were hosts at an elaborate dinner, with anniversary features, at which there were a number of outside guests.

She also played in a "Mother Goose" pantomime, which Lindenwood students gave early in the month, at the German National exposition in the Consular Building. Her part was that of the "Little Girl."

Miss Newton has also been elected as a member of the Alpha Sigma Tau Honorary Society, which is the greatest honor that can be achieved by a Lindenwood college girl.

Lindenwood College to Present Play.

Many St. Louis former Lindenwood College students expect to make a visit to the college for the home-created production tonight in Roemer Auditorium of an original three-act musical comedy, "You See, It Was This Way," with the words by Miss Betty Birch and chorus music by Miss Helen Roper, both students. To Miss Birch came the honor last year of writing the musical comedy, "Patricia, How Could You?" That play, like this one, was sponsored by the Lindenwood Athletic Association. The story goes from an office scene to an ocean voyage, with merriment and many different costumes. The girls taking the principal parts are Misses Carita Kingsbury, Eugenia Owens, Helena Campbell, Marjory Bright, Ruth Ballion, Sue Campbell and Betty Birch, besides Misses Kathryn Walker and Frances Stumberg, who are to put on a dance, "Red Riding Hood and the Wolf." ## Miss Louise Lamb Writes Clever Essay.

Miss Louise Lamb, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Fred Lamb, who is a student at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo., has recently written a clever essay on "A College Affliction" which was published in the college paper. Miss Lamb is a member of the Art Club, English Club, Missouri Club and was also one of the Razzers in the Missouri pep squad. The essay appears below:

A College Affliction.

What does this word "crush" mean that everyone hears so much about among the younger and livelier generation? It means simply a wild infatuation, but why is it so harmful to the young collegians, to which it seems to be limited? Some very emphatic comments as to the silliness of these "crushes" have been heard and have provoked much thought.

Perhaps "crushes" are more susceptible between those of opposite sexes and perhaps it is from these "crushes" that the recovery is easy and made rapidly. It is just as well that this is the case because school days are not best filled when the student is in love or thinks himself to be. It is, however, girl "crushes" which are the most damaging. Some go so far that the "crushee" sends flowers and even candy, if she is not too hungry. It seems that there are the kind which are quickly broken off. Some real friendships are branded with that awful term "crush" causing both girls to feel badly. Some of these supposed friendships are "crushes", but some are not and should not be labeled as such.

A crush is simply a state of mind you imagine yourself to be in. You do not eat regularly; you do not sleep soundly. You are not happy unless you are thinking about, talking of or being with the object of your affection. This state of mind is a necessary part of your college days. Every student is at some time afflicted with it. "Crushes" run their course, so to speak, and, if they are lasting, real friendships are formed.

Lindenwood Play.

Among the plays at Lindenwood College, the annual production by the Lindenwood Athletic Association this evening is one that will be marked by a homecoming of many "girls of yesterday." The play is a musical comedy, written by a student, Miss Betty Birch, and with much of the music for the choruses by another student, Miss Helen Roper. It bears the ridiculous, self-made title, "You See, It Was This Way," which title is the theme of a strong chorus.

Stenographers powdering their noses constitute a chorus, and there are seasick singers on shipboard, sailors and soldiers and horse jockeys. The young composer will appear in one of the roles, and others participating are Misses Carita Kingsbury, Eugenia Owens, Helena Campbell, Marjory Bright, Ruth Bullion and Sue Campbell. There also is a "stunt" dance, "Red Riding Hood and the Wolf," by Misses Kathryn Walker and Frances Stumberg.

The proceeds will be in part for the Sibley scholarship fund. The girls participating in the choruses are being drilled by Miss Barbara Eschbach, head of the physical education department.

Miss Alice Plass, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Plass, who is a freshman at Lindenwood college, St. Charles, Mo., recently was chosen as a member of the sextet which give two selections College Night at the Shubert-Rialto theater in St. Louis. This year the Shubert-Rialto offered "The Vagabond King," which played at Chicago the previous week.

All of the foremost colleges and universities are represented at this "Opening Night." of the play and between acts the various colleges are called upon to give their "Alma Mater." More than 300 colleges were represented this year, but Lindenwood made the best showing. Three hundred and sixty represented the college.

MUSIC APPEALS TO MIND AND EMOTION, SPAMER SAYS

Music in the Middle Ages appealed to the intellect alone, but in the present day it appeals both to the mind and emotion, declared Richard Spamer, music and drama critic of the GLOBE-DEMOCRAT, in an address to the students of Lindenwood College yesterday.

"It is the combination of these two factors, mind and emotion, which causes the music of Beethoven to be regarded as the choicest product of his era," said Spamer. "The same is true, even in a larger sense, of the music of Richard Wagner, who, with all his passion, still appeals so strongly to our minds as to put him in a class all by himself in the history and development of the art of music."

LINDENWOOD GIRLS TO PRESENT PLAY FRIDAY

Musical Comedy Written by Two Students of College.

An original three-act musical comedy, entitled "You See, It Was This Way," written by Miss Betty Birch, with music by Miss Helen Roper, both students at Lindenwood College, will be presented Friday night at 7:30 o'clock in Romer auditorium under the auspices of the Lindenwood College Athletic Association, part of the proceeds to be devoted to the Mary Easton Sibley scholarship fund.

Mr. Van Horn, a hard-headed business man with a sense of humor, is to be represented by Miss Carita Kingsbury; Miss Sprightwell, his secretary, an elderly maiden lady of romantic spirit, by Miss Eugenia Owens, and Skimpy, an office boy, by Miss Helena Campbell. The plot around which the music and amusing dialogue are strung concerns two wards of Mr. Van Horn, a young man and young woman who never met each other, and the difficulties experienced by their guardian in his desire to make them fall in love with each other.

Miss Marjory Bright and Miss Betty Birch play the parts, respectively, of the young man, Jo Carter, and the young woman, Natalie White, while Miss Ruth Bullion is Bud, Jo's shadow, a genuine nut. The heroine has a friend, Nadine, who is impersonated by Miss Sue Campbell.

An original stenographers' chorus enlivens the opening office scene, and there is a jockey chorus and a Hawaiian chorus. The scene shifts to shipboard, where there is a sailors' chorus, a Spanish chorus and a seasick chorus. Just before landing the captain's ball is portrayed, across which appears the tin soldiers' chorus, "Mary, Mary, Quite Contrary," and the clown chorus.

A specialty dance, "Red Riding Hood and the Wolf," will be done by Misses Kathryn Walker and Frances Stumberg, the latter being the Wolf.

LINDENWOOD MAY QUEEN TO BE NAMED FRIDAY

Students Look Forward With Eagerness To The Centennial Celebration To Be Held This Spring.

Lindenwood College, in St. Charles Mo., is a-thrill with interest in the coming student election of the May Queen, the outcome of which will be announced at a dinner-dance, March 11. Because Lindenwood was founded in 1827, President John Lincoln Roemer has announced four days of Centennial celebration, May 28-31, in which the May Queen and her pageant will be a climactic event. To more than 3,000 alumnae and former students now living, out of Lindenwood's roster of 100 continuous years of "sweet girl graduates" invitations have been sent by the administration and more than 2,000 have responded that they and their families will endeavor to participate. (Lindenwood leads most of the women's colleges of the country in the prevalent matrimony of her alumnae; a majority of her "girls of yesterday" are either wives or widows).

Lindenwood College, first named "Linden Wood" because of its forest of native linden trees, was founded in 1827 by a United States Army officer, Maj. George Sibley and his wife Mary Easton Sibley, daughter of

Federal Judge Rufus Easton, who held his commission from President
Jefferson. Married at the age of 15,
Mrs. Sibley came with her husband from Washington D. C., and they founded their estate, the present campus of Lindenwood College, in 1816.

Maj. Sibley was U. S. Commissioner to the Indians. His headquarters were at Fort Osage, from which point he wrote valuable records of his explorations and early friendship with Indian tribes of the south west. In the summer of 1811, under Indian escort, he visited the Grand Saline, being the first white man to see these miles of dazzling salt area (still a national wonder in northwes-Oklahoma) and also the small Rock Saline, wagrishly spoken of by political malcon tents of that day as "Jefferson Salt Mountain."

Mrs. Sibley was a highly cultured woman, skilled in music and devoted to the Bible. Her school was an outgrowth of petition from people of the country around about. Kentucky had the nearest girls' boarding school. A typical letter from a client of 1831, preserved in Lindenwood's archives, begs Mrs. Sibley to take this man's little daughter, so that the young lady might "acquire all the intelligence, and improvement of mind, and all the learning, useful, domestic and ornamental, that she is capable of."

Girls came 40 miles on horseback to attend "Linden Wood". They called
Maj. and Mrs. Sibley, "Uncle George" and "Aunt Mary". The spirit of the family life is still observed in the college, even though now it has five dormitories and class equipment in proportion, and has advanced to a full-four year college curriculum, with membership in the Association of American Colleges and other standardized organizations of advanced collegiate work.

Since 1870 (the year of Mrs. Sibley's death), Lindenwood College has been under the care of the Presbyterian Synod of Missouri, this being the Sibley's desire, and previous to that time the St. Louis Presbytery had supervisory care of the institution. "Bible" is a required study, but denominationalism is not taught.

The party is given by the Missouri Club of Lindenwood, of which 192 girls are members, with Miss Annavere Brookshire of Joplin as president. The queen and her attendants are to be elected by secret ballot in chapel one day this week. One maid of honor will be chosen for the junior class and two each for the sophomore and freshman classes.

Miss Spielberger Honored At College

Miss Adria Spielberger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Spielberger of 3121 Highland avenue, has had her dramatic talent recognized several times this year at Lindenwood college, St. Charles, Mo., where she is a sophomore. Her latest appearance was in an oratory recital, February 24, when she read "In A Garden" by Dorothy Donnelly. In "Friend Hannah," the production given December 14 by the Lindenwood players, Miss Spielberger played the title role with artistry and finesse, winning the audience with her every word and action. Miss Spielberger will read the play, "Seventh Heaven" for her graduation recital, May 23, and will receive a certificate in oratory at the graduation exercises in June, at which time Lindenwood will celebrate its hundredth anniversary.

Invitations have been sent out by the Missouri Club of Lindenwood College for a dinner-dance to announce the May Queen Friday night, at 6:30 o'clock, in Jubilee Hall. The queen will be named by election in the next few days. The most attractive girls will be elected this year for the May Queen and her attendants, as they will play a part in the Centennial pageant in June. The queen must be a senior, the maid of honor a junior and the two underclasses will each elect two attendants. The result of the secret election by classes will be announced at this party by Mrs. John Lincoln Roemer, wife of the president of the college. The queen and her attendants will then hold sway in the festivities, and special dances will be given for their entertainment.

A Lindenwood Millinery Show

By Julia C. Underwood

THE hats pictured were worn at a "style show," by students of the home economics department at Lindenwood College, Tuesday. Each "model" wore her own product, and it was judged not only by style, texture and color, but also by its appropriateness for "the occasion on which it was to be worn."

A particular point was the "becomingness," for the girls who were judging acted on the principle that "a hat must look better on the head than off." If the wearer had a pug nose, or a pointed chin, a fat face or a thin one, all this had to be taken account of in the mode, and the hat was judged as to whether it was suitable for her to wear. The girls had also each made a dress, with which the hat was to complete the costume.

The highest mark, "E," was given by the judges to two models, a black draped beret, in the center above, created by Miss Christine McCoy of Golconda, Ill., and another hat in black faille, along tailored lines, the work of Miss Delta Neuman of Texas, the president of this year's senior class.

Among other hats judged high in the show was a pinkish tam by Miss Marguerite Talnter of St. Charles. It carried a close-fitting emerald feather, and the hat was lined with plaid in the same tan and green. Miss Talnter wore a clever dress of tan, with green buttons and green pipings.

The girls followed up the style show with a debate, hotly waged, on Friday, as to the relative merits of "bought" clothes, as compared with those which a woman may design and make for herself.

LINDENWOOD QUEEN TO BE NAMED TODAY

Five Maids of Honor Will Be Chosen at Chapel Exercises.

The Centennial Year May Queen at Lindenwood College will be chosen at chapel exercises in Roemer Auditorium this morning. Five maids of honor are also to be elected, one of whom will be a junior, two sophomores and two freshmen. Since 1915, when Dr. and Mrs. John Lincoln Roemer presided for the first time, the May Queen's crowning at Lindenwood has become a more elaborate ceremony. Each one of the last twelve queens is to receive a special invitation for the Centennial celebration, and a place of honor in the pageant. Half of them are married.

Miss Margaret Peck, the honored senior of 1916, is now Mrs. F. M. Larned of Des Moines, Ia.

Miss Lucile Roberts, queen of 1917, is now Mrs. Earl Grey of Ardmore, Ok.

In 1918 the queen was Miss Pauline Hart, now Mrs. Donald Best of Quincy, Ill.

Miss Dorothy Jones, in 1919, was the first blonde May Queen. She is now employed in the reference department of the GLOBE-DEMOCRAT.

Miss Katherine Lade, who was queen in 1920, is Mrs. James A. Mundle of Kansas City.

Miss Florence Bartz, queen in 1921, is in St. Joseph, Mo., teaching.

Miss Gladys Carnahan, queen in 1922, was married last year to Jack Crandall of Dallas, Tex., formerly of St. Louis.

The queens of the last four years are unmarried. Miss Lois Luckhart, queen in 1923, is teaching in Kansas City. Miss Katherine Yount, queen in 1924, is at home in Cape Girardeau, Mo. Miss Sara Shomberg of 1925 is living in Philadelphia. Miss Ida Hoeflin of 1926 is in New York City.

Varied Benefits from Lindenwood Design Classes

Learn to Apply Teaching to Everyday Life, Girls Declare.

The applied design classes at Lindenwood College, under the direction of Miss Alice A. Linnemann, head of the college art department, were asked, not long ago, to give opinions on what benefits they had derived from the course. The opinions handed in showed that the girls had gained more than the direct instruction.

One girl wrote: "I have learned that if I apply what I have learned to everyday life I will get more pleasure out of life and have much more confidence in myself. I have learned that a thing done by one's self means more to one than something done by someone else, or something not original."

Learns Value.

Another girl says: "I no longer admire a person just because she is able to buy and wear the latest fad. I have learned what is garish and in bad taste in dresses, scarfs, house-furnishings and the like, and, on the other hand, what is acceptable according to the standards of art."

Another member of the class says: "I have been taught to discriminate between so-called art and real art. In this day of machine-made products, the public should demand better work and not just take what is turned out to them as fashionable. This course has helped me to appreciate this fact, and has created in me a desire to be a well-groomed girl, and not just one in a hundred who follows fashion blindly."

To Create Own Designs.

A practical girl says: "This course has helped me to express my own ideas and create my own designs, to be resourceful, and to realize I can rely on myself in things that I never thought possible before. Then, too, by trying to do these things, I have noticed more closely works of art along all lines. I have become able to some extent to distinguish between good and poor design, and to appreciate good design."

One girl thinks about home decoration: "I feel a little more sure, not only of what is best to wear, but what is best to buy for a home. I know now that it is not the expense of the article that shows whether the work is good, but the design and color, and general fitness to purpose, time and place."

Merchant will find this girl critical, who says: "This course makes one think twice, before buying something that isn't in good taste."

Another wise student says: "I have learned how to dress so as to appear as inconspicuous as possible, and yet be well-dressed. There wouldn't be so many conspicuous and flashily-dressed people in the world, if they studied applied design."

LINDENWOOD COLLEGE RECEIVES 3D PIPE ORGAN

A new practice pipe organ, just added to Niccolls practice hall at Lindenwood College, increases the number of pipe organs in that institution to three, including the large pipe organ in Sibley chapel.

In the last few years, the enrollment for pipe organ students has greatly increased at Lindenwood, a number of girls being in training for organists of churches. It is counted one of the most rapidly growing departments in the college.

Suspense will be relieved at Lindenwood College, Friday night, at the annual dinner-dance, for then the May Queen of 1927 is to be announced, with her five maids of honor. Election has already been held, but the ballots were secret, and no one, not even the queen herself, will know of the honor until Friday night. The dinner-dance is being given by the Missouri Club, which is by far the largest student club of the college, and of which Miss Annavere Brookshire of Joplin is president. Invitations have been sent to all former students living in St. Charles, as well as to a number of townspeople. The decorations will be in pastel shades of the spring colors. Mrs. John Lincoln Roemer, as in former years, will announce the queen, who is then to be conducted to her place of honor. The maids will consist of one junior, two sophomores and two freshmen. The queen last year was Miss Ida Hoeflin of St. Charles, who is now in New York City doing dramatic work. Since this year's centennial pageant is associated with the queen's coronation, her choice is of extraordinary interest.

Miss Eugenia Owens of this city, was recently in a musical comedy at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Missouri. She took the part of a stereographer who was impersonating a Spanish lady to make a certain scene come out right. She was excellent in the play and had one of the leading roles. The play was given by the Athletic Association and only members of this organization could take part and so Miss Owens can be doubly congratulated because it is quite hard to become a member of the association.

Lindenwood College
Selects Miss McNee
Queen of the May

Annual Announcement Party at Gymnasium Is Colorful Affair.

The Missouri Club's annual May Queen party at Lindenwood College Friday night, announcing Miss Marguerite McNee as centennial queen, was made colorful by many flowers. Butler gymnasium was turned into a spring garden of orchid, violet, green, rose and yellow, while a scenery painted forest background covered the wall behind the queen's platform, over which hung a canopy of roses, festooned in smilax.

Six Missouri girls, Misses Dorothy Monier, Evelyn Manchester, Gertrude Hull, Lala Rookh Varner, Rosalind Miller and Frances Beasley, were "guards," standing in line dressed in yellow and white, the college colors, knickers and ruffs, with warlike spears in their hands. Miss Frances Wachter, in page costume, carried a scroll the length of the hall, presenting this to Mrs. John Lincoln Roemer, who then announced the maids of the royal court, and then the queen.

Classes Choose Maids.

Each class had chosen its own maids, the queen being a senior. The one junior maid is Miss Harriet Collins of Oxford, Kan.; the sophomores, Misses Susan Jordan of Vincennes, Ind., and Elizabeth Tracy, St. Charles, Mo., and the freshmen, Misses Elinor Lide of Camden, Ark., and Lawana McAninch of Garber, Oklahoma.

A "queen's program" was carried through, after Miss McNee and her attendants had taken their places on the dais. There was an "Irish clog" by Misses Helen Condon, Marion Suleeba, Nancy Hitner and Audrey Weinberg; a solo, "In a Garden," by Miss Irla Fleischaker, and a reading, "Wings," by Miss Marlon Crutcher.

For the last-named number, ten girls danced an interpretive "motion poem." These were Misses Mary Jane White, Marion Eldredge, Dorothy Alley, Helen Buchanan, Frances Stumberg, Mary Lucile Williams, Dorothy Jansen, Lucile Livingston, Ruth Singer and Claudine Schofield.

Bouquets for Souvenirs.

The souvenirs were wrist bouquets in the spring colors. The freshman class, through Miss Dorothy Monier, presented a bouquet to the queen.

All former students of Lindenwood resident in St. Charles were guests and there were also present many business men of St. Charles and their wives. President and Mrs. Roemer led the grand march.

The queen is to be crowned Saturday, May 28. She and her court will have a part in the Centennial Pageant and the ceremonies of the centennial celebration, May 29.

WOULD SPANK WOMEN FOR NOT AIDING BEAUTY

Dr. Jabez N. Jackson, President of American Medical Association, Advocates Use of Rouge, Powder and Lipstick.

CALLS EVOLUTION PURE BUNK AND HALF-BAKED

Doctor Says Modern Girl Is an Improvement Over Her Grandmother—Defends Eve in Her Temptation of Adam.

Any woman who can improve her appearance with lipstick and powder, but does not do so, should be spanked, according to Dr. Jabez N. Jackson, president of the American Medical Association.

The doctor's views were made public last night in an interview after an address he delivered at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo.

The modern woman, he believes, is a great improvement over her grandmother in health and education.

"But how about cosmetics?" the reporter inquired.

"Any woman who can improve her appearance by using cosmetics and does not do so, should be spanked," the doctor answered vigorously.

Evolution "Bunk."

"Pure bunk," is Dr. Jackson's characterization of evolution teachings.

"They are not only harmful to the thoughts of the younger generation, but are responsible in destroying the faith of the older people," he declared.

"Evolution is a nice theory to talk about," Dr. Jackson said in his talk. "But it is as useless, pointless, unproved and unprovable a theory as has ever been promulgated by a bunch of half-baked, 16-year-old scientists."

Dr. Jackson has not much sympathy for the practice of eugenics. While he does not condemn it, he does not believe the scientific breeding of human beings is practical.

"Dullards will continue to produce geniuses and geniuses will evolve dullards," he said.

However, the doctor is in accord with the move to sterilize mentally defective persons as a means of improving the human race.

Dr. Jackson deprecates the tendency to specialize.

"Specialization," he remarked cryptically, "is teaching us more and more about less and less and less and less about more and more."

In his address before 800 students and visitors, Dr. Jackson strove to change the popular interpretation of the biblical description of Adam's transgression.

Defends Eve.

"When woman tempted man, as recorded in the Book of Genesis," the speaker explained, "she raised him from a purely physical animal to a thinking, progressing being and gave him the first impetus in his thirst for knowledge."

"Women have been the moving power from the first. The Bible is misread and misunderstood when we regard the original sin as a degrading, rather than an uplifting, experience."

LINDENWOOD COLLEGE HOLDS "LARK" PARTY

Entertainment Held in Commemoration of Centennial Anniversary.

An impromptu form of entertainment styled by the authorities of the institution, "Lindenwood Lark," was offered by Dr. and Mrs. John L. Roemer and the "aide de campus" of Lindenwood College at Vandervoort Music Hall yesterday afternoon. In commemoration of the centennial anniversary of the college, the first number on the brief but eagerly displayed program entitled "In Sibley Hall," contained pretty references to the founder of the first educational institution for girls west of the Mississippi River.
In the "Lindenwood Players' Tea" there was bright conversation by which the various singers and instrumentalists were introduced, including the recitation of "The Six-Cylinder Car," a neat automobile story with preludes on current events and of Booth Tarkington's
"The Ghost Story," and other numbers such as "What Price Grades" and "The Hockey Goal."

The casts of the various sketches were well up in their lines and in several cases showed fine facility in elocution and the singing indicated the thoroughness with which this branch of art is taught at the St. Charles, Mo., college.

The well-constructed program was directed by Miss Lucia Hutchins and Miss Harriet Diven. The following students took part in the exercises which were enjoyed by a large and interested audience:
Misses Helen Baker, Betty Birch,
Josephine Bowman, Helen Condon,
Catherine Craven, Marian Crutcher,
Alice Davidson, Marion Ed Eldredge, Iris Fleischaker, Ida Hayes, Nancy Hitner, Flora Huff, Dorothy Jansen, Euneva Lynn, Margaret Madden, Adria Spellberger, Marian Suleeba, Dorothy Wallace, Audrey Weinberg, Mary Ruth Welsh.

FROM LINDENWOOD COL- LEGE, ST. CHARLES, MO.

Miss Mildred Gode, of New Braunfels, Texas and a student of Lindenwood College, was chosen as a member of a Sextette that sang at the "Shubert Rialto" theatre of St. Louis, very recently. The occasion for the performance was College Club night. Representatives of all members of the College Club attended the performance of "The Vagabond King", the show then on at that theatre. Between the acts of the play the different college and university representatives offered some form of entertainment. The Lindenwood Sextette sang three college songs, and the student body, represented by more than three hundred girls, joined them in the chorus of each.

LINDENWOOD COLLEGE PREPARES FOR PAGEANT

ST. CHARLES, Mo., March 25. — Parents of students at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo., (parents distributed over 26 states) will have their daughters home with them the first of April, two weeks in advance of the customary "Easter recess," the reason being that Lindenwood is looking ahead to its Centennial pageant, for which magnificent spectacle almost two months of rehearsals are demanded.

Practically every one of the 500 students will take part in the pageant, which is to be presented at night, Saturday, May 28, over the hills and valleys of the Lindenwood golf course. Written by Miss Lucia Hutchins, head of the college department of oratory, the symbolic theme of the pageant is the "Bringing Together of Womanhood and Education." It is fitted with the music theme of the "Liebestraum."

Costumes of 100 years ago are in the making for 100 girls whose roles will be in two episodes as students on certain epochal days in the morning of the nineteenth century, when Lindenwood College was very young. "Maj. George C. Sibley" and his wife, "Mary Easton Sibley," the college founders, will welcome the girls coming by ox-team and stage coach. (Girls of today are perfecting themselves in the heavy role of "drivers" of the real, old-time vehicle, which they are finding somewhat different from a gear shift). The first log house will be in the background.

Numerous "Indians" will march in the pageant, for they were friendly to the school. "Townsppeople" will come in, in the agonizing costume of the day, to witness the public "examinations." The unique flag of "Love," which the kindly Mrs. Sibley hoisted during the civil war, will be the basis of an episode, with pathetic incidents of that war. The "Spirit of the Future" leads on to the full realization of "Mrs. Sibley's Dream" in the Lindenwood of today.

Taking part in every episode of the Centennial Pageant will be the Centennial May Queen, Miss Marguerite McNee, of Cottonwood Falls, Kans., a Lindenwood senior elected a few days ago by popular vote of her class. Miss McNee is a beautiful brunette of striking appearance, tall and slender. She was a May Queen's maid, as a freshman at Lindenwood in 1924.

Maids of the "royal court" for 1927, from the various underclass were elected with particular reference to their roles in the Centennial. There are five of them: Miss Harriet Collins, of Oxford, Kans., for the juniors; two sophomores, Misses Susan Jordan, of Vincennes, Ind., and Elizabeth Tracy, of St. Charles, Mo., and two freshman maids, Misses Elinor Lide, of Camden, Ark., and Lawana McAninch, of Garber, Okla.

LINDENWOOD ISSUES CENTENNIAL CATALOG

Special De Luxe Edition
Out in Time for Spring Recess.

Lindenwood College has issued its new Centennial Catalog for 1926-27, in gala edition, in time for exhibition during the college spring recess, which opens Wednesday.

On the cover page Major and Mrs. George C. Sibley are pictured in color, in portraits of 100 years ago. There is a picture in color of the old Sibley Hall which they built, which still stands, and which is to be a center for students returning to the college in May. This hall has been restored and modernized. In hazy clouds at the background of the picture is the $500,000 Roemer Hall, showing forth in college colors, white and gold, as the "ful-filled dream" of these two who founded Lindenwood.

A roster of the 488 students of the year is presented, with enrollment by states. Next to Missouri, which has 102 Lindenwood students, stands Illinois, with fifty-nine students. Kansas and Oklahoma have an equal number, forty; Arkansas has thirty-four and Nebraska twenty-seven. Twenty-five states and the Philippine Islands are represented.

At the back of the volume is a list of the twenty-one Lindenwood College clubs, with their officers, alumnae and former students.

Lindenwood Queen To Visit Augusta, Mo.

Because this is centennial year at Lindenwood College, the May Queen and all the anticipatory social events in her honor are regarded by the students as of special importance. Miss Marguerite McNee, the queen, had numerous invitations for the spring recess, which begins Wednesday, but has accepted that of Miss Verna Meyer of Augusta, Mo., where the members of Miss Meyer's house party will be guests at several country club dances and at smaller parties and teas.

Miss Harriet Collins, Lindenwood junior, who is first maid of honor, will visit Kansas University campus for several days. While there she will attend an S. A. E. formal. She will spend the rest of the recess at her home in Oxford, Mo., together with Miss Audrey Richert, who lives near Oxford.

Miss Elizabeth Tracy of St. Charles, one of the queen's maids, will visit friends in Washington, D. C. Miss Tracy already had been elected to a leading role in the Centennial Pageant, to represent the department of modern languages, but she has been obliged to withdraw because of her place in the queen's court.

Publisher Speaks At Lindenwood College.

William W. Ellsworth of Hartford, Conn., former president of the Century Company, and a publisher of 50 years' experience, told the girls of Lindenwood College, in an assembly address Thursday, that if they desired to write, the best method is "just to strike out and write." Many now famous fiction-writers, he said, have once been journalists, and journalism he classed as perhaps the best mode of training possible. He told of an early experience in meeting Harriet Beecher Stowe, author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," who was introduced to him as "the little woman who brought on the Civil war." Other stories were told, illuminating his talk, concerning Booth Tarkington, Jack London, Zona Gale, Brander Matthews, F. Hopkinson Smith, Rudyard Kipling, Robert Louis Stevenson, and other distinguished writers.

URGES JOURNALISM FOR ASPIRING WRITER

Publisher Cites Successful Authors Who Took that Route.

Journalism as training for authorship was recommended yesterday morning by William W. Ellsworth of Hartford, Conn., former president of the Century Company, in a talk at Lindenwood College. The speaker said he could name, off-hand, fifty authors of distinction who had started by the journalism route, and his judgment was confirmed by answers to a questionnaire he had sent out to a number of successful story-writers of the day.

Ellsworth mentioned Richard Harding Davis, George Fox, Jr., George Ade, Montague Glass, Zona Gale, Willa Cather, and Mark Twain as among those who had gone into "writing" from journalism.

He said: "The only way to learn to write so that anybody will want to read you, is to write. College will give you an education and a background, but it won't necessarily make you a writer." He quoted a noted critic as saying: "Journalism is the true school of literary production." Short-story classes may help the individual in matters of form, construction, and the way to produce effect, but he said that in the last analysis the writer must "strike out for himself," citing James Whitcomb Riley and Mark Twain as examples.

Ellsworth, who is a great-grandson of Noah Webster, the dictionary-maker, spoke of the wizardry of words. The same words are in the dictionary for all, he said, but he is a genius who can weave those words into a magic spell. "Whose personality is more interesting than that of writers? Certainly not Congressmen or Senators. You don't care a bit how your Missouri Senators write their speeches, but you would be glad to go away up to Kennebunk, Me., to see how Booth Tarkington writes."

Editorials from numerous college publications were entered in the contest in which a group of journalists acted as judges.

The Southwestern Chautauqua embraces Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico and other states of the Southwest. Its plan is to provide for this section of the country a cultural center similar to that provided in the East by the New York Chautauqua. Persons of marked ability in any of the states interested will be obtained if possible for the program.

The Chautauqua will meet during July and August at Las Vegas, N. M. Last year it met at Sulphur Springs, Ark.

Missouri Student Wins Award

A MISSOURI girl, Miss Kathryn Pratt Walker of Aurora, who is a junior at Lindenwood College, has recently written the prize-winning editorial in a $25 prize contest, open to all the colleges of the country, for the best student publication editorial on "Why the Southwest Needs a Chautauqua."

As Miss Walker attended last year's Southwestern Chautauqua when it met at Sulphur Springs, Ark., she was particularly enthusiastic over the possibility of promoting culture in the southwest, desiring native sons and daughters of talent to be recognized in their own region and also providing opportunity without going to the east or north. Miss Walker's work was done in the classroom routine of Lindenwood's journalism department.

Mrs. William Bacon of Dallas, Tex., president of the Southwestern Chautauqua Association, will embody the editorial in literature announcing the chautauqua. Missouri is one of the ten states in the association which will convene at Las Vegas, N. M., during the months of July and August.

Miss Livingston is one of the best athletes of the college having played on the Sophomore hockey team and also on the baseball team. She made the Missouri hockey team, on which are only those who are superior players. Miss Kathryn Pratt Walker.

The Southwestern Chautauqua Association, which is to meet through July and August at Las Vegas, N. M., with a membership covering ten States of the Southwest, has honored Miss Kathryn Pratt Walker, a junior of Lindenwood College, with a $25 prize check for the best college newspaper editorial on this movement. The contest, open to all colleges, was announced in the fall of last year, and students were given until Feb. 1 to write their editorials. Miss Walker's editorial, appearing in Linden Bark, the campus weekly of Lindenwood College, was under the caption, "Why the Southwest Needs a Chautauqua." It presented ably the claims of the region of the Southwest to native sons and daughters of cultural eminence, and she saw no reason why the Eastern Chautauqua dominance should continue. The editorial was highly commended by the judges who were newspaper men. Mrs. William Bacon of Dallas, Tex., is president of the Southwestern Chautauqua Association.

Lindenwood Now Has Beta Pi Theta Chapter

Theta Xi Chapter of Beta Pi Theta, just organized in the French department at Lindenwood College, is the first national fraternity to come into existence with charter membership at Lindenwood. Its members are composed of the members of the former French Club, or "Le Cercle Francais," students who recently presented the annual French play in Roemer Auditorium. The granting of a charter from national headquarters followed the raising of grades from "M" to "S" in January.

Immediately upon notice of its entrance, the new chapter completed its organization and elected officers according to instructions from headquarters as follows: Faculty counsellor, Miss E. Louise Stone, head of the modern language department; president, Miss Lillie Bloomenstiel; and other officers, Miss Mildred Henney, Miss Rosa-linn Sachs, Miss Kathryn Walker, Miss Frances Stumberg, Miss Audrey Weinberg, Miss Janet Hood, Miss Mary Alice Lange, Miss Elizabeth Tracy and Miss Maxine Bloch.

B. G. GIRL IS HONORED BY LINDENWOOD

MISS VIRGINIA SUE CAMPBELL IS PLEDGED A MEMBER OF ALPHA SIGMA TAU

The following article written by a member of the staff of Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Missouri, will be very gratifying to Miss Virginia

Sue's many friends here at home. She is a very charming young lady and it gives us much pleasure to publish the article.

Miss Virginia Sue Campbell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Campbell, of Bowling Green, has recently been pledged a member of the Alpha Sigma Tau, honorary sorority of Lindenwood College. Membership is granted to only those students who have maintained a high scholarship throughout three college semesters. A small percent of the students of each class are pledged each year. Miss Campbell is one of the Juniors who were recommended by the faculty this year.

The honor is recognized as a high one, and it would please any girl in the college to be pledged a member of the Alpha Sigma Tau. The scholarship standing of which the organization is representative is of the highest quality.

Miss Campbell played a leading role in the musical comedy which was presented by the Lindenwood Athletic Association March 4th. She made a most charming "Nadine" in the comedy, "You See It Was This Way". Miss Campbell assured her audience that she was truly the real college girl of today.

These are not the first activities in which Miss Campbell has been a leader, but it isn't saying too much to pronounce her one of the most representative girls in Lindenwood College. She is the house president of Butler Hall, and a member of the Student Council. For the years 1926 and 1927, she has been the president of her class. She is secretary of the League of Women Voters, and holds offices in the college choir and Choral Club.

When Lindenwood College desired a representative to go to the American Association of Colleges at Ann Arbor, Michigan, this year, Miss Campbell was the girl who was elected.

The girls in Lindenwood College all know Virginia Sue Campbell, and she is regarded not only as a leader and a girl who is depended upon, but a lovely character and an understanding companion to those with whom she comes in contact.

LINDENWOOD STUDENTS HOLD BIG FOOD SALE

Twenty students of home economics turned their training in cooking at Lindenwood College to good advantage Thursday afternoon in a food sale.

For this food sale there were advance orders, even before the many varieties of cakes and cookies and pies came out of the oven. The six kinds of cake were daintily frosted in white or chocolate, for students' "spreads."

Hermit cookies and ginger-cakes and "fillings" were sold by the basketsful, and pies by the dozens. There was a great demand for the various sandwiches.

It had been suggested that there might have been coffee served with the dainties, but the demand was so great that no room was found for serving.

The proceeds of the sale provided payment for the Home Economics Club's page in "Linden Leaves," the college annual, and also gave a surplus which was devoted to the Sibley Memorial scholarship fund.

GIVES NEW TWIST TO GARDEN OF EDEN STORY

Dr. Jabez Jackson, Anti-Evolutionist, Presents Novel Interpretation of Genesis.

Dr. Jabez Jackson, president-elect of the American Medical Association, described himself as an anti-evolutionist with a leaning to fundamentalism in an address before 500 girls at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, yesterday afternoon.

Today in an interview at the Forest Park Hotel, before returning to his home at Kansas City, he amplified his remarks, declaring that while he did not believe everything in the Bible, he accepted it as "essential truth."

"The fundamentalist," he said, "has just as firm an argumentative ground as the evolutionist has, because the evolutionist has failed so far to prove his point."

With that he turned to a novel interpretation of the meaning of Genesis. "In the Garden of Eden," he declared, "woman did not tempt man. Woman ate of the tree of knowledge and in giving man of the fruit did mankind its greatest service.

"The whole meaning of civilization is bound up in man's pursuit of knowledge. By that act in the Garden of Eden man marked himself off from the rest of the animal kingdom. Eden was a paradise of irresponsibility. It was a place where man could have chosen to remain in blissful ignorance of all the laws governing him and the other animals. But he chose to know.

"It was not the fall of man that took place in the Garden of Eden, but the beginning of man's rise. It was his real birth. We may truly say that the pursuit of knowledge is the real mark of mankind."

Dr. Jackson spoke of the physical man, the mental man and the spiritual man, each administered to by a different profession. The physician's sphere is solely the physical man, the educator's sphere the mental man, and the clergyman's sphere the spiritual man.

Science, said Dr. Jackson, is not necessarily at variance with religion. "The trouble is," he declared, "that so much scientific knowledge has been acquired in the last half century that mankind has been suffering with mental dyspepsia, the same as if he had crammed too much food into his stomach. There have been so many manifestations of the power of God in the world that we have been inclined to forget they are God's work."

*Post-Dispatch,

Dr. Jackson is 58 years old, and has been a practicing surgeon in Kansas City for 25 years. He was educated as a Methodist fundamentalist and is now a member of the Christian church. He has been an officer of various medical associations and will become active president of the national association in May.

TWENTY-THIRD YEAR

MISS HELEN ROPER WRITES MUSIC FOR MUSICAL COMEDY

Lindenwood Girls To Present Play
Written By Daughter of Ohio
Clergyman. Music By West
Plains Clergyman's Daughter.

West Plains will score another honor tomorrow night when the girls of Lindenwood College at St. Charles, Mo., will present an original three-act musical comedy, "You See, It Was This Way," the music for which was written by Miss Helen Roper of West Plains, who is a junior music student in the college.

Miss Roper, who is one of West Plains' most charming and talented young women is the daughter of the Rev. Sam L. Roper, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of West Plains. A rather interesting coincident in connection with the play is the fact that Miss Roper shares honors with Miss Betty Birch of Toledo, O., a former Missouri girl who wrote the comedy, and who is also the daughter of a Presbyterian clergyman, being the daughter of the Rev. Chester Birch, formerly of Kansas City, but now pastor of a Presbyterian church in Toledo.

Miss Birch and Miss Roper are roommates at Lindenwood.

Each year the college presents a musical comedy, which is written by a student in the literary department and the music for which is composed by a student of the music department. Each student who desires may submit a play, and the judges select the best one entered. Miss Roper and Miss Birch had strong competition this year, but easily won the honor of having their play selected.

The musical comedy will be presented tomorrow night in Romer auditorium in St. Charles under the auspices of the Lindenwood College Athletic Association, and a part of the proceeds will be devoted to the Mary Easton Sibley scholarship fund, according to announcement made by the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Globe-Democrat also gives the following brief sketch of the play:

Mr. Van Horn, a hard-headed business man with a sense of humor, is to be represented by Miss Carita Kingsbury; Miss Sprightwell, his secretary, an elderly maiden lady of romantic spirit, by Miss Eugenia Owens, and Skimpy, an office boy, by Miss Helena Campbell. The plot around which the music and amusing dialogue are strung concerns two wards of Mr. Van Horn, a young man and young woman who never met each other, and the difficulties experienced by their guardian in his desire to make them fall in love with each other.

Miss Marjory Bright and Miss Betty Birch play the parts, respectively, of the young man, Jo Carter, and the young woman. Natalie White while Miss Ruth Bullion is Bud, Jo's shadow, a genuine nut. The heroine has a friend, Nadine, who is impersonated by Miss Sue Campbell.

An original stenographers' chorus enlivens the opening office scene, and there is a jockey chorus and a Hawaiian chorus. The scene shifts to shipboard, where there is a sailors chorus, a Spanish chorus and a seasick chorus. Just before landing the captain's ball is portrayed, across which appears the tin soldiers' chorus, "Mary, Mary, Quite Contrary," and the clown chorus.

A specialty dance, "Red Riding Hood and the Wolf," will be done by Misses Kathryn Walker and Frances Stumberg, the latter being the Wolf.

Cookery, Regarded as an Art in France, Is Really a Science

'Bad Luck' with Recipes Can Always Be Traced to Carelessness or Lack of Knowledge.

COOKERY AS AN ART AND SCIENCE

By BESSIE McNARY.

IN FRANCE cookery is considered as the eighth art, and today it is not only thought of as an art, but also a science. In speaking of the art of cooking, as it is considered today, there are two points to be considered:

1. The development of flavors which appeal to a delicate and normal sense of taste.

2. The serving of foods with such an appearance and at such a temperature that they are appetizing.

However, the science of cooking lies in a knowledge of the following facts:

1. The knowledge of what accurate measuring is.

2. The proportions of different ingredients used together to make a digestible and palatable dish.

3. The composition of food materials in order to combine them in diet, so that the nutrients are in the right proportion for the body.

4. The proper degree and quantity of heat to be applied to make food materials most easily and thoroughly digestible.

5. The economical use of fuels and utensils to save money and labor.

6. The methods of keeping foods from decomposing or spoiling, and of preventing, as far as possible, the spread of infectious diseases by foods and utensils.

"Bad Luck" Carelessness.

This summary shows how much more there is to be known than is to be found in an ordinary cook book. Experience has shown and will show how hard it is to have no variation in results. Accuracy and information and judgment are always necessary.

"Bad luck" means carelessness or lack of information. Cooking results, like all others, have a reason. If you make mistakes, find out why they were mistakes and so turn them to your profit.

The Lindenwood senior home economics girls have found in their research work in foods the above to be true. In their experimental cookery class, they have worked out many good recipes which can be used and followed by anyone who takes the foregoing precautions.

The following recipes are contributed by the home economics seniors and if followed accurately, the results will be as these girls have found them to be, which are considered by them their best.

MASONS WILL LAY CHURCH CORNER STONE

Manor Presbyterian Ceremonies to Be Held Tomorrow.

Masonic ceremonies, with Dr. John Picard, Grand Master of the Masons of Missouri, officiating, will mark the corner-stone laying of the new Manor Presbyterian Church, Helen and Theodore avenues, at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. An escort of honor from the Ivanhoe Commandery is to march with Dr. Picard, and the members of several lodges will march in procession from the Jennings Masonic Hall to the church site, preceding the ceremony.

This congregation is unique in having a 5-year-old boy, little Joel Haskins, a member of its Building and Finance Committee. He was so voted at a congregational meeting last Sunday night, because of his unusual assistance in aid of the building fund.

He sold soap, for a few cents' profit, day after day, for this cause, until he made $25. He then fell ill. The fact became a 'human interest' story in a St. Louis newspaper, and caught the eye of Dr. John Lincoln Roemer, president of Lindenwood College.

Dr. Roemer straightway wrote a letter to Joel, congratulating him on his effort, and inclosing a personal check for $25, to match the $25 which Joel had earned. The gift made the boy so happy that he recovered from his illness, and carried the letter with him to Sunday school and church, where it was read aloud. Joel was credited with a $50 gift—one of the largest individual subscriptions, and was voted on the Building and Finance Committee, as stated.

Ministers assisting at tomorrow's ceremonies will be Rev. R. R. Biggar, moderator of the St. Louis Presbytery, who will preside; Rev. Dr. R. Calvin Dobson, executive secretary of the presbytery; Rev. Dr. Leonard V. Buschman of the Tyler Place Presbyterian Church, and Rev. Dr. William B. Lampe of the West Presbyterian Church.

Construction will start immediately on the basement unit, with a seating capacity of 350 persons.

Lindenwood Sends 6000 Invitations to 100th Anniversary

Elaborate Program to Mark College Centennial May 27-31.

Six thousand invitations have just been sent out from Lindenwood College, formally announcing the college centennial, May 27-31. This celebration is to mark the 100th anniversary of the opening of "Linden Wood," as the home estate of Maj. and Mrs. George C. Sibley was then called. President and Mrs. John Lincoln Roemer have received acceptances for the centennial from more than 2000 former students and alumnae of Lindenwood, who in many centers have been preparing for an enthusiastic "home coming" by means of federated Lindenwood College clubs. These extend from New York City, where Mrs. George Pegram, formerly Miss Jessie Crawford of St. Louis, is president, to the club of Los Angeles, from which Mrs. Ben Cunliff, formerly of St. Louis, is returning as one of the centennial delegates.

Mrs. W. W. Seymour, president of the Illinois State Federation of Women's Clubs, will return to Lindenwood's centennial as president of the Chicago Lindenwood College Club. Mrs. Nellie Donnelly, a well-known manufacturer, who is president of the Kansas City Lindenwood Club, is hastening home from a European trip, in order to be here for the centennial.

Mrs. John H. Hanna of Texas, the national president of the Y. M. C. A., is an old Lindenwood student who will be here. Another shining light will be Judge Lois Dale, active in the Texarkana Club.

The centennial celebration is to include the pageant, on the campus, the night of May 28, of "The Progress of Women in Education," written by Miss Lucia Hutchins. It is to portray Maj. and Mrs. George C. Sibley in their daily life of 100 years ago, with the accompanying Indians, ox teams, log houses and horseback riding of pioneer days, carrying the story through the school's continuous existence on to its expansion under Dr. Roemer, to a full four-year college, standardized and accredited.

The May Queen and her court will appear in each episode, and the musical theme will be that of the "Liebestraum." Practically every girl in the college will take part.

Addresses on May 30 and 31 will be made by two leading educators. A grand opera singer of international fame is to give a concert program Monday night, May 30.

For commencement day, May 31, 1200 "official" invitations have been sent out to representatives of colleges, universities and other institutions, who are to march in the centennial procession with the officials of Lindenwood.

Lindenwood Will Hold Centennial Pageant Week

Play Depicting College and State's History Will Feature Hundredth Birthday.

The one hundredth anniversary of the founding of Lindenwood College at St. Charles will be celebrated from May 27 to 31, closing with the commencement exercises. Six thousand invitations have been sent out, half of them to former students of the college who now live in 43 different states and 10 foreign countries.

The Centennial Pageant on the campus, on Saturday evening, May 28, will feature the five-day program. It will be in two parts, the first showing the history of Maj. George C. Sibley and his wife, Mary Easton Sibley, who founded the college in 1827, when there was no boarding school nearer St. Louis than Kentucky. Mary Easton will be pictured on horseback, riding West to Kentucky, then to Missouri, where her father, Judge Rufus Easton, was to become first postmaster of St. Louis.

Lindenwood girls are rehearsing now as Indians and drivers of ox-teams. Scenes will portray old-time examination days, Sunday afternoons and visits of townspeople to the school. Various episodes will bring the college to its modern status.

A souvenir history of the college will be distributed, relating the history of Major Sibley, who, as United States Commissioner to the Indians, was the first white man to see the Salt Plains of Northwest Oklahoma, and of Mrs. Sibley, who organized the first Sunday school class in St. Charles, taught music and directed the college until her death, in 1878.

WHAT ST. LOUIS WOMEN ARE DOING

BY LOUISE GRANT SMITH

Six thousand invitations have been sent out from President John Lincoln Roemer's office for the Lindenwood College centennial celebration, May 21-31. In recognition of the efforts and achievements of the residents of St. Charles toward the Sibley memorial scholarship, "St. Charles Night" will be celebrated May 27. The formal opening of the centennial will occur at 11 a. m. Saturday, May 28. This is the annual day of the May Queen's coronation, but this classic ceremony is to be amplified in this centennial year to the impressive centennial pageant, which has been written by Miss Lucia Hutchins, of the faculty.

In this pageant the May Queen, Marguerite McNee, and her five maids will figure in each episode. The picture-story will take the spectators, on the undulating ground of Lindenwood's golf course, through the early days of hoop skirts and log houses, of Indians and ox teams, through the perilous years of the Civil War, then on to the present, when "Mary Easton Sibley's dream" is fulfilled in the fully accredited four-year college with 500 students. Every one of these students is to have some part in the pageant.

The baccalaureate sermon, Sunday, May 29, a grand opera concert on Monday night, an address by a widely known college president Monday morning, and finally the commencement Tuesday, May 31, will round out events for the returning "girls of yesterday," who have signified from 43 different States that 2000 or more of them will rejoice in the centennial reunion.

ST. CHARLES TO BE GIVEN OVATION AT LINDENWOOD

On May, 28, 500 Lindenwood Students To Present Pageant Depicting Modes And Fashions Of Past Century.

If the good people of St. Charles have heard little of the preparation for Lindenwood College celebration in May, the outside world has heard a great deal. The Centennial Celebration of the College will take place May 27-31 and arrangements are being made for a great time and a great program.

The publicity committee has announced that 957 newspapers of the country are publishing outlines of the coming event and historians and college people are seeking information about the city of St. Charles and the great College located in our midst.

Friday night, May 27, is to be known as St. Charles night. The purpose of the committee on arrangements is to emphasize St. Charles, the home of Lindenwood College. Band concert, fireworks, and speeches by prominent local people will formally inaugurate the Centennial celebration.

Saturday night, May 28, one of the most stupendous pageants ever given in St. Charles will be given depicting the historical incidents of the past century. Over 500 people will participate. Old stage coaches have been procured for this event. Many horses with students riding to school in 1827 will be seen.

The May Queen of 1927 and her attendants will close the program of the evening. Miss Lucia Hutchins of the Oratory department of the College is director of the pageant which she has written.

Monday night, May 30, Miss Florence Macbeth, the famous prima donna coloratura soprano of the Chicago Civic Opera Company, will appear in a recital at Roemer Auditorium.

The College is preparing to entertain about 500 on the campus. Many St. Charles people are going to open their homes to Lindenwood's guests. The event will be one of the most important in the city's history and all St. Charles will join in helping it to be a success.

Consent has been given at Lindenwood College, upon petition of the juniors and seniors, for a junior-senior prom., Saturday night, April 30, for the first time in a number of years. Especial permission was granted on account of this being the centennial season, but the condition has been made by Mrs. John Lincoln Roemer, dean of students, that only one guest can be invited by each student. Miss Delta Neumann, of Odem, Tex., is president of the senior class, and Miss Sue Campbell, of Bowling Green, Mo., is president of the juniors.

Miss Virginia See, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. See of 5370 Cabanne avenue, was crowned queen of the artillery at the twenty-seventh annual military ball given in Rothwell Gymnasium at the University of Missouri, Friday night, April 1. Miss See is a sophomore in the College of Arts and Science. It is her first year in Columbia. Her freshman year was spent in Lindenwood College.

Promptly at 10 o'clock, as the bugle sounded, a double row of cadet officers formed an arch with drawn sabers, from the south end of the gymnasium to the coronation platform, beneath which the two queens (Miss Alma Hill of the infantry and Miss See of the artillery) were escorted by the cadet colonels of the infantry and the artillery regiments.

The coronation was preceded by the crown bearers. Miss Evelyn Shepard, 6-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Shepard, carried the crown for the queen of the infantry, and Miss Mary Jane Hill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Hill, carried the crown for the artillery queen.

Representative W. L. Nelson rendered a coronation address, after which the queens, escorted by the cadet colonels, Vance Julian of the infantry, and Guido Moss of the artillery, led the grand march back through the line of officers. Six hundred participated in the grand march.

Religion Greatest Thing in World, Dr. Roemer Says

Lindenwood President De- scribes Christ's 'Palm Sunday.'

Palm Sunday vespers were held at Lindenwood College last night, with a sermon by the president, Dr. John Lincoln Roemer, and music by the vested choir. Dr. Roemer read the passage of Scripture from the gospel of Mark, telling of Jesus entering the temple and "looking about upon all things" the night before he entered on the first Palm Sunday. Mark, he said, is the only gospel writer who records Jesus' preliminary visit to the temple at this time. "It is a 'special feature' story, a 'human interest' story of this first Palm Sunday." The speaker told of this visit of Jesus to the temple as of one who was looking about on a loved environment for the last time. His topic was "The Things of Life."

"Jesus entered the temple at the eventime," he said, "the time of day when one is given to reflective thought. In the light of the fading day he looked upon the 'things' of the temple; the sacrificial altar as the three fires blazed; the font of brass upheld by twelve colossal lions; the golden candlestick; the table of shewbread; the altar of incense.

Not Stranger to Temple.

"Jesus was not a stranger to the temple. It had always been his Father's house. As he looked forward, he well knew the tender familiarity with the things of the temple was soon to be severed.

"Did you ever pass through the experience of leaving the old home where you were born and reared? Every part of its grown precious in memory? The furniture, the pictures, the bric-a-brac, seemed to be vocal with a message for you—a message of tender memories; you evaluated them as part of your very being? This is what Mark brings to us when he says, 'He looked around about upon all things.'

"Leaving old associations breaks the human heartstrings. The senior leaves her alma mater in a different spirit from the one she brought as a freshman. The classroom, once the embodiment of agony, is now the scene of greatest joy; the dormitory that once was made of prison walls is a palace of pleasant memories; the associations formed while in college are life-lasting, the most precious of possessions.

Everyday Things in Memory.

"As Jesus at the eventime of that first Palm Sunday contemplated the things of the temple as most sacred, so we cannot look upon life as separating anything from the most sacred. In our daily tasks, if we are dissociating them from the necessary part of being, we are destroying the fiber of human character. In our daily pleasures, if we are divorcing them from our spiritual development, we shall at the end of life's journey write, 'Ichabod'—the glory has departed.

*Globe-Democrat,
April 11*

"What a great factor are the things of life in the making of man! Some people are fearful lest scientific investigation will destroy the foundations of faith. Religion has nothing to fear from the scientist; it may owe him a debt of gratitude for illuminating religious truth. The scientist has nothing to fear from religious faith; it will spiritualize his work. Nothing is so incongruous today as the attempt to place religion and science in antagonistic camps. They are friends, serving one common master.

A Commercial Age.

"We call this a 'commercial age.' So it is. Commerce is the greatest religious factor in the universe, for its success depends upon sacrifice and service. The man of business has the greatest possibility for the development of character and the honoring of his Christian faith. There is more religious contagion in honest dealing and honest service than in religious exhortation. The making of a dollar is the making or unmaking of man. Money is 'filthy lucre' only when made so by men.

"Architecture, music, art, are not worldly pursuits. We justly remember the anniversary of a Beethoven. The architect who designs a dwelling or a skyscraper is doing something as sacred as building a sanctuary. 'No religion is complete,' says one, 'without a relation to every department of life. No department of life is complete without a relation to religion.'

"Good workmanship is a revealer of good character. The way we go about our daily labor reflects what we really are. The decree that man should earn his bread in the sweat of his brow was the divine method of making something of man. One of the most beautiful appraisements of man is that he is a co-worker with God. The God of things is discovered, known and hallowed, as beside him we fashion our workmanship after the pattern set before us. In our work we worship when we do his will."

An interesting announcement is the engagement of Miss Fanny Fern Smith, professor of botany at Lindenwood College, to Everett Fogg Davis of Yonkers, N. Y., which is being made by cards sent out to members of the faculty and administrative staff. Miss Smith, who is the youngest daughter of Dr. and Mrs. C. G. Smith of Red Bud, Ill., has many friends in St. Louis, as she studied for seven years at Washington University, and received three degrees from that institution, A. B. in 1923, M. S. in 1924, and Ph. D. in 1926. She is the only woman who has ever held a national office in Phi Sigma, an honorary fraternity, and she has membership in Sigma Xi and Phi Beta Kappa, honorary fraternities, as well as in Phi Mu, social sorority.

It was during a year of research work in the botany laboratories of the Missouri Botanical Garden that Miss Smith met her fiance, who is a plant physiologist, and was also making studies of the flowers at the Missouri Botanical Garden. He is now engaged in doing plant research work at the Boyce-Thompson Institute at Yonkers, his home being in Madison, N. J. This work is to be completed this season, and will be the basis of a doctor's degree. Both young people have written a number of brochures which are considered of value in the study of botany.

LINDENWOOD A. A. DINNER ON FRIDAY

Lindenwood College students who have made the "points" in physical education necessary for the coveted membership in the Lindenwood Athletic Association will be of the company of about sixty students and five members of the faculty who are to enjoy the annual Athletic Association banquet at the Hotel Chase Friday night. It will be seen how carefully the membership list is guarded by the fact that out of 500 students sixty constitute those meeting all the requirements.

Baseball seems to be coming in for great popularity in girls' college life, and, recognizing this fact, the walls of the banquet hall will show baseball decorations. The sport is to appear in many ways in features of the entertainment.

Miss Bernice Edwards of Joplin, Mo., the retiring president of the association, will be toastmaster, and the new officers will be asked to speak. These are the new president, Miss Harriet Liddle, of Des Moines, Ia.; Miss Kathryn Walker, Aurora, Mo., vice president; Miss Marjorie Bright, Wichita Falls, Tex., treasurer; and Miss Mary Tripodi, Okmulgee, Ok., secretary.

Those of the faculty who will be guests are the president, Dr. John Lincoln Roemer, and his wife; Miss Barbara Eschbach, head of the physical education department; Miss Gene Gustavus, physical education, and Miss Harriet Diven, oratory.

President Roemer's toast is to be "The Home Run," by which may be designated the significance of Lindenwood's centennial and the return soon of about 2000 old students.

St. Louis Presbytery Urges Enforcement of Prohibition Law

Overwhelming Majority of People Are Dry, Re- port Claims.

The St. Louis Presbytery yesterday, in its meeting at the West Presbyterian Church, Maple and Maryville avenues, accepted a report on prohibition from its moral welfare division of the Christian Education Committee, which declared: "To be consistent we must enforce the Volstead law or repeal all criminal laws."

A recent editorial was quoted from an afternoon paper, in which the presbytery's committee said that the argument was: "To abolish crime and law violation, it is only necessary to repeal all law against crime."

Dry Majority Claimed.

It was claimed "the dries are in an overwhelming majority," and statistics were cited, showing increasing votes for "the dries" in several states. The report stated: "Why has Congress, with its last breath, passed such a strong law for its enforcement if the demand for that law is dying out? The only answer is that they had heard from voters. That is the only voice they recognize." The report was presented by Dr. J. A. Todd.

Commissioners to the General Assembly, which meets May 26 in San Francisco, Cal., were elected as follows: Rev. Dr. R. R. Biggar of Cote Brilliant Church; Rev. Dr. George Wales King of Markham Memorial Church, Rev. Howard L. Bourner of Kingsland Memorial Church, Elders, W. H. Bissland, West Church; John Uthoff, Carondelet Church, and Dr. James A. Todd, Webster Groves Church.

Moderator Elected.

The presbytery was obliged to give up St. Charles as the place for its spring meeting, because of high water, and met instead at the West Presbyterian Church. Rev. G. Marion Hull of Washington, Mo., was elected moderator, to succeed Rev. Dr. R. R. Biggar, who preached the annual sermon. Speakers were heard from the building department of the Board of National Missions, and the presbytery agreed to enter on a loyalty campaign in the fall.

Sixteen candidates for the ministry, the largest number in many years, was reported for the presbytery by Dr. R. S. Calder of Lindenwood College, chairman of the Christian Education Committee.

The installation of Rev. Charles A. Bowler as pastor at the North Church will take place May 1, and that of Rev. Arnold H. Lowe at Kingshighway Church on May 11.

The state of Nebraska will be represented at the centennial celebration of Lindenwood college, St. Charles, Mo., on the night of May 28, by Miss Lucille Evelyn Coker of Sutherland. Miss Marjorie Evelyn Coker of Sutherland also is a student at Lindenwood.

The founders of this great college for young women also were founders of the territory of which the state of Nebraska became a part. President Thomas Jefferson signed the commission of Maj. George C. Sibley, who explored the territory which has since become Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma. Major Sibley was the first white man to explore the great salt plains of northwest Oklahoma. He and his wife established their home on a large tract of land at St. Charles, Mo., and at the request of neighbors she opened a boarding school for girls. That was the beginning of Lindenwood college, which will be 100 hundred years old in May.

The centennial will be celebrated with great pomp and circumstance, and thousands of former students will be entertained by President and Mrs. John Lincoln Roemer. The school has been under the control of the Presbyterian synod of Missouri since Mrs. Sibley died in 1878, but it is not sectarian in a strict sense. The girls nearly all are athletes. The golf course is one of the best in the country, and the natatorium has turned out some of the best swimmers in the country.

Miss Helen Condon of Omaha will figure in old-time public "examinations," as shown in the pageant, and Misses Peggy Denise and Ramona Hubbell will help to present the "First Day of School," 100 years ago. Both are Omaha girls.

To Appear in Pageant at Lindenwood

Arkansas Will Be Represented by Warren Girl at Centennial.

Lindenwood College at St. Charles, Mo., is preparing for a sumptuous celebration of its one hundredth birthday during the last five days of May, and Miss Ruth Reaves of Warren has been selected to represent the state of Arkansas in the grand pageant to be held on the college golf grounds on the night of May 28.

The college was founded in 1827 by Mrs. Mary Easton Sibley. She was only a girl herself, but she had been educated in Kentucky and the people of Missouri wanted a place where their girls could be educated. Her husband was a celebrated army officer and Indian commissioner, the first white man to explore the great salt plains of what is now a part of northwest Oklahoma. Her father was Judge Rufus Easton, the first postmaster of St. Louis. Major and Mrs. Sibley had entered and obtained title to a large tract of land on the Boonlick road, the trail that Daniel Boone made when he went to Missouri. The Sibleys had no children, but the wife was an energetic and highly cultivated woman, and was imbued with a desire to give every girl a chance to acquire an education. She devoted her life to that purpose. She established her school for girls, and called it Lindenwood because of a large grove of linden trees on the estate. Now it is called Lindenwood, and there are still some of the old linden trees on the campus. The school grew, and before the Civil war Mrs. Sibley made a trip to Pennsylvania on horseback to raise money for it. She was successful. Now it is the largest college for young women west of the Allegheny mountains and is liberally endowed. In addition to the estate donated by the Sibleys, the college has acquired more land, and in place of the old log house where the girls went to school a hundred years ago, there are now a number of stately buildings and a campus of 138 acres. The 500 students are proud of the place, and proud of their connection with it. To be a Lindenwood girl is considered a distinction, and a good many of the Lindenwood girls are, or have been, Arkansas girls.

The centennial celebration will be partly in the nature of a home-coming. There will be several thousand of the "old" girls present as guests. Every state in the Union will be represented, and even the Philippine Islands. The college will be the host.

Dr. John Lincoln Roemer, president of the college, is a Presbyterian minister. He is a pulpit orator of note, but his strongest forte is as an executive. He has devoted himself to the college, and is largely responsible for its growth in the last 15 years. His wife is dean of students.

One of the policies of Lindenwood is that the girls shall be given an all-around education. Athletics are

The art of dancing is not neglected, and in order to demonstrate it, there are occasional dances for the students. This year there will be a formal "prom" for the juniors and seniors. On the night of April

Lindenwood Club.

Centennial memories, touching different parts of the last century, were revived in the toasts of the annual luncheon last Monday of the St. Louis Lindenwood College Club at the Missouri Athletic Association. A dramatic moment followed the toast of Miss Agnes Adams, "Dr. George Frederick Ayers," when the present president, Dr. John Lincoln Roemer, announced that Dr. Ayers' memory will be honored by the naming of a dormitory in his honor. Jubilee Hall, built under Dr. Ayers' administration, is to be remodeled this summer, and will be rededicated with its new name, next fall.

Mrs. W. K. Roth presided at the luncheon, with Miss Marjorie Manger as toastmistress.

Maj. George C. Sibley and his wife, Mary Easton Sibley, were subjects of an appreciative speech by Dr. Roemer. Dr. Roemer also recalled incidents of Col. and Mrs. James Gay Butler, and Dr. S. J. Niccolls. Mrs. G. W. Sutherland summed up memories of seven presidents coming between the Sibleys and Dr. Ayers, the latter having immediately preceded Dr. Roemer in 1914. A centennial song for the festivities the last of this month has been adopted by the school as written by Mrs. C. H. Baker, an alumna from Pasadena, Cal., who was one of the guests.

MISS SYLVA SNYDER'S RECITAL AT LINDENWOOD.

Miss Sylva Snyder, whose home is in Sparta, Ill., will give a junior recital Tuesday afternoon, May 10, at Roemer Auditorium, Lindenwood College, with the following program:

- Prelude and Fugue, C minor..... Bach
- Intermezzo, Op. 76..... Brahms

- Concerto, D minor, first movement—Rubinstefn

At a students' recital last Thursday at this college, a surprise centennial feature was the rendition by the director, John Thomas, of an old Lindenwood piece which had not seen the light for more than fifty years, but which received much applause. It was a piano number, "Under the Linden Leaves," which was dedicated to the school in 1856 by its composer, Mrs. French Strother, who at that time was at the head of Lindenwood's music department, her husband being president of the college.

HOW COLLEGE GIRLS ARE TAUGHT COOKING

The Modern Girl Includes Cookery in Her College Course.

The contribution of the modern women's colleges of this country to the cause of home economics, including knowledge of nutrition and food values and the education of better home cooks, is splendidly exemplified at Lindenwood College, St. Charles.

In the Economics Department at Lindenwood College, a class of nine girls will complete the course in foods and cookery this year.

Before they can receive any kind of a degree or certificate each girl is required to give a formal dinner in the "Economics Department apartment. This miniature home has a small living room, a dining room, butler's pantry and a kitchen which are fully equipped with all modern conveniences and appointments.

Each girl treats the apartment as her own on the day she gives her company dinner.

She takes complete charge of the apartment, plans her menu (taking care to make it come within a certain cost usually around 75 cents a plate), selects her color scheme of decoration and makes out her order list of the articles she needs for the meal.

In cooking and serving the meal the girl is allowed the assistance of two students of the department who serve as general helpers and waitresses. The hostess for the day, however, is obliged to take her turn at playing maid and kitchen assistant as an evidence of her ability to master all phases of dinner giving and dinner serving.

At these demonstration dinners, there must be three guests, one of whom must be a member of the faculty.

The first test dinner given by this year's class at Lindenwood took place last week with Miss Mildred Wilmans of Newport, Ark., as hostess. It was a typical Southern chicken dinner with the decorations and color scheme in red and white. President John L. Roemer and Mrs. Roemer and Miss Helen Campbell were the honor guests.

The menu was as follows:

|                      |                      |        |
|----------------------|----------------------|--------|
| Fruit cocktail       |                      |        |
| Fried chicken        | Gravy                |        |
| New potatoes         | Escalloped Asparagus |        |
| Cranberry Ice        |                      |        |
| Olives               | Rolls                | Celery |
| Stuffed tomato salad |                      |        |
| Strawberry shortcake |                      |        |
| Coffee               |                      |        |
| Nuts                 | Mints                |        |

A second dinner was given by Miss Mary Yancey who selected a yellow and white color scheme which was carried out in flowers, motifs, place cards and food with the following menu:

|                        |                 |        |

HONORS TO MISS CUTLER

Original Poem by Topekan Published in College Publication.

Miss Helen Cutler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Cutler, of 407 Woodlawn, and a granddaughter of Dr. and Mrs. A. F. Harrison, of Topeka, who is a student at Lindenwood college, St. Charles, Mo., has recently had an original poem published in the college paper—Linden Bark. This is an honor, for only the best literary works are printed in this paper. Miss Cutler is a member of the English club and also takes an active part in the Kansas club. The following is the poem which was published:

EVERYTHING TO THEE

The moon, the stars, all happiness and love,
The rain, the snow, all sorrows deep and sore
The open fields furrowed, but loved still more
Are trees magnificent with fairy love.
To shelter and embrace all birds that hover,
And slinking beasts that hide, and e'en the dove
Shall find content and peace the winter o'er.
As we, eternal rest from Him who bore
Great pain, the blessed Son of Him above,
Thus man and nature owe their debt;
All reverence, true honor and respect;
The joys of life come as a call to me
To live more fully the high road select.
The whole world stands beautifully curved from time.
The Maker may He have a hand in mine.
—Helen Cutler.

OLD VOLUMES AMONG SIBLEY COLLECTION

Centennial Celebration of Lindenwood College to Exhibit Antique Books.

Among articles of historic interest of the last century which are being arranged by Miss Alice A. Linne- man, for display at the centennial of Lindenwood College, have been discovered numerous antique volumes in the old Sibley Library. These are usually kept under lock and key, and not many persons are aware of their age.

One of the oldest, well bound in calf, is an edition of two volumes, "Sketches of the History of Man." These were published in 1779, and convey a view of conditions of life, social and political, and of the advancement at that time of science. The writer deplors "luxury" so much that he devotes a whole chapter to the subject. There were evidently no manicure parlors in those days, for he says, in reprobation: "Some London ladies employ an operator to pare their nails." But principally he inveighs against "wheel carriages" which were coming in. The increase of the number of such vehicles, he said, is "a proof of luxurious indolence." Horseback riding he believed to be by far the best form of locomotion, provided one could not walk.

A book of "Travels," dated 1791, gives a narrative of life in North and South Carolina, Georgia, "East and West Florida," and the Cherokee country. This was published in Philadelphia, showing that the printing press in the Colonies flourished at that time. A dozen or more volumes published in the eighteenth century are dated from Dublin and London, in this library.

The Sibley library contains a dictionary printed in 1805, a Bible of 1812 and a "Life of Petrarch" dated 1809. Under publishing date of 1812 is a "Manual of Parliamentary Practice for the Use of the United States Senate," from the hand of Thomas Jefferson, compiled after he had been President.

College girls of today will perhaps find amusement rather than profit in several works preserved from 1811 and 1819, "Letters to a Young Lady" and "Letters on the Improvement of the Mind." The latter work, by a certain Mrs. Chapone, illustrious in her day, contains this counsel to all wives: "The first thing you should impress most deeply on your mind is: Never attempt to control your husband by opposition, by displeasure, or any other mark of anger."

Visitors from a distance came to the annual luncheon of the St. Louis Lindenwood College Club, Monday, May 2, at the Missouri Athletic Association. Among them were Miss Keo Jordan of Hutchinson, Kan., and Mrs. C. H. Baker of Pasadena, Cal., the latter being the author of the Centennial Lindenwood song. Mrs. Earl Smith and Mrs. Charles Orr, both of Ash Grove, Mo., were also guests. Miss Marjorie Manger as toastmistress outlined the history of Lindenwood through the 100 years.

Miss Agnes Adams spoke on the life of Dr. Ayers, and Mrs. G. W. Sutherland on other presidents. Col. and Mrs. James Gay Butler and Dr. S. J. Niccolls, all "builders of the past," were remembered in other addresses.

MISS FRANCES TANNER PUBLISHES AN ESSAY

Miss Frances Tanner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Q. Tanner, recently of this city, has written an attractive essay on Laughter and published it in the Literary supplement of the Lindenwood weekly, Linden Bark. Miss Tanner is a freshman at Lindenwood College and and is a member of the English Club.

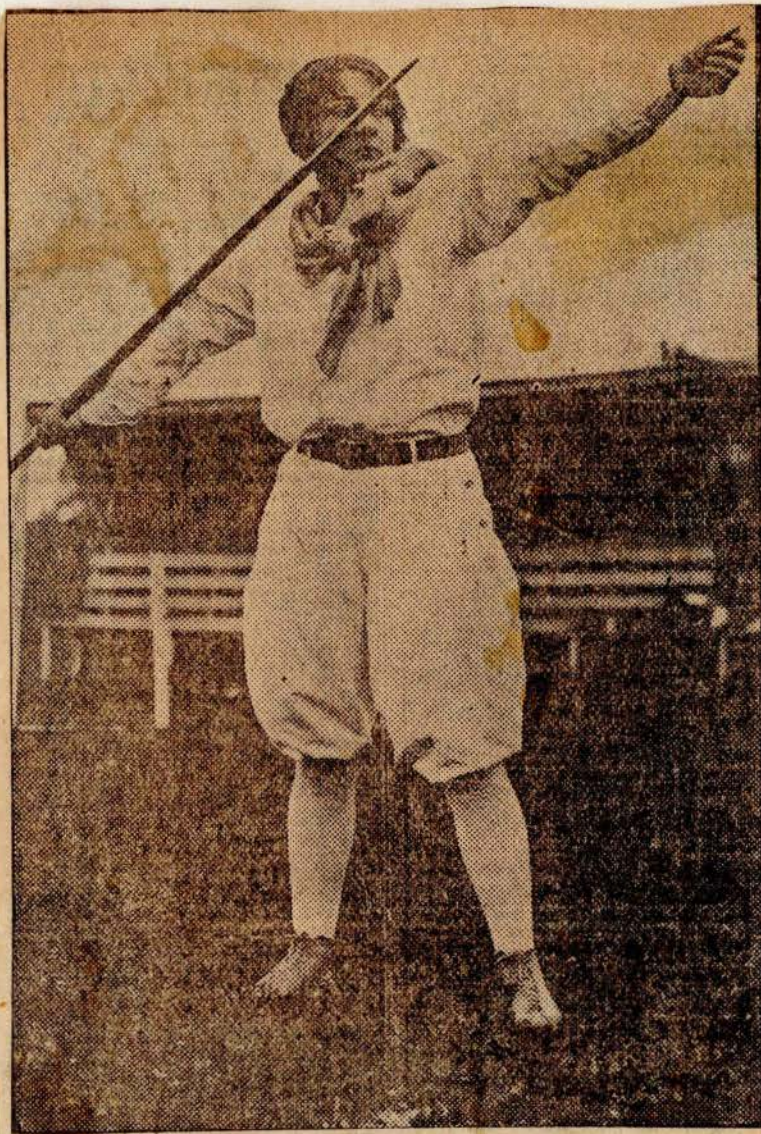

The essay: "The dictionary defines laughter as "the movement of the muscles of the face, specially of the lips, with interrupted (often noisy) expulsions of air from the lungs, indicating merriment, satisfaction, or derision". Of all that lengthy sentence, the last few words give away the true essentials. If you do not believe it, just try stretching your mouth to its limit of line and emitting a few husky or noisy breaths. There must be something behind the laugh to goad it forward; or something all around it for it to gather material from. But the rarest laugh is the laugh with something in it. This laugh supports its parents by its nature—parents who temper its quality, who invoke its best and control its worst. This true-ringing laugh is the real laugh.

Laughter may be analyzed and classified. Pure laughter is the essence of happiness. Loud boisterous laughter is the tale-bearer of ill breeding. Harsh laughter is discord of cynicism. Soft laughter is the fragrance of a beautiful life.

Cultivated laughter is the defense of a dull existence. Joyous, heart-lifting laughter is the overflow of an exalted nature.

POEM PUBLISHED

Miss Mary Barrett, daughter of Mr and Mrs. J. B. Barrett of Missouri Valley, has recently had a sonnet published in "Linden Park", a weekly newspaper edited by the students of Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo. This sonnet, "Memories" was written as an assignment in Lindenwood's English Literature class, and was judged to be of sufficient merit to be printed in a literary supplement of the "Bark."

Miss Barrett is a sophomore at Lindenwood and is studying in the commercial department, in which she belongs to the college Commercial Club. She is also a member of the Iowa Club.

Her sonnet follows:

MEMORIES

By Mary Barrett

As I sit dreaming by the dying fire
The fleeting mem'ries dance before my eyes.
T'is come, 'tis gone, the music of a lyre
The same is true of life, so full of sighs.
The brook goes dancing gayly on its way;
How like our youth today, but not tomorrow;
Today we laugh and sing and are so gay
Then on the morrow mem'ries we borrow.
The spring comes with her greenness everywhere
And as we live we're welcomed as the spring;
But autumn steals the green and leaves things bare,
Our youth soon fades and we no longer sing.
And so is life this way; we come,
we're gay
But very soon does death snatch us away.

Philippine Student Head of Lindenwood College Spanish Club

MURILLO PHOTO

THE Spanish Club of Lindenwood College has chosen Miss Margaret Maxwell of the Philippine Islands as its new president for 1927-28. Miss Maxwell is much interested in the Philippine Y. M. C. A. drive, now on in St. Louis. Her father, J. T. Maxwell of Manila, is physical director of the Y. M. C. A. in the Philippine Islands.

To the surprise of her classmates, Miss Maxwell prefers the Philippine climate where they "have summer all the year round," to the American climate.

The social activities of the American colony, she says, are quite as varied as in this country. There is a lively interest in sports. Besides horseback riding and hiking, there is swimming the year around. One advantage of residence there is its proximity to the Orient and the Pacific islands.

Miss Rose Sweeney of Morgantown, W. Va., is the first Centennial visitor at Lindenwood College. Miss Sweeney is a lifelong friend of Mrs. John L. Pershing's staff, the students were made especially enthusiastic in their sewing and knitting for the soldiers. She is being warmly welcomed, and will remain through the five days of Centennial events, May 27-31.

Miss Margaret Eleanor Keesor Is Taking Part In College Centennial

MISS MARGARET ELEANOR KEESOR

Wheeling, West Va.,
Intelligencer, May 17,

Miss Keesor, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Chas. Keesor of Centre Wheeling, will have a prominent part in the Centennial celebration of Lindenwood college, St. Charles, Mo., the last week of this month.

When Daniel Boone left Kentucky, went to Missouri and blazed a trail, which is known as the "Boonlick road," he little thought that a great college for women would spring up there. Up on the heights of St. Charles, far above any encroachment of the Missouri river, Lindenwood college has its numerous spacious buildings and its 130 acres of rolling land, where 500 young women are being educated.

This is a special year in the history of Lindenwood. It is its one hundredth birthday. From a simple log house boarding school for girls it has grown into a college of the first grade. The president is Doctor John Lincoln Roemer, a native of West Virginia. The dean of students is his wife, who also was born in West Virginia.

One of the features of the celebration will be a pageant, May 23, showing the progress of the college. One of the "Indians" to take part will be Miss Margaret Eleanor Keesor of Wheeling. She is a popular member with the students and the teachers speak highly of her.

Decatur Girls in Pageant At Lindenwood College

Miss Martha Buxton to Represent Illinois — Marion Suleeba "Miss Lindenwood."

When Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo., stages its big pageant the night of May 28, in honor of the one hundredth anniversary its founding, the State of Illinois will be represented by a Decatur girl, Miss Martha Buxton, who was chosen for the honor by an almost unanimous vote, and Miss Marion Suleeba also of Decatur, will impersonate "Miss Lindenwood" of a hundred years ago. Both will be in costume of the period and Miss Suleeba will arrive in stage coach on "the first day of school." The pageant will be staged on the golf course at the college.

ALL TAKE PART.

Several other Illinois girls will be Indians, or stage coach drivers or will drive oxen. All of the 500 students from over the United States at the college will have parts in the celebration which not only marks the centennial of the college for women, but will be an impressive picture of the growth of the Louisiana purchase which came as a result of the settlement of Illinois and Indiana by the Americans.

Lindenwood is historic. It was founded by a man and a woman who had the true pioneer spirit. Major George C. Sibley was an officer in the United States Army. He was appointed Indian Commissioner by President Thomas Jefferson for the territory, now comprising Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma. He was the first white man to explore the great salt plains. He made friends of the Indians and did much to help the development of the west.

ESTABLISHED SCHOOL.

In 1815 he married Mary Easton, fifteen year old daughter of Judge Rufus Easton, the first postmaster of St. Louis, and a man of eminence. They settled on a tract of land at St. Charles. They had no children. Mrs. Sibley had been educated in Kentucky. She was a woman of great spirit, and her neighbors recognized the fact that she had advantages their daughters could not get in the west. They asked her to establish a boarding school for girls. She did so. They came from forty or fifty miles around, some on horseback, and some in stage coaches, which were then running on the Boonlick trail, made by Daniel Boone. The Sibley estate soon became known as a seminary for girls. It grew, and grew and Mrs. Sibley continued to be the head of it until her death in 1878. Then it came under the management of the Presbyterian Synod of Missouri, which still controls it.

ENDOWED COLLEGE.

fifteen years ago a rich

philanthropist became interested in it and decided that the man to run the college and make it a high grade institution for the education of women was Doctor John Lincoln Roemer, a Presbyterian minister. The rich man endowed the college with several million dollars, and Doctor Roemer became president. The name Sibley is the one that is most frequently mentioned in notices of Lindenwood.

Colonel James Gay Butler and his wife gave millions to make the college what it is and Doctor Roemer has given years of his life to see that it is conducted along the lines it was intended for, but the fundamental saint of the institution is Mary Easton Sibley, the Presbyterian woman, who believed girls should be as well educated as boys, should be allowed to enjoy outdoor sports, and at the same time be taught to read their bibles and learn how to make their own dresses and keep house.

That is the spirit of Lindenwood of today. The Lindenwood girl is trained to become a woman who "looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness." They not only are scholars, but they are athletes and potential housewives. Of the thousands of Lindenwood graduates who will attend the Centennial celebration most are mothers, and many of them are business women as well.

Miss Christina McCoy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theo. S. McCoy, who is a junior at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo., has recently been elected secretary of the Home Economics Club at the college. This club is one of the most active on the campus, and it has been doing splendid work this year. Miss McCoy is also a member of the Illinois Club, and will take an active part in the Centennial celebration of the college—May 28-31.

Miss Virginia Denton

Among the girls of Lindenwood college, St. Charles Mo., who will help in the celebration of the institution's one hundredth birthday the last week in May, is Miss Virginia Denton, of Henderson, Ky. She will have the part of a "Townsmen" in the Centennial Pageant, given on the Lindenwood golf course, the night of May 28.

It is fitting that Miss Denton should have a place in the Lindenwood Centennial celebration as Mrs. Mary Easton Sibley, who, with her husband, Major George C. Sibley, founded the college, was educated in Kentucky. That was way back in the nineteenth century. Miss Easton was married to Major Sibley in 1815. They went to Missouri just as Daniel Boone, and other Kentuckians had, and settled on the Boonick Trail. The women of the community who had daughters, wanted them to have schooling such as Mrs. Sibley had had. They asked her and her husband to start a school for girls. He was busy exploring the country and civilizing the Indians, and she did it. The school grew and became a famous college for young women. Now a Kentucky girl has been selected to play a part in the pageant which will show the growth of the country seminary into a four year course college for young women.

She will be one of the men of the sixties who visited Lindenwood and asked Mrs. Sibley to take down the strictly neutral flag she had erected on the campus. Her theory was that she was not going to take part in the war. Many of her neighbors were for the South and many for the North. She was for womanhood, and Lindenwood. She made her flag of white linen and embroidered it with blue stars surrounding the word "LOVE." The soldiers of both sides respected it, and when they passed they saluted. Lindenwood passed through that turbulent period unmolested, and unafraid. Mrs. Sibley remained at the head of the college until her death, in 1878, when it came under the control of the Presbyterian Synod of Missouri. The Sibleys had endowed it, and since then it has been the recipient of millions of dollars and is one of the show places of Missouri. During the Centennial celebration President Roemer and his wife will entertain several thousand of the former students.

Spanish Club.

El Circulo Espanol, a language name for the Spanish Club at Lindenwood College, has raised its standard of membership for the centennial year, and hereafter every member must have an "S" (Superior), before she is eligible. Because this club's correspondence has increased, a fourth officer, a secretary, has been added to its list of officers. Miss Elizabeth Tracy of St. Charles, who also is a maid of honor in the Centennial May Queen's court next week, has been elected secretary. Other officers for the year 1927-28 are: President, Miss Margaret Maxwell of the Philippines; vice president, Miss Frances Fatout, Indianapolis, Ind.; and treasurer, Miss Mary Elizabeth Sawtell of Omaha, Neb.

Lindenwood Seniors Honored on Senior Day.

Seniors at Lindenwood College, who will graduate in Centennial Week, May 31, were honored at "Senior Distinction Day," Friday. A special song in chapel was sung in their honor by the juniors. The seniors marched in, wearing class dresses of white and red, and the juniors in white and purple, to the music of "Blue Skies." Mrs. John Lincoln Roemer led the procession, with Miss Sue Campbell, head of the juniors, and Miss Delta Neumann, president of the centennial seniors, together with the sponsors of the two classes, Misses Mary C. Olsen and Gene Gustavus of the faculty. Rodolf Ganz's "A Memory," was sung by Miss Euneva Lynn. Mutual expressions of good feeling were given by the two class presidents. Each senior was presented with a black leather coin purse, stamped with the Lindenwood crest in gold.

LEAVENWORTH TIMES, MONDAY EVENING, MAY 16, 1927

Miss Parmelee Chosen for Honor
Miss Rose Parmelee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Parmelee, who attends Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo., has been chosen to represent the history department in the centennial celebration of the college.

Kansas got several plums in the selection of girls to take prominent parts in the Centennial celebration of Lindenwood college the last week in May. A Cottonwood Falls girl, Miss Margaret D. Mc-Nee, has been chosen queen, and Miss Rose Parmelee, of Leavenworth, will represent the history department. This is no ordinary task, as Lindenwood is closely allied with the history of the Louisiana purchase, particularly that part comprising the states of Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma. The college was founded in 1827 by Major George C. Sibley and his wife, Mary Easton Sibley. He was the first Indian commissioner for the territory, having been commissioned by President Jefferson, and he was the first white man to explore the great salt plains in what now is north-west Oklahoma. His wife's father was Judge Rufus Easton, first postmaster of St. Louis. The Sibley's were pioneers. They settled on a big tract of land on the bluffs of the Missouri river, right along the Boonlick trail marked out by Daniel Boone. She was an educated woman, and the women in the neighborhood asked her to educate their daughters. That was the beginning of the big four year college for young women which now is richly endowed and is one of the show places of Missouri. During the centennial celebration President John L. Roemer and his wife, who is dean of students, will entertain several thousand former students of the college. In addition there will be representatives from all of the large colleges and universities of the country.

Autos Popular Among Lindenwood's Faculty

More members of the faculty of Lindenwood College at St. Charles, Mo., have automobiles this year than ever before, according to Miss Ruth Bullion, a student at the college, who writes as follows regarding the automobile ownership of the college faculty:

"Dr. Fanny Fern Smith, professor of biology and botany, drives a Cadillac, and sometimes a Chevrolet coupe.

"Another Chevrolet coupe on the campus which is well known is that that of Miss Barbara Eschbach, head of the department of physical education. This car answers to the name of 'Sophie,' which its owner says is short for 'sophisticated,' urging that one has to ride in the car to appreciate the significance of the term.

"One of the most popular cars at Lindenwood is the Buick. The Buick is the official car, the model which the president, Dr. John Lincoln Roemer and his wife, have for their private use. Dr. B. Kurt Stumberg, college physician, also drives a Buick, as does the secretary of the college, Guy C. Motley.

"Miss Mary Terhune, modern languages, drives a Ford sedan. C. A. Blocher, alumnae secretary, drives a Dodge sedan, as does also Dr. Robert Scott Calder, head of the Bible department."

*St. Louis Star,
May 25,*

At the commencement day exercises, at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning, the main address will be made by Dr. Stratton D. Brooks, president of the University of Missouri.

There are twenty-three Lindenwood College clubs in different cities. They all expect to be represented at the formal opening Saturday morning at 1030, when President Roemer will extend a welcome. Miss Alma Stumberg will respond for the alumnae association, and there will be club responses from New York, Mrs. William Carter; Chicago, Mrs. W. W. Seymour; St. Louis, Mrs. W. K. Roth; Los Angeles, Mrs. Robert L. Hubbard, and Kansas City, Mrs. Paul E. Donnelly.

Friday night is to be "St. Charles Night," with Dr. B. Kurt Stumberg, father of the "Spirit of Education," presiding.

One Hundredth Anniversary to Be Celebrated

MISS FRANCES STUMBERG of St. Charles will be the "Spirit of Education," one of six leading characters in the Centennial Pageant of Lindenwood College, St. Charles, which is to be presented at 8 o'clock Saturday night, as part of the five days' celebration, May 27-31, of Lindenwood's 100th anniversary.

The Centennial Pageant, which is written by Miss Lucia P. Hutchins of Lindenwood's department of oratory, will have the founders, Maj. and Mrs. George C. Sibley, as its central figures. They appear in the opening episode, arriving on horseback in 1815, when Mrs. Sibley is a 15-year-old bride and Maj. Sibley brings her home to "Linden Wood," as he then called the estate which is now the Lindenwood campus of 138 acres. Misses Marion Eldredge and Dorothy Monier, both of Kansas City, represent respectively Maj. and Mrs. Sibley.

The pageant's title is "The Bringing Together of Womanhood and Education." "Womanhood," represented by Miss Mary Margaret Ransom of Philadelphia, is at first afraid of "Education." The two, however, dance peeper and nearer, throughout the action of the pageant, until they are separated, in 1862, by the "Spirit of War." Miss Betty Birch of Toledo, Ohio. Up to this time the college has progressed. Students, in the quaint, charming costumes of 1831, 1836 and 1837, have reflected the life of the day. "Uncle George" and "Aunt Mary," as the girls affectionately called the founders, have continued from the beginning of the school in 1827, until now at the time of the Civil War, disaster impends.

Some of the girls are obliged to go home on account of the war. Maj. Sibley has become an invalid, his death occurring in 1863, and Mrs. Sibley is discouraged as to the outcome. Then she has a vision, in which the "Spirit of the Future," Miss Ida Hayes of Oklahoma City, reveals to her the Lindenwood of 1927, in all its departments, activities and interests, as they have developed to a full four-year college for 500 girls, under the presidency of Dr. John Lincoln Roemer, assisted by Mrs. Roemer, both of whom appear, surrounded by the full choir, in the final episode.

Records show that "120 arpens" of the ground on which Lindenwood now stands was actually acquired by Maj. Sibley in 1814. From this large tract, in 1827, he and Mrs. Sibley selected the site of the central building, which is the present site of Roemer Hall, Lindenwood's central administration and class building.

There are now living about 3,000 former students and alumnae, more than 2,000 of whom definite information has been received for the Centennial Alumnae Directory, which is to be distributed at the Academic Day exercises Monday. Dr. Aurelia Henry Reinhardt, president of Mills College, who visited Lindenwood in the winter and who is a close friend of the dean, Dr. Alice E. Gipson, promised at that time to return for the Centennial, and she is to give the principal Academic Day address. There will be an operatic concert Monday night, by Florence Rockwell, of the Chicago Civic Opera.

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes is to give the baccalaureate sermon Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Twenty-nine young women will receive bachelor's degrees, and many more will be awarded diplomas and certificates. A large number of prizes for special excellence along various lines will be bestowed.

Lindenwood College Centennial Pageant to Be Held Saturday

All of 500 Students to Have Part in Celebration.

Mrs. Mary Easton Sibley, founder of Lindenwood College, at St. Charles, with her husband of 100 years ago, Maj. George C. Sibley, U. S. A., is to be an outstanding figure in the centennial pageant, Saturday night at 8 o'clock, on the Lindenwood college golf grounds. She and Maj. Sibley, impersonated by two Kansas City girls, Misses Marion Eldredge and Dorothy Monier, respectively, will appear on the site, where they arrived as bride and groom, in 1815. Twelve years later they founded the college at "Linden Wood," as they called their estate in those days.

Maj. Sibley was the first United States Commissioner to the Indians in the Southwest. He was 18 years older than Mrs. Sibley, and had his headquarters at Fort Osage for years before his marriage.

Dispute Over Birthday.

Dispute has arisen because of the peculiar date of Mrs. Sibley's birth—January 1, 1800, as to whether she was born in the eighteenth or the nineteenth century, but statisticians at the college have decided that it was in the last year of the eighteenth, and not the first year of the nineteenth, that she was born. She was a daughter of Judge Rufus Easton, an appointee of President Jefferson and first Postmaster of St. Louis. She was but 15 when she married Maj. Sibley, but is spoken of in records of the time as having been a highly cultured and accomplished woman. By her ruling, the Bible has been a required freshman study at Lindenwood throughout the 100 years.

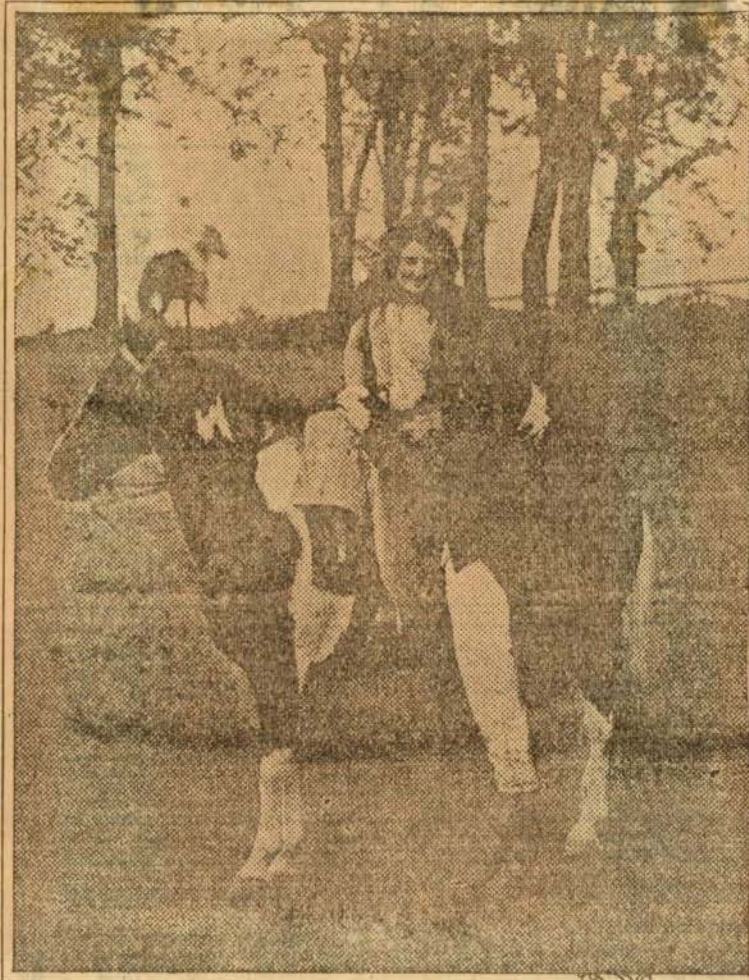

Mrs. Sibley remained with Lindenwood College for fifty-one years, until her death in 1878, Maj. Sibley having died fifteen years before. She is now to be honored by having the Sibley Memorial Scholarship, the gift of alumnae and former students, named in her memory. Part of the exercises of the five days of centennial celebration will be a visit to the graves of the Sibleys, which are in an inclosure, carefully guarded, on the campus grounds.

Centennial Pageant.

The centennial pageant, which has been written by Miss Lucia P. Hutchins of Lindenwood's oratory department, has as its theme, "The Bringing Together of Womanhood and Education." Miss Mary Margaret Ransom, "the Spirit of Womanhood," is to appear in the prologue, heavily shackled, while the "Spirit of Education" (Miss Frances Stumberg) seeks to gain her favor. Womanhood is at first afraid of "Education," but gradually draws nearer to her, only to be separated by the "Spirit of War" (Miss Betty Birch) at the time of the civil war.

At this time, in 1802, Mrs. Sibley is much discouraged at the prospect.

Impersonate Lindenwood Founders

There is a fear that the school may have to be closed, but the "Spirit of the Future" (Miss Ida Hayes) appears and reveals to her the "Lindenwood of 1927" with all its departments of instruction, its buildings, its activities and clubs, each represented by a student. Finally will come the crowning of the Centennial May Queen, Miss Marguerite McNee.

500 Students in Cast.

The roles are so distributed that practically every one of the 500 students at Lindenwood has some part in the pageant. Some of the early episodes will show quaint costumes of the 1830s, as well as the stagecoach, the log house, and the ox team of that day. Mrs. Sibley liked bright colors, and the crimson merino of winter, and the pink sashes over the white dresses of summer show that life at Lindenwood 100 years ago was never gloomy.

The music theme of the pageant will be the "Liebestraum." The choir, under Miss Cora B. Edwards, will sing throughout, and finally, in the center of the chorus, as the back curtain is removed, will stand Dr. John Lincoln Roemer, the college president since 1914, and Mrs. Roemer.

Interpretive dancing is in charge of Miss Barbara Eschbach, head of the physical education department.

LINDENWOOD ALUMNAE HOLD ANNUAL MEETING

Miniature Cakes Distributed as Observance of Centennial.

The annual luncheon of the St. Louis Lindenwood College Club was held yesterday at the Missouri Athletic Association, with Mrs. W. K. Roth, president of the club, presiding.

Following the luncheon matches were passed to the guests to light miniature birthday cakes presented to them in honor of Lindenwood's Centennial, which is being celebrated this year.

Mrs. Roth announced that the day was also the birthday of Dr. John Lincoln Roemer, president of the college, who with Mrs. Roemer, was a guest at the luncheon. A leather billfold was presented to Dr. Roemer by the club.

Mrs. C. H. Baker of Pasadena, Cal., an alumna of Lindenwood, who is on her way home from attending a D. A. R. convention, was another guest. Mrs. Baker has kept "open house" in her residence on the Arden road, Pasadena, throughout the whole year, every Thursday, for Lindenwood women resident or transient in California. Lindenwood College has just accepted as its "centennial song," verses which Mrs. Baker wrote to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne."

Dr. Roemer announced that Jubilee Hall, a dormitory built in the presidency of the late Dr. George Frederick Ayers, is to be remodeled this summer and will be named Ayers Hall.

Twenty-eight seniors of Lindenwood College will be guests of the president and his wife, Dr. and Mrs. John Lincoln Roemer, Saturday, at their annual luncheon at the Missouri Athletic Association, at 12:30 o'clock. Seven States are represented in the Centennial graduating class. Miss Leona Kramer is a St. Louis girl. The other members are: Misses Ayleen Baker, Bernice Barkley, Mary Louise Blocher, Annavere Brookshire, Pauline Davis, Dorothy Dunseth, Elizabeth Goode, Virginia Hoover, Ethel Landreth, Dixie Laney, Lorraine Lyster, Bess McNary, Marguerite McNee, Verna Meyer, Lavena Morrison, Delta Neumann, Bertha Pepperdine, Mary Margaret Ransom, Miriam Robinson, Arlie Schnedler, Ethel Spreckelmeyer, Edna May Stubbins, Marguerite Tainter, Agnes Boschert, Marjorie Willis, Anna Lois Mitchell and Helen Baysinger.

Miss Indiana

Miss Elizabeth Young, of Howe, Ind., daughter of the Rev. Charles Herbert Young, D. D., the head of the Howe Military Institute, has been chosen to represent the state of Indiana at the centennial celebration of Lindenwood college, at St. Charles, Mo.

Another Indiana girl, Miss Frances Fatount, of Indianapolis, will represent the English department of the college at this centennial.

The celebration will take place the last five days of May, and will be an elaborate affair. Each of the 500 students from 26 states will take part in a pageant, which will portray the 100 year's history of the institution. There will be 2,000 former graduates as visitors, all guests on the campus.

South Bend, (Ind.)
News-Times,
May 8.

The central idea of the celebration is to show how Lindenwood has developed from a boarding school for girls, established by a pioneer woman 100 years ago, into one of the leading institutions for the education of woman in America. The pageant will show the log house in which the school was first housed, with the accessories of Indians, ox teams, horses ridden by women in long dresses, and men in beaver hats and coonskin caps and deerskin costumes. It will be held in the open, on the golf grounds, which form part of the college campus. These acres form a natural amphitheater and thousands of spectators will have opportunity to watch the proceedings. Of course there will be a Queen of the May, Miss Marguerite D. McNee, of Cottonwood Falls, Kan. She is a brunette, and has the distinction of being one of the best students in the college.

International Relations Talk.

Dr. Pitman B. Potter, who is being sent over the country by the Carnegie Endowment, to speak before International Relations clubs, will address the members of this club at Lindenwood College, together with the entire student body, Thursday morning, at 11 o'clock, in Roemer auditorium. Miss Esther Schumacher of St. Louis has recently been elected secretary of the club, and other officers are: President, Miss Elizabeth Kuykendall; vice president, Miss Rose Parmalee; treasurer, Miss Ruth Spreckelmeyer.

Miss Rose Sweeney of Morgantown, W. Va., is the first Centennial visitor at Lindenwood College. Miss Sweeney is a lifelong friend of Mrs. John L. Roemer, dean of students, and was head of Butler Hall at Lindenwood during the World War. Because Miss Sweeney's brother was a Lieutenant on Gen. Pershing's staff, the students were made especially enthusiastic in their sewing and knitting for the soldiers. She is being warmly welcomed, and will remain through the five days of Centennial events, May 27-31.

The Everyman for Himself band, composed of athletes of Lindenwood college, St. Charles, Mo., provided music at the annual college field day held recently. The beauty of the plan was apparent when one of the musicians was forced to leave to run or jump. It made no difference. The band is directed by Miss Virginia Hoover (left) of Kansas City. The other artists, from left to right, are Loraine Lyster, Naples, Tex.; Delta Neumann, Odem, Tex.; Bernice Barkley, Vandalia, Ill.; Mary Louise Blocher, St. Charles; Dixie Laney, Camden, Ark., and Ayleen Baker, Whitesboro, Tex.

Many Lindenwood Alumnae Arrived to Attend Centennial

Representatives Will Make Response to Wel- come Today.

Registration of alumnae and visitors for the Lindenwood College centennial began yesterday at Roemer Hall. This morning official alumnae representatives, respectively, from New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Kansas City and St. Louis, together with an officer of the college's national alumnae association, will make responses to Dr. John Lincoln's address of welcome as president.

A reunion schedule has been posted for class gatherings, year by year, in various rooms, back to a time before the civil war. In the Lindenwood historical exhibit a typical collection is the commencement photograph, with dress, white kid slippers and gloves worn by Mrs.

Charles Wilson of St. Charles fifty years ago. She is one of many who on Monday will take part in school-girl "stunts."

Surprise Is Sprung.

Last night a surprise was sprung on the college in the production of a new "Lindenwood College Centennial March," composed by Prof. D. E. La Banca, director of the St. Charles Military Band, and dedicated to President Roemer. Prof. La Banca directed its rendition.

Dr. Roemer, in welcoming an audience celebrating St. Charles Night, said last night: "With advancing years we grow younger and more modern. St. Charles has adopted the advertising slogan, 'St. Charles, the home of Lindenwood College.'"

The speaker told of Maj. George C. Sibley, Lindenwood's co-founder, in his career as a soldier of the war of 1812, and that of his wife, Mary Smith Easton. They lived first at Fort Osage, which was Maj. Sibley's headquarters as United States Indian Commissioner. In 1814 they purchased the ground which became the site of Lindenwood College in 1827. "The site upon which Roemer Hall stands was obtained by Maj. Sibley from Blanchette, the founder of St. Charles, and is the oldest recorded deed of transfer of property in this state."

Blackhurst Speaks.

Supt. Stephen Blackhurst of the St. Charles public schools, said that a helpful, buoyant influence comes to the St. Charles schools through the practical teaching of Lindenwood girls. Addresses were also made by Mayor Henry J. Broeker of St. Charles and by J. C. Willbrand of the Central Trust Company.

Dr. B. Kurt Stumberg, president. Fireworks on the campus green directed by Guy C. Motley, concluded the program.

Among late responses to the centennial invitation are messages received by President Roemer yesterday from the University of Aberdeen, Scotland, and from the president of the University of the Philippines.

The botany class of Lindenwood has followed the example of Shaw's Garden and for the benefit of visitors has tacked a metal plate on every tree and shrub of the remarkable collection on Lindenwood's campus. Dr. Fanny Fern Smith, who directed this enterprise, took her graduate degree from study at Shaw's Garden.

The Centennial Pageant, written by Miss Lucia P. Hutchins, and comprising a cast of 500, with a background of pioneer scenery, is to be presented on the Lindenwood golf course tonight at 8 o'clock.

Lindenwood College Centennial Celebration

May 27 to May 31

WITH President and Mrs. John Lincoln Roemer, we join in acclaiming the 100th anniversary of the founding of this leading woman's college situated so close to St. Louis. It is a matter of civic pride to point to the well-established reputation of this institution during the last 100 years, since the opening of "Linden Wood," the home estate of Major and Mrs. George C. Sibley. We extend to Lindenwood our heartiest congratulations upon its achievement, and predict for such a well-founded institution a bright future of which St. Louis and all the surrounding territory may justly be proud.

The elaborate program of the centennial has been planned as a fitting welcome to former students who will come to their Alma Mater from all parts of the land, prepared for an enthusiastic "home coming." They will join with many citizens of St. Louis in proud review of the history of their college, given in a magnificent pageant by the students on the campus. Lindenwood is proud of these graduates and St. Louis is proud of what this college has done in carrying on the high standards of education.

Lindenwood College Scholarship Awards.

Much interest attached to the centennial awards in scholarship, athletics and distinctive department work which were bestowed at Lindenwood College, Wednesday noon, in advance of the commencement. These prizes usually come on graduation day, but President Roemer decided to give full right of way to commencement speakers by taking this item off the program. Miss Katherine Palmer of Clayton, a granddaughter of Rev. S. C. Palmer, D. D., won the athletic scholarship for good general work in the department of physical education. Scholarship prizes were named first the Sigma Iota Chi legacy of $200 annually, going for next year to Miss Ruth Bullton, and that of the Eta Upsilon Gamma to Miss Virginia Sue Campbell, while educational scholarships of lesser amount were bestowed on Misses Helen Hammer, Elizabeth Tracy, Flada Le Van, Doris Achelpohl, Kathryn Walker, Frances Stumberg, Harriet Liddle, Sue Austin, Ruth Foster, Marcia Wallace, Julia Palmer, Adel Schnedier, Dorothy Gehlbach, Mildred Iffrig, Susan Patterson and Julia Thompson. The Bible prizes of $25 each, unique at Lindenwood, went to Misses Helen Moffett and Josephine Holdren. Miss Agnes Boschert gained the prize for distinctive work in athletics. In home economics, the best sewing prize went to Miss Martha Osburn, and that for best cooking to Miss Mary Yancey. In art work, a poster prize, singled out from many beautiful ones in the annual art exhibit, was awarded to Miss Margaret Fisher, and a prize from the Lindenwood College Club went to Miss Frances Lehmborg of Clayton. Progress prizes in music were as follows: Piano, Miss Silva Carmichael; organ, Miss Marion Gibson; violin, Miss Elizabeth Foster; voice, Misses Iris Fleischaker and Dorothy Gartner.

Christ Teacher, Not Preacher, Lindenwood Graduates Are Told

Such Was His Real Vocation on Earth, Bishop Hughes Says.

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes of Chicago demonstrated in the baccalaureate sermon for the centennial class at Lindenwood College, yesterday afternoon that he is not one who will calmly accept "Elmer Gantry."

"Even as 'Babbitt' is a slander on the average business man of the Middle Western town," said this well-known Methodist Episcopal Bishop, "so 'Elmer Gantry' is an evil slander on my profession. And more than that the material for it was gathered in a community in which the clergy are as high-minded a group of men as are to be found in any city."

The Bishop spoke especially on the teaching profession which he glorified by saying that teaching was the avocation of Christ when on earth rather than "preaching." The Bishop said he did not know why the "Sermon on the Mount" got its name as the introduction showed the Savior as "sitting" before his "disciples," or "pupils," and "teaching" them. Forty-two times Jesus is mentioned as a teacher in the New Testament, he said, but only a few times as preaching.

Christ and Schools.

"Wherever Jesus Christ goes in freedom, the school always comes. When he goes to Massachusetts, Harvard is bound to come; when he goes down to Connecticut, Yale is sure to appear; when he comes to Missouri, you cannot stop Lindenwood."

Bishop Hughes said that when he was president of De Pauw University he never chose a teacher for his faculty who did not possess the "parental instinct." The teacher stood in the place of a parent, he said. Just as Susannah Wesley herself taught each one of her nineteen children, that same task is now relegated to the teacher, who becomes the "parental proxy." In the case of a student going on to professional and graduate studies, he showed that one-third of a man's entire life is often spent under teachers. He quoted Dickens' ridicule and harsh criticism of many types of teachers of his day. "Squeers," he said, "would have been the choice of the Board of Education in hell for teaching young devils."

But in the last few decades, the Bishop said, there has been a change in the mutual attitude of teachers and students. No longer they stand in hostile camps. The Bishop narrated many college pranks of his own youthful days, and told of a classmate at Ohio Wesleyan who had always bitterly resented the "Do's" and "Don'ts" of that institution, who twenty-five years later was considering sending his daughter to college, the one consideration being to secure an institution that was "strict enough."

Social Events and Club Activities

Greenwood Girl Portrays "Spirit of Womanhood"

Miss Mary Margaret Ransom, formerly of Greenwood, Miss., now of Philadelphia, Pa., daughter of J. F. Ransom, is one of several girls claimed by Mississippi who have gained prominence as students at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo.

A prominent part in the pageant which will feature the centennial celebration of Lindenwood is to be taken by Miss Ransom, one of this year's graduates, who has been cast for "The Spirit of Womanhood," one of the six principal characters in the event depicting "Woman's Progress in Education." The pageant will be given on the campus the night of May 28, and will begin with the school's origin, where it now stands in 1827, in the days of the ox team and log house.

Another Greenwood girl prominent at Lindenwood, is Miss Laura Lee Thomas, who is one of the editors of the college paper, the Linden Bark.

The Tennessee girls are Miss Louise Bentley, of Memphis, and Miss Ann Lyde Adams, of Humboldt.

Arkansas is represented by 20 girls, two from Pine Bluff, two from Camden, two from Helena, two from Fayetteville, six from Little Rock, two from Marianna, one from El Dorado, one from Fort Smith, and two from Magnolia.

Bishop Hughes emphasized the attitude of "the taught" toward their teacher, making personal application by asking the graduating class to repay in character "Lindenwood's investment" in them. The climax of the teacher's achievement was instanced, he said, in Helen Keller, and he quoted her true comment, "This is a miracle of love." College teachers, he said, are no longer "detective sleuths."

Humor in Discourse.

Among the many bits of humor in his discourse was the statement which started out quite seriously that "as far as he knew, neither President Wilson, nor President Harding, nor President Coolidge had selected any college senior as a member of his Cabinet."

President John Lincoln Roemer, in presenting Bishop Hughes, told of a boyhood friendship, the two men having lived as neighbors in early years.

Rev. Dr. Charles L. Chalfant of Pittsburgh, a former St. Louis pastor, read the Scripture lesson. He is representing Lafayette College at the Lindenwood centennial.

An imposing list of dignitaries, representing about seventy-five colleges and universities, and about twenty-five learned societies and associations, will march in line with the Lindenwood faculty and Board of Directors in the procession of academic day this morning, and of commencement day tomorrow.

At this morning's ceremonies, beginning at 10:30 o'clock, Dr. Aurelia Henry Reinhardt, president of Mills College, Oakland, Cal., will make the principal address. There will be greetings for the University of Missouri, by Dr. J. C. Jones, for Washington University by Dr. Edgar J. Swift and for St. Louis University by Rev. Charles H. Cloud, Society of Jesus.

The senior class has presented a bas-relief bust of Maj. George C. Sibley and another of Mrs. George C. Sibley, done by a St. Louis sculptor, as a farewell gift to the college.

Lindenwood College Announces Alumnae Donations of $50,000

Directors Also Willing to Appropriate $200,000 for New Building.

Gifts amounting to $50,000 from the alumnae and former students of Lindenwood College, to be applied to the Mary Easton Sibley memorial scholarship fund, were announced yesterday afternoon by President John Lincoln Roemer at the centennial "stunt" program of the various Lindenwood College clubs. Dr. Roemer supplemented this with a statement that the Board of Directors is willing to appropriate $200,000 for a new building when the site and style of the building is determined. He said the structure would probably be for the music department.

This announcement followed an amusing program of singing, acting, "broadcasting" and special acts in costumes of long ago, presented by the clubs of Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis, California, New York and St. Charles. In the last-named performance a graduate of fifty years ago sang a song which had been a favorite of Mary Easton Sibley.

Dr. Brooks to Speak.

Full ceremonial will mark the commencement exercises of the college this morning, in Roemer Auditorium, at 10 o'clock. Dr. Stratton D. Brooks, president of Missouri University, will make the commencement address. The procession of dignitaries will proceed to Roemer Hall, representatives participating from about 100 colleges, universities, scholarship and professional societies and associations.

President John Lincoln Roemer will confer the degrees, diplomas and certificates.

Never has there been a more imposing procession at the college than that of Centennial Academic Day, yesterday morning. More men than women were in the learned company, comprising commissioned delegates from Yale and Dartmouth, from Dickinson and Middlebury, from Trinity at Dublin, from Vassar and Mills, from Wellesley and Mount Holyoke, from St. Louis University and Western Reserve, from many state universities and and technical schools, and a host of others, so that nearly a hundred brilliant hoods of scholastic significance lent color to the procession from Old Sibley to Roemer Hall, escorted by the St. Charles Military Band.

Came 3,000 Miles.

Dr. Aurella Henry Reinhardt, national president of the American Association of University Women, said she had come "3000 miles across the continent, to felicitate Lindenwood." Mills College at Oakland, Cal., of which she is president, is now completing its seventy-fifth year. She told of pioneer women, naming Daniel Boone's wife, Rebecca, as among a host of others, who, although not educated according to modern arrangements, nevertheless had the richness of experience which entitled them to the term "educated," although some of them "could not even sign their own names." Dr. Reinhardt pointed out the heroism of typical New England women, who by their ingenuity and labor kept the colony alive. She told of the pioneer educator, Mary Lyons' retort, "If you educate the women, the men cannot help being educated, even without their knowing it." She quoted the French historian of 100 years ago, who had said that America's "astounding development is due to the superiority of its women, their intelligence and industry."

Dr. Reinhardt said that the time had come for women to cease to be self-conscious. They have fitted themselves to a changed order, in illustration she eloquently spoke of Lindbergh, who "winged his way from the Statue of Liberty to the Place de la Concorde." The "walls between nations" would be broken down, she said, childhood would come into its own, and future education would be a co-ordination of effort adapted to the entire family of father, mother and child.

Many Telegrams Received.

President Roemer announced a great many telegrams and letters received from institutions and friends in this country and abroad. Three addresses were given by men representing Missouri universities.

Dr. J. C. Jones, representing Missouri University, referred pleasantly to the fact that his mother-in-law, Mrs. Libby Edmonston Thompson, in the audience, bore the banner "1856" among all the classes of Lindenwood through years which were in line in this centennial procession. Dr. Jones incidentally gave an answer to certain "vicious critics" who would condemn college young people. "I have found, on the whole," said Dr. Jones, "they are an earnest and industrious group. The modern college is neither a devil nor a saint, but I know those presiding over the colleges make more sacrifices than their critics ever made in their whole lives." Dr. Jones had been chairman of the college and university committee which admitted Lindenwood into the full four-year standing in Missouri. He praised the "capable leadership of Dr. Roemer."

Dr. Edgar J. Swift represented Washington University. "Lindenwood College is 100 years old, but very much alive," he said. "We look forward to her achievements in the future, as we are conscious of the things she has done in the past, both in pioneering and in more recent years."

Rev. Thomas M. Knapp, S. J., extended congratulations on behalf of St. Louis University. "What college education aims at," he said, "is something more than knowledge, for knowledge passes, for memory can forget; but what collegiate education aims at is wisdom. Lindenwood, in her 100 years of training, has striven to instill into the minds of her students this wisdom of life." Father Knapp spoke also of loyalty, and finally of service as an aim, all being based upon the Christian principles of life.

Notes on Affairs at Civic and Social Club Meetings

Lindenwood College Clubs.

Various Lindenwood clubs conducted their exercises and stunts Monday afternoon at Lindenwood College, as this was Academic Day. One member is taking part who graduated from the college fifty-one years ago. She is representing the St. Charles Club.

Saturday morning the Lindenwood clubs from all over the country responded to the welcome given them by Dr. Roemer. Miss Alma Stumberg, on behalf of the Alumnae Association, responded to the welcome.

Mrs. William Carter, of the New York Club, said that the way best to carry on the wonderful work of the Sibleys was to "walk humbly in the footsteps of the Lord."

Mrs. W. W. Seymour, of the Chicago Club, compared Lindenwood to a light house, with the students as the Keepers. It is they who keep the white light of love and purity ever burning; while the blue light flashes truth and honor upon the world, but it is the red light of courage that eclipses all these others.

Mrs. W. K. Roth of the St. Louis Club spoke of the progression of the school along the side of the growing buildings, that Roemer Hall, on the apex of the campus, marks the highest point in the history of the college.

Los Angeles was represented by Mrs. Robert L. Hubbard. "It is the duty of the Lindenwood to achieve all that is best and then pass it on to others."

Mrs. Paul E. Donnelly, of the Kansas City Club spoke of the college as a college of the whole United States, and not of St. Louis or the immediate communities.

Besides President Roemer and the speakers, Mrs. Roemer and the dean, Dr. Alice E. Gipson, sat upon the platform, together with Mrs. George Frederick Ayers, whose husband, the late Dr. Ayers, was president of Lindenwood for thirteen years until his death in 1914.

A concert was given last night by Miss Florence Macbeth, opera singer.

AWARD DEGREES AND HONORS AT LINDENWOOD COLLEGE

Centennial Celebration Ends After Commencement Address by Dr.
Stratton D. Brooks.

Commencement exercises, with President Stratton D. Brooks of Missouri University as the chief speaker, yesterday brought to a close Lindenwood College's five-day centennial celebration.

Dr. Brooks' address, emphasizing achievements in research work and co-operation among schools of all description, was followed by the awarding of degrees to the centennial graduating class and honors to the winners in scholastic competition.

Ded by President J. L. Roemer of Lindenwood and President Brooks the Board of Directors of the school, the faculty and students marched across the quadrangle from Sibley to Roemer Hall.

Among the 10 girls elected to Alpha Sigma Tau, honorary literary society, as announced at the commencement exercises, were Miss Louise Wielandy of 3206 Greer avenue and Miss Mildred Stoecker of 4020 North Kingshighway, sophomores. Miss Cornelia Moehlenkamp and Miss Elizabeth Tracy, both of St. Charles, tied for the award of the highest scholastic grade of the year.

Alumnae from All Parts of Country Return to Take Part in Centennial Celebration and Commencement.

More than 1000 graduates and former students of Lindenwood College attended the formal opening of the centennial celebration of the institution yesterday morning in Roemer Auditorium. In the assembly of visiting alumnae were representatives of such far-away points as New York and Los Angeles, and unusually large delegations from Lindenwood clubs in cities of the Middle West were present.

The visitors were welcomed back to their alma mater by Dr. John Lincoln Roemer, president of the college, who told of its founding 100 years ago by Mary Easton Sibley, wife of Maj. George C. Sibley, a veteran of the war of 1812 and former commissioner to the Indians.

Recalls Log Schoolhouse.

Dr. Roemer recalled how the nucleus of the college was a log schoolhouse on the site of the present Roemer Hall in St. Charles, which then was the capital of Missouri.

Another speaker was Mrs. William Carter, representing the Lindenwood alumnae of New York City, who was greeted with laughter when she said that Missouri, because of the recent heavy rains, was now wet enough to satisfy Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler.

Greetings from the Los Angeles Lindenwood Club were conveyed by Mrs. Robert L. Hubbard, who brought with her a basket of California roses. Mrs. W. W. Seymour of Chicago, president of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, spoke in behalf of the former students now living in Chicago, and Kansas City alumnae were represented by Mrs. Paul E. Donnelly, president of the Kansas City Lindenwood Club.

History Recalled.

Mrs. W. K. Roth, speaking for the St. Louis alumnae, was followed by Col. Nicholas Bell, whose mother was a student at the college in 1838, and who presented the institution with an oil painting of his mother last winter. Dr. Lucinda Templin of St. Louis gave a history of the Sibley family and the founding of the college.

It was announced at the opening exercises that prizes would be given the two students having the longest hair. Entrants in this competition began having their hair measured yesterday afternoon. The awards will be announced tomorrow. The sponsor of this competition is Mrs. Bertha Goebel Barber of Wyoming, Ill., whose sister, Mrs. Charles Rakenius, a student forty years ago, returned to America from Germany to attend the centennial.

Older Alumnae.

Two of the older alumnae attending the celebration are Mrs. James Brausier of Creve Coeur, a member of the class of 1875, and Miss Sarah McElhinney of the class of 1879. Both are sisters of Circuit Judge McElhinney of St. Louis County. Probably the oldest alumnae present is Mrs. Libby Edmonston Thompson of Columbia, who attended the college in 1858.

Following the opening exercises, the guests and students attended a luncheon given in their honor. Class reunions were held yesterday afternoon.

The baccalaureate sermon to the graduates will be preached at 3 o'clock this afternoon by Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Tonight a concert will be given by the vested college choir. The centennial will end Tuesday with the annual commencement exercises. The commencement address will be given by Dr. Stratton D. Brooks, president of Missouri University.

Twenty-five Boy Scouts with motor cars are stationed at the college to convey the visitors on sight-seeing trips in St. Louis.

Names of four principal members of the Lindenwood College annual, "Linden Leaves," were announced yesterday by President John Lincoln Roemer for next year. Miss Harriet Liddle of Des Moines, Ia., will be editor-in-chief; Miss Ruth Bullion of Little Rock, Ark., assistant editor-in-chief; Miss Frances Stumberg of St. Charles, business manager, and Miss Elizabeth Kuykendahl of Partridge, Kan., literary editor.

Annual Is Out.

The Annual of 1927 has just appeared. It contains much beautiful art work, with decorative color pictures of the old and new Lindenwood, besides oval framed portraits in color of "Lindenwood's angels who came in pairs," Maj. and Mrs. George C. Sibley, founders; Judge and Mrs. John S. Watson, Col. and Mrs. James Gay Butler. Several former presidents are remembered, and a whole page is given to a picture of "Sibley Hall," which in real life is now resurrected and placed in view for the centennial.

Present day buildings in the annual alternate with "antebellum campus scenes, the "Old Gymnasium," the "Old Chemistry Laboratory," and other views. One of the most effective fancy pictures is a chancel group, the Lindenwood vested choir. The work contains a detailed history, "A Hundred Years of Lindenwood."

Sibley Memorial Building.

Mrs. Mary Easton Sibley, founder of Lindenwood College, with her husband, Maj. George C. Sibley, U. S. A., will be well memorialized, according to plans announced by the president, Dr. John Lincoln Roemer, at the Centennial commencement which closed Tuesday. Following the completion of a $50,000 fund by alumnae and old students, largely through the agency of the twenty-three Lindenwood College clubs, the board of directors has given its approval to a memorial building for which an appropriation of $200,000 will be made as soon as it is decided what type of building is most desired and needed. This in all probability will be a music hall. Rumors are heard also of additions to the fund, not as yet quite ready for announcement.

The Centennial reunion of five days, which welcomed about 2,500 guests on Saturday, was fully enjoyed. Recreations in plenty were provided, including a historical exhibit and a concert by Florence Rockwell Macbeth. A souvenir of brass book plates, handsomely engraved with bas-relief of Maj. and Mrs. Sibley, was given to each former student. The same design, done in silver, was presented by the faculty and board of directors, to President and Mrs. Roemer as a centennial gift.

The Lindenwood College clubs of St. Charles, St. Louis, New York, Los Angeles, Chicago and Kansas City showed much ingenuity in songs, broadcasting and other "stunts" on "Academic Day."

In this history some of the rules of ages past are repeated: "Tattling is positively forbidden." "No pupils will be allowed to attend balls, parties, circuses." "The visits of young gentlemen will not be received, except near relatives."

Pictures of Dr. and Mrs. John Lincoln Roemer and Dean Alice F. Gipson are followed by a full pictorial roster of faculty, students, classes and activities. The work is handsomely executed.

Announcement was also made that Miss Helen Baker is winner in Lindenwood's golf tournament, gaining the annual trophy, a silver golf ball.

Prizes in the Nellie Donnelly costume contest went as follows: Drawings, Misses Frances Lehmburg, first; Bessie McNary, second; Mamie Cotter, third. Finished dresses, Frances Ware, first; Lucille Blessing, second; Marjorie Wills, third.

Lindenwood College Centennial Closes with Commencement

Dr. Stratton D. Brooks,
Mo. U. President,
Speaker.

Five days of centennial celebration at Lindenwood College closed yesterday with a commencement address by Dr. Stratton D. Brooks, president of the University of Missouri, and the awarding of degrees, diplomas, certificates and sorority distinctions by President John Lincoln Roemer. A commemorative incident was the presentation to President and Mrs. Roemer by Dr. B. Kurt Stumberg, representing the Board of Directors and the faculty, of a set of silver book-ends, engraved in bas-relief portraits of Maj. George C. Sibley and Mary Easton Sibley, his wife, founders of the college 100 years ago.

A picturesque procession of those who were to lead the ceremonies, followed by the Board of Directors, the faculty in order of seniority, and all those students receiving degrees or other distinctions, marched between rows of underclassmen, across the quadrangle from Old Sibley to the white-and-gold decorated Roemer Hall. Rev. W. C. Colby, who pronounced the invocation, marched with Dean Alice E. Gipson, while ahead of them were President Roemer and President Brooks.

Dr. Brooks' subject was "The Solidarity of Education." He pointed out the united purpose toward which all schools, from the highest to the lowest, are moving. Rivalry is a thing of the past, he said, and college presidents co-operate in striving to direct each student to the type of school best adapted to his ability and his need. Dr. Brooks gave staggering figures as to the increase in the number of those desiring higher education.

Growth of Missouri University.
"At the University of Missouri," he said, "in 1900 they had a celebration and fired a cannon, because they had finally reached a total enrollment of 1000. We have in 1927 more than 9000. And the University of Missouri has not increased nearly so rapidly as some of the other colleges and universities in this country."

Dr. Brooks said in his early career he had taught at the University of Illinois "all the courses in psychology" and "all the courses in education" that were offered there. He said there are now forty-six persons acting as professors or instructors in these two respective courses, some of whom draw a salary as high as $5000 a year. He had received $1600. The number of students justified the advance. "Why? Because the great ambition of every American parent, high or low, educated or uneducated, is to give his child a better opportunity than he had."

Sorority Honors Girls.

Election to Alpha Sigma Tau, the honorary literary sorority of the college, was announced for ten girls, among whom were Misses Mildred Stoeker of 4020 North Kingshighway and Louise Wielandy of 3200 Greer avenue. The others winning this distinction were Misses Elizabeth Sawtell, Omaha, Neb.; Margaret Maxwell, Philippine Islands; Arlie Schendler, St. Charles; Janet Hood, Washington, Pa.; Nadine Paris, Wolf Island, Mo.; Mildred Iffrig, St. Peter's, Mo.; Elizabeth Campbell, Kansas City; Elizabeth Young, Howe, Ind.

Similar honor in the Alpha Mu Mu, or honorary music sorority, was announced for Misses Dorothy Wallace, Philadelphia; Hortense Wolford, Belleville, Ill.; Inez Westering, Lincoln, Neb.; Frances Wachter, Joplin, Mo.

The scholarship annually awarded for standing first in class work for the year was won, jointly, by Misses Cornelia Moehlenkamp and Elizabeth Tracy, both St. Charles girls.

The class prize for scholarship went to the senior.

The centennial graduating class, to whom degrees were awarded by Dr. Roemer, was composed of the following: B. M., Lavena Morrison, Kansas City; B. S., Helen Baysinger, Rolla, Mo.; Agnes Boshert, St. Charles; Annalere Brookshire, Joplin, Mo.; Lorraine Lyster, Naples, Tex.; Bessie McNary, Granite City, Ill.; Delta Neumann, Odem, Tex.; Estelle O. Pfaff, Marguerite Tainter, Marjorie Willis, all of St. Charles; Bernice Barkley, Vandalia, Ill. A. B., Ayleen Baker, Whitesboro, Tex.; Mary Louise Blecher, St. Charles; Pauline Davis, Nowata, Ok.; Dorothy Dunseth, Dayton, Ohio; Elizabeth Goode, Magnolia, Ark.; Virginia Hoover, Kansas City, Mo.; Leona Kramer, St. Louis; Ethel Landreth, Alto Pass, Ill.; Dixie Laney, Camden, Ark.; Marguerite McNeer, Cottonwood Falls, Kan.; Verna Meyer, August, Mo.; Anna Lois Mitchell, Rolla, Mo.; Bertha Pepperdine, Neosho, Mo.; Mary Margaret Ransom, Philadelphia, Pa.; Miriam Robinson, Burlington, Ia.; Arlie Schendler, St. Charles; Ethel Spreckelmeyer, St. Charles; Edna Mae Stubbins, Cairo, Ill.

Diplomas in music were given to Helen Roper, West Plains, Mo.; Genevieve Rowe, Greybull, Wyo.; Dorothy Wallace, Philadelphia; Florence Ziegler, Clarks, La.; Clara Bowles, Perry, Ok.; Euneva Lynn, Sparta, Ill.; Eugenia Bair, Waverly, Kansas.

Associate of Arts Degree.

The following received the rank of associate of arts: Elizabeth Campbell, Kansas City; George Evelyn Cone, Portland, Ark.; Mildred Dalton, Brookfield, Mo.; Aline B. Davidson, Kansas City; Mary Katherine Day, Clinton, Mo.; Helen M. Diehr, St. Charles; Marguerite Denise, Omaha; Nadine Paris, Wolf Island, Mo.; Irene Hall, Webster Groves; Margaret Hoffmann, Hannibal, Mo.; Mary Alice Lange, Leavenworth, Kan.; Elizabeth McClintock, Monticello, Ark.; Eugenia Pearson, Louisiana, Mo.; Marion Robb, Carroll, Ia.; Lucie May Sharon, St. Louis; Evelyn Shirley, Lucy Smith, Marshall, Mo.; Margaret Louise Smith, Macon, Mo.; Marjorie Smith, Siloam Springs, Ark.; Evelyn Teller, Vicksburg, Miss.; Helen Weaver, Rush Tower, Mo.; Audrey Weinberg, Kansas City; Norine Ziegler, Clarks, La.

Lindenwood College Scholarship Awards.

Much interest attached to the centennial awards in scholarship, athletics and distinctive department work which were bestowed at Lindenwood College, Wednesday noon, in advance of the commencement. These prizes usually come on graduation day, but President Roemer decided to give full right of way to commencement speakers by taking this item off the program. Miss Katherine Palmer of Clayton, a granddaughter of Rev. S. C. Palmer, D. D., won the athletic scholarship for good general work in the department of physical education. Scholarship prizes were named first, the Sigma Iota Chi legacy of $200 annually, going for next year to Miss Ruth Bullion, and that of the Eta Upsilon Gamma to Miss Virginia Sue Campbell, while educational scholarships of lesser amount were bestowed on Misses Helen Hammer, Elizabeth Tracy, Flada Le Van, Doris Achelpohl, Kathryn Walker, Frances Stumberg, Harriet Liddle, Sue Austin, Ruth Foster, Marcia Wallace, Julia Palmer, Adel Schnedler, Dorothy Gehlbach, Mildred Iffrig, Susan Patterson and Julia Thompson. The Bible prizes of $25 each, unique at Lindenwood, went to Misses Helen Moffett and Josephine Holdren. Miss Agnes Boschert gained the prize for distinctive work in athletics. In home economics, the best sewing prize went to Miss Martha Osburn, and that for best cooking to Miss Mary Yancey. In art work, a poster prize, singled out from many beautiful ones in the annual art exhibit, was awarded to Miss Margaret Fisher, and a prize from the Lindenwood College Club went to Miss Frances Lehmborg of Clayton. Progress prizes in music were as follows: Piano, Miss Silva Carmichael; organ, Miss Marion Gibson; violin, Miss Elizabeth Foster; voice, Misses Iris Fleischaker and Dorothy Gartner.

Two St. Louis girls who are roommates in Niccol's Hall, Misses Estelle Engel and Margaret Gardner, won a prize for the best-kept double room in that hall.

The centennial guests and the entire college were entertained at a buffet luncheon in Jubilee Hall, where stood an enormous "Lindenwood centennial birthday cake" frosted in white and yellow, with 100 candles around its margin.

Mrs. Caddie Allbritain of Jefferson City, who has been a guest of Dr. and Mrs. Roemer and attending the centennial celebration, is now a guest at the Hotel Mayfair for a few days.

PARTICIPATES IN SCHOOL PAGEANT

Miss Elizabeth Foster

MISS ELIZABETH FOSTER, of Arvada, Colo., participated in the Centennial pageant, given at Lindenwood college, St. Charles, Mo., Saturday, as part of the college's celebration of Centennial week.

Miss Foster took the part of one of the men who visited the college during the Civil war to demand that a flag designed by Mrs. Mary Easton Sibley, founder of the college, be taken down.

Mrs. Sibley, widow of Maj. George C. Sibley, had refused to participate in the war. She made a flag of white linen, embroidered with blue stars surrounding the word "love" and raised it over the campus.

It was around this historical event that the Centennial pageant was written.

The college is now the largest educational institutions for women in the middle west. The president, Dr. John Lincoln Roemer, is a Presbyterian clergyman, and the college is under the control of the Presbyterian Synod of Missouri. It is not operated as a sectarian school, however.

Lindenwood College Clubs Entertain

Among entertainments of the various Lindenwood College clubs from many cities, reaching a climax Monday afternoon with the presentation of $50,000 for a memorial scholarship in honor of Mary Easton Sibley, the skit presented by the St. Louis Lindenwood College Club was highly original.

Miss Mary Ann Garrett Stine, who attended in 1835, appeared in a rare silk gown, long and full, which her grand-nieces, Miss Adele and Miss Janet Stine, of Webster Groves, have preserved. The visitor read a letter written at "Linden Wood" 90 years ago.

Another club reviving personal memories of Mrs. Sibley was that of St. Charles, in which Mrs. Charles W. Wilson, who was graduated in 1877, sang a favorite song of Mrs. Sibley's. Mrs. Paul F. Donnelly, the active president of the St. Charles Lindenwood Club, presented the members in bright yellow smocks, in which with white felt hats they presented the Lindenwood college colors.

Only one member of the New York Lindenwood Club, Mrs. William Carter, wife of a Presbyterian pastor in Brooklyn, managed a skillful monologue, with the aid of a present-day student, Miss Peggy Denise of Omaha, who is soon to wed a New York man. The Chicago Club and the Los Angeles Club were both well represented.

Dr. Brookes Addresses Lindenwood Commencement.

Dr. Stratton D. Brooks, president of the Missouri State University, gave an approving hint for short skirts for women, in a sidelight of his centennial commencement speech at Lindenwood College, Tuesday morning. He referred to gowns, of the like he wore, with heavy purple velvet hood. "I used to worry about the women, for fear they would freeze to death," he said, "but since I have got a gown I think it is the hottest thing I have ever known. I am very much in favor of modern styles, to keep the women from suffocation."

A feature of the centennial season was the presentation, following Lindenwood College Club programs, Monday afternoon, of $50,000 for the Mary Easton Sibley scholarship. At the same time President John Lincoln Roemer announced that a building is in contemplation for which the board of directors is willing to appropriate $200,000, as soon as plans are agreed upon. This will probably be a music hall.

At the club stunts, the Kansas City Lindenwood College Club appeared in "sunburst" yellow smocks, designed by their president, Mrs. Paul F. Donnelly, and white felt hats, white and yellow being Lindenwood colors. St. Charles girls wore bona fide old-time dresses, and the St. Louis girls resurrected a dress worn by Miss Mary Ann Garrett Stine, an aunt of the Misses Stine of Webster Groves. She had attended Lindenwood in 1838. New York, Chicago and Los Angeles clubs also gave clever programs.

The Lindenwood centennial guests were entertained with an auto ride Monday evening. They all wear guests in the college dining-room. Saturday noon, at the formal centennial opening over 3000 were served in the dining room.

Miss Pauline Davis, of Nowata, winner of second place in national French essay contest of Beta Pi Theta.

Miss Pauline Davis, of this city, a member of the Centennial class of Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo., is the recipient of a high honor in French essay-writing which has been awarded to her in a national contest conducted by the French fraternity, Beta Pi Theta. Lindenwood has a chapter of this fraternity, Theta XI, of which Miss Davis has been vice-president for two years and is a charter member. She has been majoring in French at Lindenwood.

Her essay in French, entitled, "L'Academie Francaise", was published in "Linden Bark", the Lindenwood campus weekly. It was entered in competition with others from many colleges.

Her essay will shortly be published in the Beta Pi Theta bulletin. Miss Davis received her degree on Tuesday, March 31, at commencement exercises, when the chief address was made by Dr. Stratton D. Brooks, former president of the University of Oklahoma, and now president of the University of Missouri.

The Centennial class was recently entertained by the president, Dr. John Lincoln Roemer, and Mrs. Roemer, at a luncheon at the Missouri Athletic Association, St. Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Davis and daughter, Helen, attended the graduation exercises, Mr. Davis accom-

Mrs. Davis and Helen will remain with Miss Pauline while she is in summer school.

According to Dr. Roemer, president of the Lindenwood college, Miss Pauline was the best all-round student in the college and her Nowata friends will be glad to hear of the honor conferred on her.

Dr. Roemer Tells How Riches Can Be "Spiritual Asset"

Capable of Untold Good if Rightly Used, He Says in Sermon.

Riches as a "spiritual asset," instead of a liability imperiling the soul, were discussed by Dr. John Lincoln Roemer, president of Lindenwood College, yesterday morning, in his sermon at Tyler Place Presbyterian Church, of which he formerly was pastor. With "the rich young ruler" of the New Testament as his theme, he showed Christ's words, "One thing thou lackest," indicated "the riches of this world can be transmuted into spiritual values."

Dr. Roemer went directly from his Tyler Place pastorate to Lindenwood, when he became president of that institution in 1914. Many of his old friends extended congratulations yesterday because of the successful completion, two weeks ago, of Lindenwood's centennial. The present pastor, Rev. L. V. Buschman, also had a part in the centennial exercises.

The coming of the rich young ruler to Jesus, as told in the Gospels of Matthew and Luke, was described as "an incident illuminating the possibilities of things material." He declared:

Grasp Needed Today.

"When Jesus said, 'Yet one thing thou lackest,' he presented a world truth we need to grasp today. The riches of this world can be transmuted into spiritual values. Eternal life is within reach if we would have it.

"The rich young ruler was disappointed at the turn of the conversation, for he could discern no relationship between the material and the spiritual. Jesus wanted him to use every resource of mind, body and spirit, to make the most of his possessions.

"Knowing his possibilities, Jesus enjoined him to make use of them to the greatest attainment of life. One of the grossest errors is in thinking the young man was enjoined to pauperize himself.

"Poverty can be of no assistance. It can only emphasize its pauperized condition. A man must know something before he can impart knowledge; he must have something before he can distribute it.

"Jesus was pointing the way to life. We live by giving. We take on as we give out. One separated from this law shrivels. Never was there a truer saying than the text: 'There is that which scattereth and yet increaseth; there is that which withholdeth more than is meet and tendeth toward poverty.' 'The poor' is symbolic of human need.

Can Do Untold Good.

"A common phrase often quoted in this present day of marvelous prosperity in this country is, 'Our riches are our greatest danger.' So they are, if greater values are not made possible by them. But they are also our greatest opportunity of doing untold good.

"Jesus disclosed to the young man the fact we rise no higher than the sources of life. Fellowship is the forerunner of destiny. Our friendships are our making. If we have fellowship with the highest, we live their lives and share their rewards.

"The great truths of life are embodied in this story of the rich young ruler. Material possessions of any kind, by use and consecration to the service of God, bring the most coveted possession—eternal life."

Ministers and Autos.

Dr. Charles L. Chalfant of Pittsburgh, a former St. Louis pastor who has been representing his alma mater, Lafayette College, at the Centennial at Lindenwood College and also at Idaho College, announced in his recent visit here that he had given over the automobile, although once an expert driver. He had no reason to do this because of accident or fright, but he is now a strong supporter of the street-car service in Pittsburgh. A system is in vogue, which he would commend to St. Louis, of giving a "week's ticket" for a stipulated sum, on which the holder can ride for any number of rides. A great many people in Pittsburgh buy these week tickets, Dr. Chalfant says, and it promotes street-car riding as well as personal thrift.

Lindenwood College Centennial

St. Charles, Mo.

Window Display and Amplifying Equipment for Centennial

IN 1827, six years after the State of Missouri was admitted to the Union, Lindenwood College was founded. Major George C. Sibley, then stationed at St. Charles, the first capital of the commonwealth, and his wife, Mary Easton Sibley, were impressed with the need of a school in the sparsely settled Southwest for the higher education of young women. A beautiful site was selected overlooking the Missouri river, in a forest of Linden trees.

Ever since it was founded, the College has been faithful to the thousands of people who participated in the anniversary of Lindenwood's one hundredth year. It began with the Sibleys taking up their abode on a spot of land that the Indians gave them. Then a dream that came to Mrs. Sibley, purpose of its founders, that of training young women for a useful life, giving them a distinctive training for leadership in every sphere of woman's world.

In 1831 a log cabin was completed with accommodations for 40 girls, and 38 years later Sibley Hall, a three-story brick building was erected. Since that time four additional dormitories have been built. In 1914 Dr. J. L. Roemer was elected President of Lindenwood. Since 1921 Lindenwood has been elected to membership in the Central Association of Colleges and Universities.

the future was revealed to her, and she foresaw this wonderful institution of today.

Amplifiers were placed about the campus so that the visitors could enjoy the speaking and entertainments wherever they were. A pic-

SCHOOLS CAN MOLD YOUTH TO LINES OF HIGH IDEALS, SAYS HEAD OF GIRL'S SCHOOL

Dr. Templin Here To Assume Charge Of El Paso School For Girls.

ALL the talk of flaming youth and flappers is a direct result of the fact that many schools and colleges do not meet the educational needs of women, says Dr. Lucinda de L. Templin, recently appointed principal of the El Paso School for Girls, who has arrived here.

"Responsibility for the present social situation can, indeed, be laid at the door of the educator," says the specialist in education for women.

"Training has been given for every profession in the world but the profession of parenthood and it is because too many of our schools have not given the girls training in home ideals and management that the present social instability prevails.

"Educational standards that have arbitrarily been applied to the modern girl are the same as were arranged originally for men and boys. Pioneers in the education of women were forced to accept this standard when in the late '60s and '70s they agitated equal rights and opportunities of learning for the sexes.

"If education were to become a vital fact in the lives of women, it was necessary to demonstrate to a doubting world, first, that women had the physical endurance to stand the rigors of an education and, second, that they had the mentality, because men were scornful of the mentality of women.

"In order finally to prove this mental equality, women were forced to accept an identical course of study with the men. The result was that women not only survived physically but proceeded to equal or outrank men in scholastic attainment.

"Proof has been made. We are now at the threshold of an era when the curriculum ought to be reorganized to meet the needs of the woman of today, whose career as yesterday is in the home but who is taught everything but parenthood.

"Judged by the old standards, a wife was a sort of high grade housekeeper and the bridegroom took her from the home of her parents where she had learned sewing and baking along with simpler verses of the Bible.

"Modern education has introduced the idea of companionship to the contract of marriage—but it has left the bride the task of knowing intuitively how to budget her expenses and live agreeably and economically on a youth's salary."

Although the principal of a girls' school, Dr. Templin is not opposed to coeducation.

Advantages of the private school for younger girls are upheld by her on the theory of the cultural opportunities of a small school in which individual contact with the faculty is provided; rather than recommended as a convenient means of keeping girls from being boy struck.

Hearty support to the new principal was today promised by J. W. Kirkpatrick, president of the board of trustees of the El Paso School for Girls.

"It is as a woman of wide observation and deep penetration concerning people as well as a teacher who has all the degrees that are given, that I feel the board will be justified in backing any new plans Dr. Templin may have for the good of the school," said Mr. Kirkpatrick.

During the past year, Dr. Templin conducted a special research in education of women.

Previously she was dean of the faculty at Lindenwood college, St. Charles, Mo., a position she held for eight years. Before being elected to the deanship at Lindenwood college Dr. Templin was instructor at the University of Missouri.

Dr. Templin is a graduate of Stephens Junior college, a school for girls, at Columbia, Mo. After completing her course at this institution, she entered the University of Missouri, where she received the degrees of bachelor of arts, bachelor of science and master of arts.

She then studied at Harvard and Columbia universities specializing in education of women. Returning to the University of Missouri for further study, she received the degree of doctor of philosophy and completed a dissertation on the subject, "Higher Education of Women," which is now being published.

Among the books she has written in the educational field are: "Reminiscences of Lindenwood college," "The Newer Lindenwood," "Two Pioneers in Education of Women," "The Sibleys" and "A Centennial History of Lindenwood College." Dr. Templin also has contributed numerous articles to magazines on different phases in education of women.

In addition to wide training in the educational field, she has had practical business experience. She is the only woman who has won the degree of doctor of philosophy from the University of Missouri in sociology, studying the course under Dr. C. A. Ellwood, an authority on the subject.

Dr. Templin has been instrumental in the inauguration of educational improvement for women in prisons throughout the country.

As Missouri representative of the national committee on prisons and prison labor, she spent a week in the women's wards of the prisons at Hudson, N. Y.; Washington, D. C., and Clinton and Trenton, N. J., living the life of the inmates in order to study them and their needs.

Her object was to make a survey of all activities in the prisons, which might be termed educational. After a week spent in each of these penal institutions, she submitted her report to the national committee, in which she made constructive suggestions for improvement of educational policies.

Dr. Templin also was a member of the committee of 15 that was called to Washington to draft legislation proposed to congress for establishment of a modern federal prison for women, which is being completed in West Virginia.

"Who's Who" gives the following organizations with which Dr. Templin is affiliated: American Academy of Political Science, American Sociological association, American Prison association, national committee on prisons and prison labor, National Association of Administrative Women in Education, National Society of Vocational Education, American Association of University Women, Missouri Association of Deans of Colleges, Missouri State Teacher association, Missouri Welfare league, St. Louis Safety council, National Press bureau, American and Missouri Historical associations, National Educational association, Shakspeare Society of America, Daughters of American Revolution, Phi Theta Kappa, Pi Lambda Theta, Alpha Pi Zeta.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

Woman Sues to Protect $2,500,000 Apron Patents

Mrs. Nell Q. Donnelly, Founder and Head of Firm, Accuses St. Louis Company of Infringement

A saga of the sewing circle—the story of a housewife who developed a $2,500,000 manufacturing business, was unfolded yesterday before Judge Faris in United States District Court, where Mrs. Nell Q. Donnelly, maker of aprons of Kansas City, is defending her patent rights.

Mrs. Donnelly is suing the R. Lowenbaum Manufacturing Co., of St. Louis, alleging that it is producing an apron which infringes on her patented article. United States Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, is Mrs. Donnelly's counsel.

Mrs. Donnelly, alleging infringement of her patents, seeks to force the R. Lowenbaum Co. to pay her license fees on the garments which she claims violate her rights, and asks also a settlement for past sales. The Lowenbaum company claims the patent is void and that before the issuance of her patent in 1925, several firms had manufactured an apron similar in type to the now famous "Handy Dandy" and the "Nell Don."

Mrs. Donnelly introduced into the apron industry such an extraordinary conception of "free" yokes, bold and imaginative gores, and straight-line panels, according to testimony, that she was granted full protective patents for her designs in 1925. Among housewives, she is generally known as the woman who sent into permanent retirement the old gingham apron that tied in a big bow at the back.

Took Up Sewing in 1911.

Married in 1906, immediately after her graduation from the Parsons (Kan.) High School, Mrs. Donnelly the following year entered Lindenwood College. She did not sew at that time and knew nothing, in fact, about dressmaking. She took a few courses in domestic science, but still had not dreamed of an apron that would sell for no more than $1, and perhaps less.

It was 1911 before Mrs. Donnelly took up sewing. Paid by the piece, she stitched a few dozens of aprons for a Kansas City department store. By 1916, she was ready to begin manufacturing. She realized that a good $1 apron would prove popular.

With the savings of herself and her husband, Paul, amounting to $1200, Mrs. Donnelly began her individual apron factory, doing that year a business of $5000. The next year the business doubled. It kept on doubling. In 1918, when her husband went into the army, Mrs. Donnelly gathered about her a large staff of workers and began to turn out aprons on a big scale. She took all types of aprons the American housewife had ever seen, and did all sorts of things with them.

Less Material, Fewer Bulges.

She used less material, did away with "bulges" and created at last "an apron that is becoming to any type of woman: if a woman has large hips or small hips it doesn't make any difference, the apron is becoming, even to a woman who may not be very shapely, and that is the real value of this garment."

Mrs. Donnelly's product began to knock the bottom out of the apron market in 1921. By 1924, her aprons were being vended in every state in the Union, and in virtually every hamlet in every state.

Her own company in Kansas City now turns out aprons by the hundreds of thousands and several firms, in New York City and throughout the country, pay her a license fee to use her patented patterns.

A simple little garment of blue and white was lauded from counsel to Judge and from Judge to witness throughout the day. Mrs. Donnelly testified, not without a note of pride, that this little affair in blue and white will mean about $400,000 this year to her concern, and that it had already earned $616,133.50 in a period of only two years and a half. This, she said, is but "one of our lines," and there are 100 others.

Reed Uses Wrong Word.

Senator Reed faltered once upon a hidden rock of a technical term used in dressmaking.

"Now, here where this dress is ruffled"—began Senator Reed, as he examined Miss Therese Walser, designer for the Forest City Mfg. Co., a subcontractor of the firm being sued.

An expression indicating horror crossed Miss Walser's not uncomely face.

"Where it's what?" she asked.

"Why—ah—right here—ruffled," said Senator Reed, for once in his career baffled over a matter of detail.

"That's not ruffled," said Miss Walser, "that's gathered."

Senator Reed bowed his thanks to the defense witness, and amidst smiles the case went on. It continues today.

Lindenwood to Offer 'Orientation Course' First Time This Fall

Is Intended to Give Freshmen Chance to 'Find Themselves.'

In the July number of the monthly bulletin of Lindenwood College appears an outline by Dean Alice E. Gipson of a new "Orientation course" which this college is to offer for the first time in the fall semester, opening the first school year of its second century. This course, open to all freshmen, is designed primarily as a means of adjustment between the secondary school and the entirely different life of the college. In connection with it also will be a plan of giving more formal attention to vocational opportunities, based upon each girl's individual ability, as revealed by personal interviews with members of the faculty and by psychological tests.

Purpose of Course.

As expressed in Dean Gipson's synopsis, the purpose of the Orientation course is more than simply to provide a "career." It is to attain "an appreciation of the value of each girl as an individual and her right to realize through her college experience the best that is in her, spiritually, intellectually, socially, physically."

In the plan for the freshmen of orientation to college life it will be borne in mind that many students coming to college need help in methods of study. Many of them also have not hitherto had access to a large reference library, and the way to get most out of this privilege will be shown. A series of lectures on personal hygiene will be in the orientation course, "so that if she does not follow the way to physical health it will not be because she is ignorant of it." Vocations open to women and specific opportunities will be taken up in lectures by specialists. There are also to be lectures on "Contemporary Civilization," so as to fit the student to her times.

Vocational Advice.

In the formal attention by members of the faculty to vocational advice to students it is stated that "the college recognizes that a student should not merely gain knowledge in education, but that her native abilities should be uncovered and direction given to them so that when she leaves college she will be enabled to take, in the society of her time, the highest place possible for her. A record will be kept of each girl's achievements before she came to college and of what she accomplishes while she is in college. Interviews will be held with each girl, her course of study carefully reviewed to see that she is taking the work for which she seems best fitted, and advice will be given to her in regard to the field in which she declares herself to be interested."

SCIENCE AND RELIGION SUBJECT OF SERMON

Conflict Between Reason, Faith Ages Old, Dr. Calder Says.

Dr. Robert Scott Calder, head of the Department of Bible and Philosophy of Lindenwood College, filled the pulpit of Pilgrim Congregational Church, Union boulevard and Kensington avenue, yesterday morning, speaking on the conflict between reason and faith.

"The conflict between reason and faith has gone on for centuries," said Dr. Calder. "The very devout churchman has had great faith, while the philosopher has given the palm to reason. There is truth in both extremes; probably, as in all other things, the most satisfactory solution lies in a golden mean. We still have a remnant of the medieval conflict. Science often over-emphasizes knowledge and minimizes faith.

"This is an age of knowledge—an age of science, mathematics, certainty. We want facts; we want to know. This is a wise attitude when we are living in a world fraught with dangers. However, it often leads us to believe that mathematical or scientific knowledge can be found in every realm of life.

"But there is also the realm of our ideals, our loves, hopes, fears, friendships, purposes. The knowledge we have of this realm of our lives is not like that which says that two and two are four, but who will deny that we have such knowledge?"

"The guide in our physical world is knowledge; the guide in our spiritual world, which is just as necessary, is what Paul called believing. We often call it faith. What one believes about the eternal verities is infinitely more important than physical knowledge."

LINDENWOOD TO HONOR LATE DR. ROBERT IRWIN

A movement has been started among former Lindenwood College students who attended this institution during the presidency of the late Dr. Robert Irwin, from 1880 to 1893, to place a bronze memorial tablet in his memory in Irwin Hall, the newest dormitory. Mrs. Chauncey W. Lick of Fort Smith, Ark., is chairman of the undertaking, and it has been estimated that if each "Irwin girl" gives one dollar a sufficient amount will be raised.

Dr. Irwin is remembered as a builder at Lindenwood. During his incumbency the south wing was added to Sibley Hall, and in a few years the north wing also. Among those taking a prominent part in preparing for the memorial are Miss Alice Linnemann, head of Lindenwood's art department, who has been made chairman of the purchasing and inscription committee, assisted by Mrs. William Carter of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Miss Mary Helphenstine of Greenfield, Mo.

Dr. Irwin's son, Dr. Francis Irwin, is pastor of a Presbyterian Church at Irvington-on-the-Hudson, N. Y., which is attended by Mrs. Finley Shepard, formerly Helen Gould. Dr. Francis Irwin gave the dedicatory address in October, 1924, when Irwin Hall was completed.

CREVE COEUR LAKE

pioneer of the Creve Coeur section had acquired much land and was in the mercantile business at Creve Coeur. About forty years ago he made up his mind that the people of St. Louis should become better acquainted with the lovely lakes—for although we are wont to say Creve Coeur Lake, singular, there are two lakes; rather, there were two. The smaller lake in recent years has all but disappeared because of its filling up with sediment from the overflow of the Missouri River.

Geologists, it is interesting to know, say that these lakes were constructed originally by the Missouri River, which is something of a landscape gardener itself. The river ran where now the lakes lie dreaming. In time the muddy old Missouri found another channel—a habit it has all along its tortuous route. Fed partly by springs and partly by seep water from the river, Creve Coeur was left a separate water unit for the joy of future generations. It is described as of the oxbow type, the word alluding to its shape.

Jacob Studt developed a park at Upper Creve Coeur Lake. He advertised and boosted both that lake and its larger neighbor. Something less than sixty years ago was born in the village of Creve Coeur a son of the original Studt pioneer. He was named for his father, and although the latter has been dead for years he is known still as Jacob Studt, Jr. Young Jacob, in 1892, married a daughter of the Wotrings—Jane Elizabeth.

"And the best wife any man ever had," he declared the other day.

These two, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Studt, Jr., may be said to have kept Creve Coeur Lake on the map. About the time of his marriage young Jacob began helping his father run the park and the hotel at the little lake. After his father died he acquired this property, also many acres adjacent to the big lake and running back over the bluffs. He owns now a lake frontage of nearly a mile. The United Railways Company owns the rest of the eastern frontage.

The Studts have lived for many years in a substantial and highly modern farm home on the heights overlooking the big lake. They operate farms, orchards, truck gardens. In the earlier days they fed the fishermen and others who visited the resort. For this they got money. Nowadays they feed many visitors who love to go out from the city and spend a day or a week-end in the midst of the scenic beauty of the lake section and under the hospitable roof of the Studts.

Students of Washington University—hundreds of them—look upon the Studt country mansion as almost a second home. Two of the Studt sons are graduates of the university; another, Harold, living at home, is a junior there at the early age of 18. Charles Wotrung Studt, eldest son, taught at Washington U. for some time after his graduation; he is noted as a geologist and at present has charge of the geological work for a large oil company at Independence, Kan. Sidney Studt is in the real estate business at Clayton, and lives in his own house on the Studt farm. The one daughter of the Studts, educated at Lindenwood College, married Robert Koch, in business in St. Louis, but residing on the Studt homestead, where Mr. and Mrs. Koch have acquired a handsome acreage and are building a home. Koch is a nephew of the celebrated German bacteriologist, Dr. Robert Koch. His father, the late Henry M. Koch, came to Creve Coeur many years ago and bought out the Studt store.

Studt, having lived his life thus far near or at the edge of Creve Coeur Lake, is an enthusiast for its development as an esthetic asset for St. Louis and for the county. He preaches its natural beauties to all who listen—and nobody turns a deaf ear to him. This season he has leased the hotel, on the shore of the big lake, to a young German, four years in America, who agrees to conduct it along respectable lines. For about eight years the hotel has been suspended.

"The people of St. Louis, especially," said Studt when looking for perhaps the millionth time across his beloved lake, "should learn what a wonderful asset this beautiful lake could be made for them. In years to come, after I am gone, I hope it may be acquired by the city as an outer park. With the great development of automobile traffic, good roads and railway and trolley transportation, the place is of easy access. I am engaged now in organizing a drainage district, with the purpose of preventing further damage to the lake from the Missouri River overflow and of keeping the water clear. I can see no reason why such a beautiful natural feature as this should be left to deteriorate."

LINDENWOOD TO HAVE MEMORIAL TO AYERS

At the recent annual meeting of the Lindenwood College Board of Directors, provision was made for reconstruction of Jubilee Hall, dormitory and dining hall, to be rededicated as Ayers Hall, a memorial to Dr. George Frederick Ayers, president of Lindenwood from 1901 to 1914, during whose tenure the hall was built. His widow, now of Washington, D. C., was a guest during Lindenwood's centennial and has been entertained here and in St. Charles. Donors of Jubilee Hall were Andrew Carnegie, James Gay Butler, John A. Holmes and Mrs. William M. McMillan.

The annual report of the college president, Dr. John Lincoln Roemer, stated the centennial ceremonies had been the outstanding event of the academic year. He estimated conservatively at least 2000 centennial visitors had been guests of the college. The board approved the budget for the coming year.

Announcement was made of the death in St. Luke's Hospital, Chicago, June 22, of Miss Margaret Carol Dunn, teacher of history and English, who was to have returned to the college in the fall to continue her work.

Guests came from the entire district, the dance following a swim and picnic party given the visitors late yesterday evening at Neosho by Rainbow Girls and the Eastern Star.

Another function of interest was the luncheon given yesterday at Sagmount inn by the Lindenwood College Club for prospective members and attended by Lindenwood girls from a number of towns in this locality.

For the coming week, little is scheduled besides a few social clubs which have continued meetings through the summer and such informal affairs as are popular at this season.

The Lindenwood College Club entertained with a 1 o'clock luncheon yesterday at Sagmount inn in honor of prospective members. They are Miss Mary Louise Guthrie of Neosho; Miss Rose Ann Abbey of Galena; Misses Mary Helen Millsap and Frances Childress of Joplin; Miss Bessie May Schooler of Carthage, Miss Ruth Fuller of Eureka Springs and Miss Violet Richardson of Granby. The tables were attractively decorated in the club colors, yellow and white, and the menu conformed to the same motif. Following the luncheon this program was given:

LINDENWOOD TREE, 125 YEARS OLD, FALLS

Unable to Preserve It Longer, Specialists Saw It Down.

The "King of the Campus," a time-honored elm tree on the grounds of Lindenwood College, which was a lusty sapling before the signing of the treaty of the Louisiana Purchase, is now felled to earth. This tree, goal of all freshmen as the highest point on which to affix their class pennant, began to fade in the spring of Lindenwood's centennial year. Its great trunk, 6 feet in diameter, showed manifest decay.

The Davis tree surgeons did their best. Years ago Gargantuan doses of cement and asphalt mended the tree's infirmities, but only temporarily. So early this month the order was given to destroy the tree.

Elbert Olmsted of the Davis Company has superintended the work of cutting down the giant. Five men under his direction spent six and one-half days of solid work in doing this job. It was all done by chopping and hand-sawing. Few trees of this size exist in this part of the country and the huge saws of the sawmill of the timber country were not within convenient distance.

LINDENWOOD COLLEGE CLUB FORMED IN ARIZONA

Mrs. J. M. Nixon of Phoenix, Ariz., formerly Miss Laura Hopolite of St. Louis, has been made an officer in a recently organized Lindenwood College Club of Arizona, which was formed in connection with a visit to Phoenix made by Miss Alice Linnemann, head of the art department of Lindenwood College.

Miss Linnemann spent some time with Mrs. W. B. Collom of Payson, Ariz., a Lindenwood student of about forty years ago, who has gained national fame in botanical circles for her studies and discovery of several new plants in Arizona. Mrs. Collom is vice president of the new club, and its president is Mrs. Lewis Gibbs of Phoenix. A former St. Charles girl, Mrs. Mary L. Johnson, formerly Miss Mary Lindsay, is secretary.

Miss Linnemann, after being entertained by friends in the Lindenwood College Club of Los Angeles, has gone to California University to attend a course of lectures. She will visit Portland and Seattle before returning home.

Lindenwood to Open Its Year with 3 New Department Heads

Half Dozen Other Changes Made in Faculty, Is Announcement.

In reopening for its 101st year September 14, Lindenwood College will present three new heads of departments, with about half a dozen other new teachers in its faculty of fifty.

"Education," one of the strongest divisions of college study because so many students start life as teachers, will have Jewell A. Brent as its head. He has been professor of education at Huron College, Huron, S. D. He was graduated A. B. from McKendree College, Lebanon, Ill., and received his A. M. from the University of Illinois. Immediately after leaving college, he had experience in high school teaching in several Illinois towns.

Dr. Bertha Anne Reuter will be the new head of Lindenwood's history department. Most of her collegiate and graduate work was done in Iowa, her native state. She received Ph. B. from Des Moines University, and A. M. and Ph. D. from the State University of Iowa. She also did graduate work at the University of Chicago. She comes to Lindenwood from Wesleyan College, Macon, Ga., where she taught history and economics. She has also been professor of history in Mount Morris College in Illinois and Franklin College in Indiana.

New Head for Biology.

The biology department will have as its new head Dr. Ada Roberts Hall, professor of biology for the last three years in Shorter College at Rome, Ga. She is a Western woman having received her A. B. and A. M. degrees in the University of Oregon. Her work leading to the degree Ph. D. was done in the University of Illinois. Dr. Hall was assistant professor in the University of Oregon, and taught in Whitman College at Walla Walla, Wash., before coming to Georgia.

In the young assistants who will come into the Lindenwood faculty are two members of the class of 1926, which the institution called its "pre-Centennial Class," each of whom has been doing university graduate work for the last year. One of the two is Miss Grace Larson of Paxton, Ill., who was president of her class at Lindenwood, and carried various honors. Her recent studies have been at the University of Illinois. She will teach botany, succeeding Dr. Fanny Fern Smith, who recently married.

Miss Cora M. Wallenbrock, of the class of 1926, returns to teach in the department of English. This department, headed by Lindenwood's dean, Dr. Alice E. Gipson, who is now abroad, is always equipped with the largest staff of any division of the college. English is a required study for every freshman, and is strongly emphasized in each succeeding year. Miss Wallenbrock had the honor of winning Lindenwood's $500 fellowship in 1926 as "best all-round student, and one who conformed in every way to the standards of Lindenwood."

Editor of "Linden Leaves."

She used this fellowship in the University of Missouri, her home being in St. Charles. Miss Wallenbrock's special fondness for writing was evidenced in the fact that in 1926 she was editor of "Linden Leaves," and in a previous year she won the Hobeln medal for English composition.

Miss M. Elizabeth Dawson of Ardmore, Ia., who has a master's degree from Columbia University, New York, will also be added to the English department. Miss Avaline Folsom is to be a new teacher of history and English.

Miss Anne Zimmerman is to be a new teacher in the modern language department, having classes in French and Spanish. She has studied and traveled extensively in Europe. An assistant in education and sociology will be Miss Rachel M. Morris of Allerton, Ill., who received A. B. from the University of Illinois, and A. M. from Northwestern University. She has until now been teaching at Folts Institute, Herkimer, N. Y.

Miss Cornelia M. Cotton of Washington, D. C., is to be teacher of zoology at Lindenwood. Her training has been in the East—A. B. at Cornell University and A. M. at Syracuse University, where also she taught zoology.

Music Department Changes.

The college music department will introduce two new teachers, Miss Grace Terhune of Sparta, Ill., teacher of voice, and Miss Louise C. Titcomb of Fall River, Mass., who will teach the increasing number of students who desire to learn pipe organ playing.

There will be a new teacher of oratory in Miss Mary McKenzie Gordon of Walton, Ky., whose latest work has been as supervisor of oratory in the schools of Boone County, Ky. After graduating from Transylvania College, Miss Gordon took special studies in the Emerson School of Oratory in Boston, Mass., where she received the degree B. L. I.

From Kentucky also comes the new housemother of Niccollis Hall, Miss Mary Courtney Blackwell of Hopkinsville, Ky. Niccollis Hall is especially the home of freshmen when in college.

Orientation Course Is Given Freshmen

One of the newest developments in college courses is a course in orientation given to freshmen in their first semester, started by Lindenwood College, at St. Charles Mo., one of the oldest colleges for women in the west. The course will include methods of study and instruction on the use of the library as well as a review of contemporary civilization which will give the students the best thought of the past and the present, thus developing their sense of values. Psychological tests will be given, in an effort to aid the student in the choice of a vocation. The course will be made compulsory.

Jubilee Hall Remodeled.

The second oldest dormitory at Lindenwood College has been remodeled and equipped with improvements at a cost of $30,000, making the total building cost about $150,000. It is to be re-named Ayres Hall, in memory of the late Rev. George Frederick Ayres, D. D., president of Lindenwood, from 1903 to 1913. Re-dedication ceremonies are to be held in October. Hardwood floors have been laid in the building, and an extensive new refrigerating plant added. The third floor windows have been enlarged, and the dormitory rooms on that floor have been made much more attractive.

LINDENWOOD HAS 138-ACRE CAMPUS

College for Women at St.
Charles Was Established in 1827.

Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo., is one of the oldest colleges west of the Mississippi, its first students having traveled there by stage coach. It was founded in 1827 as a school for the higher education of women, by Major and Mrs. George C. Sibley.

Its name is derived from the site of a grove of linden trees, overlooking the Missouri river, which the Sibleys chose for the school.

First housed in a building made of wood from the forest in which it was located, the school now consists of seven buildings, five of them dormitories. A swimming pool and tennis courts are on the campus. The campus is 138 acres in area.

In 1920 Lindenwood College was received in the Missouri College Union, which recognizes only standard colleges completing requirements for a four-year course. In 1921 it became a member of the North Central Association, and was made a member of the Association of American Colleges in 1924.

A limited number of scholarships at $100 each will be awarded members of the freshman class who are recommended by the faculty on the basis of scholarship and general standards. One hundred and fifty dollar scholarships will go to members of the sophomore class, and $200 scholarships to the junior class.

A fellowship of $500 is offered to the student completing her four years of undergraduate work in the college, recommended by the faculty. This is for use in pursuing graduate work in any college or university she may choose.

Courses offered in the College of Arts and Sciences, include art, Bible, biological sciences, classical languages and literature, English, history and government, mathematics, modern languages, music, philosophy, physical science, psychology and sociology and economics.

The School of Vocations offers courses in business, home economics, education, journalism and physical education. A School of Music, Art and Oratory is included in the college.

ANNE ZIMMERMAN WILL TEACH AT ST. CHARLES, MO.

Announcement has been made at Lindenwood College for women, St. Charles, Mo., that Miss Anne Zimmerman, who received A. B. and A. M. from the University of Iowa, will teach French and Spanish beginning with the next semester, September 14th. The modern language department contains a large proportion of the 500 girls attending this college, and is under the leadership of Miss Louise Stone, of Burlington, Iowa, who is now abroad. Miss Zimmerman has also traveled extensively in Europe.

Ayres Hall of Lindenwood College, formerly known as Jubilee Hall, which has been remodeled at an expenditure of $30,000 and renamed in honor of President George Frederick Ayres, who preceded Dr. John L. Roemer, the present head.

Remodel Dormitory.

Announcement has been made by Dr. John Lincoln Roemer, president of Lindenwood College, that Ayres Hall is to be the name of the remodeled Jubilee Hall, upon which about $30,000 is being spent, making the estimated value of the finished building $150,000.

This hall, built originally in 1903 in commemoration of the college's seventy-fifth anniversary, was made possible by gifts from Andrew Carnegie, James Gay Butler, John A. Holmes and Mrs. William M. McMillan. It was built in the presidency of the late Rev. George Frederick Ayres, D. D., and is being renamed in his honor.

New Fixtures.

Modern fixtures, including a number of private baths besides those already existing, have been added, and the whole building is redecorated. Dormer windows in the third story have been modernized and made larger.

Hardwood floors have been placed throughout and new electric fixtures. There will be accommodations for about eighty students. It has been the custom for this building to be the home of the sophomores at Lindenwood.

One of the chief improvements is a refrigerating system of 1000 pounds ice-making capacity, the ice being made in 50-pound blocks. The students' dining room and the kitchen are in the basement of this hall.

Victuals 600.

During the recent Lindenwood centennial, as many as 1500 persons were fed at each meal in this dining room. There are always about 600 present. The refrigerating plant will also provide cool drinking water all over the building.

Two years ago the kitchen was equipped with all modern apparatus. A new ventilating system is now to be provided, and a skylight will be added to the dining room.

The interior decoration has been changed from fumed oak to ivory finish, and new furniture is being added to the parlors. The front entrance of the hall will have a canopy over it.

Dr. Ayres, for whom the building is named, was president of Lindenwood College from 1903 to 1913, until his death in that year. His wife, who now resides in Washington, D. C., was a guest at the centennial celebration at the college last May.

LINDENWOOD FRESHMAN IS DESCENDANT OF FOUNDER

A collateral descendant of Mrs. Mary Easton Sibley, founder in 1827 of Lindenwood College, will be enlisted in freshman ranks at Lindenwood, when the school year opens on September 14. She is Miss Jennie Ruth Gamble of Dahlgren, Ill., whose great-grandmother on her father's side was a sister of Mrs. Sibley, both she and Mrs. Sibley being daughters of Judge Rufus Easton, who was the first Postmaster of St. Louis.

Miss Gamble has just graduated from the high school at Dahlgren. Two years ago, in order to be sure of a room, she registered at Lindenwood in 1927. She is to "live" in Niccolls Hall, the dormitory set apart for freshmen, but later as she advances in her college course she will perhaps reside in Old Sibley, the hall named for her distinguished grand-aunt.

DR. J. F. HARDESTY, PRISONER OF GERMANS IN WAR, WEDS

Miss Lucille Hetzel Becomes Bride of Eye Specialist—Leave for Panama.

Dr. John Hardesty, a physician who was captured by the Germans while serving as a medical officer with the British forces in Flanders in March, 1918, yesterday married Miss Lucille Hetzel at the bride's home, 3811 Shaw boulevard.

Dr. J. L. Roemer, president of Lindenwood College at St. Charles, officiated. After the ceremony they departed for New Orleans on a trip to Panama.

Dr. Hardesty was one of five sons, all physicians, of Mrs. B. F. Hardesty of Winfield, Mo., who enlisted in the army when the United States entered the war. He and Lieut. Harold A. Goodrich, and other St. Louis physicians were captured separately when the Germans began their last great drive in the Somme offensive in the spring of 1918. The two St. Louis physicians, who were strangers to each other, met in a German prison camp. After the war, they were released and returned to their homes.

Dr. Hardesty is an eye specialist with offices in the Missouri Theater building. He has lived at the University Club. He was graduated from St. Louis University Medical School in 1914.

New Lindenwood Students Receive 'Travel Letters'

These Help to Acquaint Freshmen with Ways of That School.

New Lindenwood College students who are entering with the school year which begins next Wednesday have received "travel letters" just sent out to all of them by the college secretary, Guy C. Motley. In this letter suggestions are given about co-operation and a basis of understanding in the "family life" which characterizes girls' colleges.

"During the first days of school," says the letter, "while we are learning to live together as a group, it will be very necessary for us to be friendly to one another and to remember the biggest thing in our school life will be the friends we make."

The advice is of a judicious sort which might apply to all youths, boys as well as girls, entering on the untried community life of the college. "Students will be measuring up each other for the first few days, and it is necessary that we be especially considerate of one another as we are arranging courses, getting settled in our rooms, and settling the many other details incident to entrance. Remember, if things are not just as you expect the first few days, they will be adjusted shortly. We have many different kinds of people, but you will soon learn to adapt yourself to the little problems that arise in a college community."

One Problem of Travel.

One problem of travel for which Lindenwood always arranges is the chaperon. These chaperons are provided at important railroad centers to join the special trainloads of incoming girls, as is told in the letter.

In other days, Lindenwood girls wore buttons or yellow and white ribbons to identify them while they were still strangers. But the modern girl will have none of this. She refuses to be "tagged." A compromise is attained by artistically designed stickers, pennant-wise, in yellow and white, which they put on their valises. To have luggage plastered over is quite the vogue.

The personnel of the student body for Lindenwood's 101st year is more cosmopolitan than it has ever been, and represents a larger number of states. One girl comes from Massachusetts, another from Tacoma, Wash.; one from Oakland, Cal., another from New Jersey; several from Arizona and New Mexico. There is even a new student from British Columbia, Canada, entering sophomore. St. Louis has a quota of about thirty students, and Missouri of course leads the states in its number of students.

The first general address of the school year will be given by the president, Dr. John Lincoln Roemer, next Sunday night, September 18.

Dean Alice E. Gipson returned from abroad a few days ago and is finishing the plans for registration and arrangement of all the various courses of study. The dean has announced that various members of the faculty will give vocational addresses at 2 o'clock on Thursday afternoons in the fall semester as a guide to freshmen in determining what studies they will pursue.

In sports a lively new interest is introduced by the fact that a real English instructor in hockey is to give coaching for the annual Thanksgiving hockey game, which is practiced beforehand for weeks. All sports will be looking forward to Field Day in May, introduced as an annual event for the first time last May, on the new athletic grounds.

The renovated and newly named Ayres Hall, formerly Jubilee, is to be dedicated in October, but it is ready for occupancy and the girls will move in at once.

COUNTY GIRLS RETURN TO STUDIES AT THE LINDENWOOD COLLEGE

School at St. Charles Will Reopen September 14 for Its One Hundred and First Year.

With the opening of the school year, Wednesday, September 14, at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo., a number of young women from Webster Groves are returning who were students in the college last year.

Among these are Miss Virginia McClure, daughter of C. H. McClure; Miss Helen Buchanan daughter of G. W. Buchanan, and Miss Dorothy Alley, daughter of C. W. Alley. The latter's sister, Mrs. Ralph Arthur Blanchard, of Monroe, Mich., attended Lindenwood when she was Miss Ruth Van Alley, in 1924-25.

A feature of Lindenwood's reopening for the one hundred and first college year will be the dedication of the new Ayres Hall, formerly Jubilee, which has been redecorated and improved and is now renamed in honor of the late Dr. George Frederick Ayres, who was president for ten years immediately preceding the present incumbent, Dr. John Lincoln Roemer. This dormitory contains accommodations for about 80 students, and its basement is devoted to the large dining room and the kitchen apartments.

LINDENWOOD COLLEGE BEGINS 101ST YEAR

Dr. J. L. Roemer, in Opening Address, Stresses Objective of Institution.

Opening vesper services, beginning the 101st year at Lindenwood College, were held last night in the college chapel with an address by the president, Dr. John Lincoln Roemer on "Education's Objective."

For Lindenwood, with its 100-year-old slogan of "the useful life," Dr. Roemer said that the goal is to give "education of the sort that helps one make a life and make a living at the same time," interpreting "living" as being something worthwhile, although not necessarily wage earning.

"I would rather have it said of our product, above all things, that the Lindenwood graduate is known for her personal value to society," he said. "The supreme objective is a physically fit, plus a mentally trained student, plus a personality behind the equipment." As a creed in making "a living and a life," the following was set forth:

"I believe in people being good and at the same time being good for something. I believe in piety, but not a piety that substitutes for intelligence. I believe in religion and the worship of a God who wants an intelligent faith, an intelligent affection, an intelligent spirit of devotion. I believe in the God who commands, 'Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy mind, with all thy heart, with all thy soul.' I believe in an education which seeks to train body, mind, spirit, co-ordinately and not separately."

Comparative figures given by the speaker in proof that "one's faith is measured by his contribution," showed that in the United States in 1925 $2,000,000,000 was contributed to public education, a sum in excess of the nation's combined expenditures for military, police and fire protection and also prohibition enforcement.

As answers to the question "Why Do Freshmen Fail?" the speaker cited "laziness," "indifference" and "lack of objective in school life." Colleges, he said, should not tolerate "the lazy, the indifferent or the student who is in college just for fun."

Vesper Services at Lindenwood.
Vesper services marking the opening of the 101st year of Lindenwood College, in St. Charles, were held last night in the college chapel with an address by Dr. John Lincoln Roemer, president. Dr. Roemer declared that the United States spent $2,000,000,000 on education in 1925, more than it laid out for military, police and fire protection and prohibition enforcement.

DR. ROEMER SPEAKS AT LINDENWOOD OPENING
Sunday night Dr. J. L. Roemer gave the opening address at the first vesper service of the year at Lindenwood College. He spoke on "Education's Objective," giving statistics as to the number of persons now attending college.
"Three-fourths out of the grade schools go on to high school; four-fifths of those who complete high school courses go to college," he said.
"The registration in American colleges and universities has increased six times as rapidly as the population from 1890 to 1924. The rush to our colleges and universities is not an unhealthy phase of American life. It is the determining factor of our civilization."
Greater than armaments in the war, said Dr. Roemer, was "the man behind the gun"; so the training of college life is to produce not only knowledge and physical training, but also personality and "social equipment."

LINDENWOOD TO TEST FRESHMAN MENTALITY
Lindenwood College will determine the "intelligence quota" of more than 100 high school graduates in psychological tests to be administered to the freshman class this afternoon, beginning at 2 o'clock. Miss Florence Schaper will preside.
This testing will be preliminary to a new course of study for freshmen, a twice-a-week lecture course arranged with a view to shaping their individual studies throughout the four-year college course. Dr. Alice E. Gipson, dean of the college, will speak this afternoon, also Thursday afternoon, advising freshmen how to study and how to adapt themselves to college life in general. Other lectures will follow on health, use of the library and the work of each department of study at the college.

'STUMP' TESTS BAFFLE LINDENWOOD FROSH
250 Girls Struggle Through Thorndyke Intelligence Examination.
In five different rooms, guarded by proctors for three and one-half hours, the freshmen of Lindenwood College yesterday afternoon labored with the "tests" of the Thorndyke Intelligence Examination. These 250 young girls, fresh from the high schools of about thirty states, were suddenly confronted, to give snap judgment, on such questions as:
"Italy is shaped like a banana, boot, broom, sausage?"
"Potatoes are rich in phosphorus, acids, starch, soda?"
"The President during the Spanish war was Hayes, Madison, McKinley, Polk?"
"Why do some generals think that short men should not be admitted into the army; because usefulness does not depend much on height? because they want to exist? because they are more intelligent than tall men? because they have better eyesight?"
And they were asked, among harassing questions, was it true or false that "hundreds of people in Los Angeles were up before day-break to see the sun rise on the Pacific," "the poor deaf man groped along half blinded by the raging storm," and many other queries as to perplexing elements.
"Did Washington build the Panama Canal in 1776?" was harder for a freshman than it might have been for older heads. Nor did it seem exactly fair to demand of young girls "What should you do if a gun carriage gets stuck in the mud?" "Twisting of adjectives and nouns, figures and geometrical designs became most confusing."
A poser for some was, "Why does gold cost more than iron?" And others stumbled over "Why are prunes a good food?" Geography was taxed in, "From Paris to Berlin is about 400 miles, 700 miles, 1000 miles, 1300 miles." Which was it?
Scores for the freshmen are to be announced Monday. The tests, although used in some colleges as requisites for admission, are not so designed at Lindenwood.

St. Charles, Mo.

Founders' Day, annually celebrated in October at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo., will be the occasion, on October 21 of this year, for dedicating Ayres Hall. This is a new dormitory, remodeled from Lindenwood's Jubilee Hall of 25 years ago. It accommodates 80 out of the 500 Lindenwood women students and contains also the commissary department.

One of the largest ice-making plants in this part of the country, capable of freezing 1,000 pounds of ice at one time and freezing in ordinary use 500 pounds, is installed as part of the kitchen equipment of Ayres Hall. A ventilating system for the dining-room, a new lighting system and new furnishings are among the things added, together with new decorations, and the multiplicity of baths everywhere which the modern college girl demands. The hall's architectural improvements include an ornate glass canopy over a new entrance.

Ayres Hall is to be named in honor of the late Dr. George Frederick Ayres, a Presbyterian clergyman who was president of Lindenwood College from 1903 to 1913, his term of office being ended by his death. Several hundred students attended Lindenwood during Dr. Ayres' administration, and it is particularly at the request of "the Ayres Girls" that the new name has been adopted. The honor is also appropriately bestowed, because the old Jubilee Hall, from which this is re-modeled, was erected and dedicated as the first important act in Dr. Ayres' presidency, at which time he was instrumental in interesting Andrew Carnegie and others in Lindenwood. "Jubilee" at that time indicated Lindenwood's 75th anniversary, which has since been eclipsed by Lindenwood's 100th anniversary, in the celebration of which Centennial President John Lincoln Roemer and his wife were host and hostess, the last four days of last May.

Those who were students under Dr. Ayres have contributed a memorial bust for the new building. Dr. Ayres' widow, who resides in Washington, D. C., is expected for the ceremonies, which will occur at 10 o'clock on the morning of October 21.

The Lindenwood Hymn will be sung, and the students will march in procession to Ayres Hall, led by the faculty, the Board of Directors, and the vested choir. This new name will be latest in a considerable roster of memorial buildings, Butler Hall for the late James Gay Butler; Margaret Hall for his wife; Niccolls Hall for the late Dr. Samuel Jack Niccolls; Irwin Hall for the late Dr. Robert Irwin; Roemer Hall for the present President; and Sibley Hall for the founders, Maj. and Mrs. George C. Sibley. There is also Eastlick, a smaller hall for resident teachers, named for a niece of the Butlers.

Lindenwood has started its 101st year with a full roster of students, the range of whose homes is widely extended over the United States, and even into Canada. Progress of the "activities" is marked by the recent admission of three Lindenwood clubs, for dramatics, home economics and French respectively, into national affiliation, one becoming a chapter of Alpha Psi Omega, another a chapter of the American Home Economics Association, and the third, a chapter of Beta Pi Theta, the national honorary French Society.

Lindenwood Students Choose Their Own Government Council

Miss Virginia Sue Campbell, Bowling Green, Heads Body.

Lindenwood College has been advancing in student government until the entire council is chosen this year by popular vote. Other officers of the senior class are Misses Ruth Foster of Ironton, Ohio; Bernice Edwards, Joplin, Mo., and Frances Stumberg of St. Charles.

It has been found in past years that almost all except very tangled cases of discipline can be fairly settled through the ramifications of the Student Board. It is thoroughly organized under the president, the council consisting of Misses Marjorie Bright of Wichita Falls, Tex., vice president; Katherine Palmer of Clayton, secretary-treasurer; with members from different dormitories as follows: Butler, Helen Rudolph; Ayres, Ruth Vance; Sibley, Mary Elizabeth Sawtell; Irwin, Marlon Gibson; Niccolls, Helen Deuser.

Y. W. C. A. Head Member.

The president of the college Y. W. C. A., Miss Kathryn Walker of Aurora, Mo., is an ex officio member of the council.

There is also a co-operating house of representatives, over which the vice president, Miss Majorie Bright, presides. These, elected on the basis of two from each hall, are Misses Hortense Bass, Jane Everett, Brookes Ann Cole, Louise Conger, Mary Kelly, Ruth Kelsey, Virginia McClure, Winifred Nessley, Garnette Thompson and Betty Foster.

In Lindenwood's junior class Miss Ruth Bullion of Little Rock, Ark., has the honor of continuing as president from the presidency of the sophomore class.

Kansas Girl Heads Sophomores.

For the sophomores Miss Ruth Lindsay Hughes of Kansas City is president, and for the freshmen, Miss Jean Murdock of St. Louis. A young student from Canada, who enters as a sophomore from Vancouver schools is listed with Western girls in an entirely new Rocky Mountain club, of which Miss Marie McCafferty of Butte, Mont., is president.

For Missouri, the largest club, Miss Katherine Perry, Moberly, is president. Miss Josephine Bowman heads the Indiana club; Miss Virginia Morris, Texas; Miss Alice Buffett, Nebraska; Miss Helen Rudolph, Iowa; Miss Mary Alice Lange, Kansas; Miss Adeline Brubaker, Illinois; Miss Ruth Bullion, Arkansas, and Miss Daphne Boop, Oklahoma. There is also a Dixie club, headed by Miss Ethie Bloomenstiel of Louisiana.

FOUNDERS' DAY TO BE OBSERVED OCT. 21
AT LINDENWOOD COLLEGE

Ayres Hall To Be Dedicated on That Day—Many Improvements Added to Jubilee Hall of 25 Years Ago

Founders' Day, annually celebrated in October at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo., will be the occasion, on October 21 of this year, for dedicating Ayres Hall. This is a new dormitory, remodeled from Lindenwood's Jubilee Hall of 25 years ago. It accommodates 80 out of the 500 Lindenwood women students and contains also the commissary department.

One of the largest ice-making plants in this part of the country, capable of freezing 1,000 pounds of ice at one time and freezing in ordinary use 500 pounds, is installed as part of the kitchen equipment of Ayres Hall. A ventilating system for the dining-room, a new lighting system and new furnishings are among the things added, together with new decorations, and the multiplicity of baths everywhere which the modern college girl demands. The hall's architectural improvements include an ornate glass canopy over a new entrance.

Ayres Hall is to be named in honor of the late Dr. George Frederick Ayres, a Presbyterian clergyman who was president of Lindenwood College from 1903 to 1913, his term of office being ended by his death. Several hundred students attended Lindenwood during Dr. Ayres' administration, and it is particularly at the request of "the Ayres Girls" that the new name has been adopted. The honor is also appropriately bestowed, because the old Jubilee Hall, from which this is re-modeled, was erected and dedicated as the first important act in Dr. Ayres' presidency, at which time he was instrumental in interesting Andrew Carnegie and others in Lindenwood. "Jubilee" at that time indicated Lindenwood's 75th anniversary, which has since been eclipsed by Lindenwood's 100th anniversary, in the celebration of which Centennial President John Lincoln Roemer and his wife were host and hostess, the last four days of last May.

Those who were students under Dr. Ayres have contributed a memorial bust for the new building. Dr. Ayres' widow, who resides in Washington, D. C., is expected for the ceremonies, which will occur at 10 o'clock on the morning of October 21.

The Lindenwood Hymn will be sung, and the students will march in procession to Ayres Hall, led by the faculty, the Board of Directors, and the vested choir. This new name will be latest in a considerable roster of memorial buildings, Butler Hall for the late James Gay Butler; Margaret Hall for his wife; Niccolls Hall for the late Dr. Samuel Jack Niccolls; Irwin Hall for the late Dr. Robert Irwin; Roemer Hall for the present President; and Sibley Hall for the founders, Maj. and Mrs. George C. Sibley. There is also Eastlick, a smaller hall for resident teachers, named for a niece of the Butlers.

Lindenwood has started its 101st year with a full roster of students, the range of whose homes is widely extended over the United States, and even into Canada. Progress of the "activities" is marked by the recent admission of three Lindenwood clubs, for dramatics, home economics and French respectively, into national affiliation, one becoming a chapter of Alpha Psi Omega, another a chapter of the American Home Economics Association, and the third, a chapter of Beta Pi Theta, the national honorary French Society.

Lindenwood College Dedicates Rebuilt Ayres Hall Friday

Ceremonies at Remodeled Building to Feature Founder's Day.

Many St. Louis friends of Lindenwood College, at St. Charles, will attend the annual Founders' Day exercises Friday morning at 10 o'clock, which this year are to include the dedication of the remodeled Ayres Hall, formerly Jubilee Hall. Included in the guests will be 100 members of the St. Louis Lindenwood College Club, who are to be entertained at luncheon by Dr. and Mrs. John Lincoln Roemer.

Ayres Hall is renamed in honor of the late Dr. George Frederick Ayres, president of the college from 1903 to 1913. The structure, now modernized, was originally erected at the beginning of his term of office as a commemorative building for gifts made on the seventy-fifth anniversary or "jubilee" year of Lindenwood. Among those then contributing were Andrew Carnegie, James Gay Butler, John A. Holmes and Mrs. William M. McMillan.

Now Houses Eighty Students.

The building is a three-story dormitory, occupied by eighty sophomores. Its third-floor rooms have been improved by new windows, and a number of new bathrooms are added. An elaborate glass canopy is added over the main entrance and the entire building has been redecorated and refurnished. The new art decorations are enhanced by the gift of a bust of Dr. Ayres, the funds for which were raised by gifts

The lower floor of Ayres Hall is used for the community dining room, the kitchens and pantry storage rooms of the college. One of the chief improvements is an ice-making machine which manufactures 500 pounds of ice daily and which is capable, when needed, of manufacturing 1000 pounds of ice a day. A new ventilating system for the dining room has also been installed.

Board of Directors to Be Present.

The members of the Board of Directors, of whom Rev. Dr. John W. MacIvor, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, is president, will be present in a body at the dedication. Dr. John Lincoln Roemer, president of the college, will make a historic address, recalling incidents in the life of Dr. Ayres, who was his immediate predecessor. It is expected that Mrs. Ayres of Washington, D. C., will be among the guests.

In the completion of Ayres Hall, a chain of associations is fulfilled, naming Lindenwood's buildings for outstanding benefactors. In the list stands Butler Hall, named for Col. James Gay Butler, who gave about $4,000,000 to the college; Margaret Hall, for Mrs. Butler; Niccolls Hall, named for Dr. Samuel J. Niccolls, long the head of the Board of Directors; Irwin Hall, for a former president, Dr. Robert Irwin; Eastlick, for a niece of the Butlers; Sibley, for the venerable founders of 100 years ago, Maj. and Mrs. George C. Sibley, and the administration building, which the students petitioned to be named in honor of the living president, Roemer Hall.

PASTOR MAKES PLEA FOR KNOWLEDGE OF PAST

Rev. Dr. Arthur J. McClung, pastor of Calvary Presbyterian Church of Springfield, Mo., showed himself a reader of the "Ask-Me-Another" column in the newspaper when speaking to the students of Lindenwood College yesterday he said:

"What is education? Is it being able to pass the intelligence test raised in the question-and-answer columns of the newspaper?"

Dr. McClung defined education as being "able to think clearly, analytically and constructively." An illustration was the case of the automobile mechanic, who pulls out bolts and wheels, but is able to put the back again.

"In this age," he said, "we are prone to tear the past all to pieces. We shouldn't do this, unless we are able to put it together again. We must base a great deal of our knowledge on the past."

CYRIL CLEMENS SEPAKS ON "AMERICAN SHORT STORY" AT ST. CHARLES

Cousin of Mark Twain, Who Resides in Kirkwood, Delivers Address at Linden-wood College.

Cyril Clemens of Kirkwood spoke on the "American Short Story," at the 11 o'clock assembly at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, last Thursday. In introducing him, Dr. John L. Roemer said that he considered Mr. Clemens the best-versed literary man in the State. He is a cousin of Mark Twain.

The short story has had a beginning, a growth and an organization. The story itself must be brief, have a readable style, and lead to a definite climax. In giving the history of the American short story, Mr. Clemens briefly told of different authors and their works in every part of the country.

In England, in 1819, Washington Irving wrote the "Sketch Book." The so-called no-account Irving noted the differences between the English and Americans, and his inspired results are: "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," and "Rip Van Winkle."

In New England there was Nathaniel Hawthorne, a strange youth of a queer family, all dwelling in the same house but seeing little of each other. In this solitude, he had time to think about his "Snow Image," a simple story of human faith which really amounts to little faith after all. Hawthorne combines real truth with art in his stories.

Edward Everett Hale was also a New Englander, and the author of "The Man Without a Country." His story, "My Double and How He Outdid Me," is humorously interesting—of a minister who becomes bored in his duties and hires another to take his place at banquets and receptions.

T. B. Aldrich started his career with journalism, excelling with work on the "Atlantic Monthly." His best short story is "Marjorie Daw." Not until the end does one know that there is no such person as Marjorie Daw. This peculiar twist is characteristic of all of Aldrich's stories.

George Cable came to New Orleans from New York, and began work on the staff of a New Orleans paper. He became interested in southern customs and wrote "Old Creole Days." Another southerner was Edgar Allan Poe. He had a hard time making ends meet, and had many disappointments, but throughout his humorous and pathetic life, Poe stuck to his writing. He wrote the first real detective stories, and one may contrast his with those of Sherlock Holmes. They are: "The Murder in Rue-Morgue," "The Black Cat," "The Fall of the House of Usher." Poe makes the most of the little interests of life, taking us into his confidence with a style that fascinates us.

Bret Harte went to the Golden West during the time of the pony express and found much hardship. He was a lover of Dickens and his book, "Luck of Roaring Camp," was read by Dickens, who was pleased that some one in America had imitated his style.

In closing, Mr. Clemens spoke of O. Brian, of O. Henry, and of modern authors, Edith Wharton and Edna Ferber. He urged that we should think of writing ourselves, and not to give up, for Booth Tarkington received only $22 for five years' work, and that Edna Ferber's novel became a "best seller."

DEDICATION OF REMODELED DORMITORY AT LINDENWOOD

Structure Named in Honor of Late President of the College, Dr.
George F. Ayres.

Ayres Hall, a dormitory and dining hall of Lindenwood College, which has been remodeled, was dedicated yesterday with the entire faculty and student body participating. The building, which had been known as Jubilee Hall, was named in honor of the late Dr. George Frederick Ayres, who served as president of the college from 1903 to 1913.

Speakers who were familiar with Dr. Ayres' achievements during his presidency, told of the college's rundown condition at the time he took it over and how, with only 35 or 40 students at that time, he built up attendance to several times that number. Dr. Ayres' widow recently was appointed an instructor at the college by Dr. John Lincoln Roemer, who now is president. She attended yesterday's ceremonies, for which a half holiday had been declared.

Lindenwood College Girls Interviewed by Faculty Members

Freshmen Advised to Direct Selves According to Interests.

Personal conferences of 250 freshmen at Lindenwood College with the dean and other members of the faculty ended this week. The purpose has been so to direct the freshman's energies in college as to make her studies most helpful to her, on the basis of her own tendencies and inclinations.

A precollege record has been taken in these interviews, which goes much farther than the customary "age, birth, name of parent or guardian, religious preference," and so on. In this record, twenty-three branches of study are singled out as indicative of aptitudes. Each freshman is asked to name three out of the twenty-three which she liked most in high school. These selected studies are algebra, biology, botany, chemistry, commercial subjects, English composition and literature, French, German, geometry, general mathematics, general science, Greek, history, industrial arts, mechanical drawing, music, painting, physics, physiology, social sciences, Spanish and zoology. When three outstanding preferences are named in this group, there is somewhat of an index to a student's line of thought.

Activities Recognized.

"Activities" are likewise recognized as a not inconsiderable part in a student's life, and preferences here will be another guidepost. Each freshman has been asked to tell whether she took part in high school athletics, dramatics, debates, music, the school newspaper, or any other voluntary work. If she held any office in a student organization in high school, that also is recorded as being a sign of something, perhaps of her ability to make friends or to be a good executive.

"Indicate your chief interest while in high school," the freshman has also been asked in these records. Six searching questions were asked:

"Why did you come to college?"

"State the college subjects you expect to be most interested in."

"Do you plan to be graduated from college?"

"Are you partially dependent on your own earnings?"

Life Work Determined.

"What occupation or profession do you plan to take up as your life work?"

"What types of work have you done to earn money before coming to college?"

Assurance has of course been given to each freshman that her answers will be kept secret. In this way the test can be authentic, and the student can speak freely.

Another arrangement new this year at Lindenwood is a required course of lectures for freshmen on "Civilization." This is given by Miss Florence Schaper, professor of sociology, and gives the new college student a general view of conditions of human life.

Lindenwood College Dedicates Building to Honor Dr. Ayres

Former President Praised as Pioneer Educator for Women.

Lindenwood College declared a half holiday yesterday for the dedication of Ayres Hall, a dormitory and dining hall formerly known as Jubilee, which has been remodeled. A program was given in Roemer Auditorium, including the presentation by alumnae of a portrait of the late Dr. George Frederick Ayres, for whom the building is named. At night there was a reception, with the Ayres residents as hostesses.

A feature of the day was the presence of Mrs. George Frederick Ayres of Washington, D. C. Dr. John Lincoln Roemer announced that the Lindenwood Board of Directors had recently appointed Mrs. Ayres an honorary member of Lindenwood's faculty, with a substantial monthly stipend, in recognition of the service and sacrifice of her late husband, who was president from 1903 to 1913. The indebtedness of the college to the late Mrs. Laura Herron, Mrs. Ayres' mother, who was lady principal, was expressed.

Roemer Praises Ayres.

Dr. John W. MacIvor, president of the Board of Directors and pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, gave the invocation. A prayer of dedication on Ayres Hall steps was offered by Dr. George Wales King of Markham Presbyterian Church, an old friend of Dr. Ayres.

Dr. Roemer, opening the program, spoke briefly of benefactors through the college's 100 years. Dr. Ayres, he said, was "the pioneer leading the State of Missouri to recognize higher standards of education for women." He told of Dr. Ayres' insistence upon proper accrediting for junior colleges, and "because of the foundation he laid, Lindenwood has been able to become a four-year college."

Dr. James T. Quarles, dean of the School of Fine Arts of the University of Missouri, who was a member of Dr. Ayres' faculty, spoke with admiration of the latter's courage. He had taken the institution in 1903, Dr. Quarles said, when there were only thirty-five or forty students.

"The buildings were in disrepair," he said, "and the college seemed to be on its last legs. But Dr. Ayres brought order out of chaos, and was the father of the Missouri Junior College Union."

Mrs. W. C. Stewart, giving "Reminiscences," told of school days at Lindenwood in 1905-06, when there was only a forty-five minute ferry across the Missouri River at St. Charles, and an old hack to the ferry station. "It was before the eighteenth amendment, and we were never quite sure of our driver." She described among old landmarks of Lindenwood "Tillie the cook, with a colored turban."

Mrs. J. W. White of the class of 1914, presented the portrait, which was accepted by Dr. Roemer. The Lindenwood choir sat in white vestments on the platform and sang an anthem and the "Lindenwood Hymn," under the direction of Miss Cora N. Edwards. Miss Grace Terhune sang a solo, with Miss Louise C. Titcomb as accompanist.

'MARYS' AND 'ELIZABETHS' LEAD AT LINDENWOOD

From the student roster of Lindenwood College a student has recently compiled a chart showing the most popular names. It is found that among given names the "Marys" and "Elizabeths" run a close race. It is difficult to determine which is more popular because the two names are so often linked together in one. Next in line stand the "Margarets" and all the variations of that name. "Helen," which was one year the most popular name at Lindenwood, now draws up to fourth place.

Next comes "Dorothy," also at one year's enrollment in the past at the head of the list. Then comes "Kathryn" in its different changes, followed by the "Marions" and "Ruths" about evenly matched.

The most popular surname seems to be "Smith." Five are registered by that name. "Lewis" and "Brown" tie for second place, each with four girls in their "families." There are three representatives each of the Barnes, Miller, Moore, Palmer and Thompson families.

Dr. Roemer Preaches at Chillicothe, Ohio, Church Anniversary

Lindenwood College Head Presides at Presby- terian Ceremonies.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE GLOBE-DEMOCRAT.
CHILLICOTHE, OHIO, November 6.—Dr. John L. Roemer, president of Lindenwood College of St. Charles, Mo., preached in Chillicothe this morning at the 130th anniversary ceremonies of the First Presbyterian Church. Dr. Roemer was pastor of this church from 1901 to 1905, before going to St. Louis to become pastor there of the Tyler Place Presbyterian Church.

The First Presbyterian of Chillicothe is one of the oldest and most historic churches of Southern Ohio. President Wilson's grandfather, Rev. Joseph Wilson, was pastor in the church's pioneer days. Members of both the Woodrow and the Wilson families have been members through many years.

Dr. and Mrs. Roemer are guests at the home of Misses Nellie and Virginia Wayland. Monday night at the church will be devoted to a program of "Reminiscences," at which Dr. Roemer will speak. The pastor is Rev. Piny Brokaw Ferris.

Text of Sermon.

Dr. Roemer's sermon theme this morning was, "First the Kingdom of God," a text from the words of Jesus in Matthew 6, 35. He drew a vivid picture of the church militant.

"The church," said Dr. Roemer, "is only you and me in individual and corporate form. A church is only as strong as its separate members. They make it. They interpret it to the world."

"The work of Jesus is incomplete. Each generation of mortals only makes a contribution. The span of mortal life only gave Jesus the opportunity of pioneering. When he left his work for the cross, his disciples were to 'carry on.' Our business as a church is doing our bit in our day and generation."

Creeds Not Salient.

"Men take little heed of printed creeds, but pay every reverence and respect to practiced creeds. The church owes the world Christ's idea that man is a child of God, that man is not to be treated in terms of money, and that by precept and example the world shall know the church's definition in actual practice."

"Jesus never put the fact of sin to a popular vote. He never laid down petty rules of conduct. Man was to live the life of the father, and have the liberty wherewith Christ had made him free."

"The church owes the world a clear-cut interpretation of sin. It has nothing to fear in strict conformity to the will of God. It has everything to lose in failure to make its determined stand for righteousness. Salvation is more than a conversation about holy living."

LINDENWOOD COLLEGE

Music and Drama Editor Says Small Stages Are Too Freely Used.

Richard Spamer, music and drama editor of the GLOBE-DEMOCRAT, addressed the students of Lindenwood College yesterday on "Recent Music and Drama." He traversed the offerings he saw and heard in his vacation visit to New York last summer and concluded with his observations on the progress of musical matters in St. Louis as exemplified in the renewed public interest in the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra.

Spamer declared he saw and heard everything worth while in New York and that in many instances, notably "Rio Rita" and "The Desert Song," these ornate musical shows were produced on stages too small for their adequate representation. The art of the theater, he said, is thereby made to suffer and neither the composer, stage decorator, nor the interpreters are enabled to give the works their true artistic value.

What struck him as ludicrous in the leading movie theater was the employment of a magnificent three-consoled concert organ on which three capable organists had to play raucous jazz instead of using this superb instrument for the presentation of real music.

Nearly all of the plays offered in St. Louis since the beginning of the present season were briefly discussed and he answered questions put to him by the class. He went into some detail in regard to "The Cradle Song," now playing at the American, and commended the story and the fine restraint of the visiting company in its enactment.

The concert by the Dayton Westminster Choir came in for much favorable comment and, as being along the same line, several minutes were spent in outlining the next big musical event in St. Louis, the production of William Dodd Cheney's version of Mendelssohn's oratorio, "Elijah," soon to be given in music-drama form at the Coliseum.

The most elaborate social event at Lindenwood College this season was the party given in honor of Mrs. John L. Roemer's birthday, Friday night, given by the freshman class. Mrs. Roemer was seated upon a dais improvised in rose and silver, where she received congratulations and witnessed a play specially written for her. It was entitled, "An Old-Fashioned Bouquet," and was written by Miss Jane White, a freshman. Eighty-five freshmen took part.

Decorations of the hall were skillfully made by the 226 freshmen, so that shaded rose tissue paper relieved by silver, covered the walls and ceiling, with wall-baskets flutings and rosettes. A dinner of five courses, with 100 additional guests besides the student body, preceded the dance. Miss Jean Murdock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Murdock of 6923 Pershing avenue, presided at the party as president of the freshman class, and led the grand march with Mrs. Roemer, while Dr. Roemer escorted the class sponsor, Miss Katherine Hankins of Webster Groves, who is the faculty head of Lindenwood's classical language department.

Ten department heads in the faculty of Lindenwood College have inaugurated a system of lectures to freshmen, by which on Thursday afternoons, from 2 to 3 o'clock, each teacher is presenting some vocation toward which any of the freshmen students may desire to turn. This vocational course has been based on the results of inquiry as to these new freshmen's preferences.

Somewhat to the surprise of those who think that the modern generation does not wish to become teachers, it was found at Lindenwood, by personal conferences of Dean Alice E. Gipson and Miss Florence Shaper, sociology, with the students, that 84 out of the 226 freshmen desire to follow the teaching profession.

Twenty freshmen wish to become artists and twenty to be journalists. Business has a lure to eighteen freshmen and home economics to thirteen. Dramatics as a vocation retains ten girls and twelve wish to train for library work. There are five who want to become social service workers. Five have particular scientific interests, two of the number definitely desiring surgery as a calling, while there is one each for psychiatry, biology and research.

While the ethics of young people are more or less subjects of horror among some of their elders (perhaps a little bored by the staidness of their own set), there are two colleges quite near St. Louis, each one filled with girls in the late teens or early twenties, the members of which have set forth a code for themselves really quite "Victorian." First of these came Webster College, where the girls' chaplain, Father Donovan, suggested an program for their name, the qualities of the Webster College girl being "womanly, esteemed, buoyant, studious, thinking, enthusiastic, religious." The girls thought so much of it that they had it published. Then Lindenwood College took it up. The girls themselves canvassed for a symposium of opinion, and they found they could make an anagram generally approve to the effect that the qualities of the Lindenwood College girl are "loyal, industrious, noble of character, devoted to her school, enthusiastic, natural, womanly, obedient, obliging, determined." Mayor Thompson in his attacks on higher education might observe that no one of the seventeen qualities named in these two four-year colleges is either dangerous or abnormal.

King Herod's Words Theme of Sermon by Dr. R. C. Dobson

Conscience, Memory and Responsibility Grouped as Ineffaceable.

"Conscience, memory and responsibility" were grouped as "ineffaceable things of the soul" last night by Rev. Dr. R. Calvin Dobson, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, in a vesper sermon before the students of Lindenwood College, in Roemer Auditorium. His text was the expression of King Herod, in Mark 6, 16, "It is John the Baptist whom I beheaded. He is risen from the dead."

Although King Herod, the speaker said, was "a Sadducee and did not believe in the resurrection or immortality," yet he was frightened at his feasting. His conscience condemned him, as he thought he saw the specter of John the Baptist whom he had beheaded.

"Conscience Ineffaceable."

"Conscience is ineffaceable," said Dr. Dobson. "It is the sense of oughtness and duty in the soul. The Greeks called it 'the whisperings of God in the corridors of man's soul.' 'Conscience caused an English judge, who was to pass sentence on a youth who was guilty of murder, to put off his judicial robes and step down into the prisoner's box and make confession that he, too, in his youth, had been guilty of the same crime. He had sought in every possible way to expiate this crime, but conscience gave him no peace.

"So long as God is God, and man is man, right will be right and wrong will be wrong, and every offender must say with Macbeth: 'My conscience has a thousand tongues, and every tongue has its several tales, and every tale condemns me as a villain.'

"Memory Is Faculty of Soul."

"Memory is an ineffaceable faculty of the soul. Herod thought by busying himself he could forget the death of John the Baptist. But such was not possible. Psychologists tell us, nothing is ever forgotten. Things that we call forgotten need only the appropriate event to recall them to mind." The story was told of the desert traveler who killed and buried a diamond merchant, keeping his crime a secret except that two huge birds circled over his head. Years afterward in the open stadium, witnessing the athletic contests, when two large birds flew over his head, he exclaimed, "The cranes of Iddarus," and thus his crime was revealed.

Possibility of Punishment.

"Ineffaceable, too, is the sense of responsibility. For a good man, it is a wonderful thought that he is made in the image of God, but for an evil man it is a dreadful reality. It means that he carries about with him the possibility of punishment and the machinery of retribution. Every night, judgment ascends her throne, memory calls her witnesses, and conscience produces her evidence. Daniel Webster said that the greatest thought he ever entertained was the thought of his personal responsibility to God. Charles IX. of France, who had instigated the massacre of the Huguenots, said, in dying:

"I see the mangled forms of the Huguenots. They make hideous faces at me. O, that I had spared at least the little infants."

"But it is a blessed fact also that our good deeds do not die with years, and some day this beautiful book of memory will be opened, and conscience will commend the doer, and the judgment will be one of eternal blessedness."

Gospel of Health Is Creed of Christ, Healing Pastor Says

Rev. Robert B. H. Bell of Denver Opens Help Mission Here.

The gospel of Jesus Christ is the gospel of health, nothing more, declared Rev. Robert B. H. Bell, rector of St. Thomas' Church, Denver, in his opening sermon of the "Mission of Healing and Help" last night at the Episcopal Church of the Ascension, Cates and Goodfellow avenues.

"The church has need to take this gospel, which is Christ's gospel, as the only thing Christ came to do was to teach men how to live on earth in perfect health, in perfect prosperity, in perfect happiness," he said. "I came to give you life, and that more abundantly," were his words. Christ did not say, 'I came to give you spiritual life,' but 'I came to give you body life, and that more abundantly.'

Procession of Saints.

"History is indelibly marked, from the Bible days to 1927, with healing by prayer and anointing with oil, proving what our Lord said was true, 'Lay your hands on the sick and they shall recover; go ye, in my name.' There has been a whole procession of saints from the time of Jesus Christ to this very age who have believed that Jesus of Nazareth meant what he said.

"Reading the church fathers, we find St. Bernard keenly possessed of the idea that the Gospel of Jesus Christ involved the healing of the body; so he preached healing, laid his hands on the sick, anointed with oil, and multitudes flocked to him for his ministrations. Multitudes came from everywhere to be helped by the beneficent hands of St. Francis of Assisi. People came from England, Ireland, Scotland and from all parts of the world to kneel at the little altar where St. Catherine of Siena knelt to receive her blessings, that they might be healed. We find that Martin Luther believed in the healing grace and power of his God and he practiced it through his life. George Fox, the founder of the Quakers, and John Wesley practiced healing by faith and prayer.

Many Go to Altar Rail.

"Jesus came to tell us how to live the life abundant. Let us get in the habit of regarding him as the champion of a better body life."

Following the sermon, the altar rail of the church was filled with men and women seeking the laying on of hands, which was administered by Rev. Bell and Rev. John S. Bunting, rector of the church.

The afternoon sessions of the mission, held at 2 o'clock, are in the nature of instructions in right living and deal particularly with the right and wrong use of foods. Dr. Bell will preach tonight at 8 o'clock and the Lindenwood College Quartet will sing.

Rev. L. V. Buschman Preaches Sermon at Lindenwood College

Thanksgiving Custom Older Than Puritans, Says Pastor.

Rev. L. V. Buschman, pastor of the Tyler Place Presbyterian Church, was the Thanksgiving preacher at Lindenwood College, at services in Roemer Auditorium yesterday morning. He said:

"The custom of setting aside one day a year as a special day of thanksgiving did not originate with our Puritan forefathers. Many of the ancient peoples observed a day in which they gave their offerings to their deities for any especial blessings which they felt they had enjoyed during the past year. The Romans observed their "Cereris," in which they offered gifts to Ceres, the goddess of the harvest.

Indians Invited.

"It is not strange, therefore, that our forefathers, after a long, bitter winter followed by a bountiful harvest, should have held a day of thanksgiving. Some of the friendly Indians were invited to share the feast with the early settlers. Hunters went into the forests and brought back deer and turkey. Thrifty housewives made savory puddings and pies. And ever since that time has been both a day of feasting and a day of prayer.

"When we compare their blessings with the prosperity of America today we ought to be infinitely more grateful than they were. Every traveler who comes back to our shores from wandering on some foreign strand is thankful that he is living in these our United States. If the sun of prosperity ever shone on any nation it is shining on us today. We have one-third of the world's wealth, one-half of the world's supply of gold, one-third of the railroads of the world are in this country, 85 per cent of the automobiles of the world are in this country. We are less dependent upon other countries than any other nation. And so if our forefathers had just cause for setting aside a special day of thanksgiving, we have even greater cause for doing so.

Day of Thanksgiving.

"But how shall we thank God for these blessings? Will he be content with a formal lip service? Is the conventional presidential proclamation sufficient evidence of our gratitude? Shall we bring an offering unto him? Micah answered that question long ago. The best way of showing our appreciation is by doing his will. "What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?" The best way to make this a day of thanksgiving is to make it a day thanks-living."

Lindenwood College Club To Unveil Memorial Tablet

The St. Louis Lindenwood College Club will visit Lindenwood College Tuesday for the unveiling of a bronze memorial tablet in honor of the late Dr. Robert Irwin, who was president of the college from 1880 to 1893. Dr. and Mrs. John L. It commemorates Mrs. Irwin's work as well as that of her husband.

The movement for such a remembrance began at the centennial homecoming at Lindenwood last May, when the 75 or more former students who had attended from 1880 to 1893 expressed their desire to erect such a memorial. Contributions have come from all parts of the country, the alumnae of Lindenwood being represented in all states of the union save five. Mrs. Chauncey Lick, of Ft. ### An Essay by Miss White

Miss Jane White, daughter of Mrs. I. H. White, of Oak street, is being recognized at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo., as a talented young writer. An essay of hers, adjudged highly by the head of Lindenwood's English department, has been printed in a recent literary supplement of the campus paper, Linden Bark, with the title, "The Advantages of College Society." Miss White is pursuing the course leading to journalism at Lindenwood, where she is a freshman.

Her production in Linden Bark Literary Supplement follows:

THE ADVANTAGES OF COLLEGE SOCIETY

By Jane White

Society (with a large "S") is a much-maligned institution in the college or university on the grounds that it, and not culture, is the chief purpose in the mind of the boy or girl who goes to college. But, speaking from the point of view of a mere undergraduate who likes sociability (with a small "s"), it is my most ardent hope that the social side of my education will not be neglected while I am in college.

One's ability to "mix" is becoming an all-important factor in the most prosaic of lives today. The person who stays on the top, or the bottom, of the crowd and cannot mingle with it wholly is rather completely "out of it." So the desire to make oneself attractive and pleasing to society is at once the most selfish and unselfish of motives.

Here is a argument for the small girls' college. It is the best place in the world, outside the home, to learn a few of the niceties of social convention. Every girl can profit from the absorption of some good, old-fashioned etiquette be it in ever-so-slight a degree. If a student, incapable of assimilating anything else, does acquire that, she cannot say that that her four years in college were wasted even if it was an expensive way of getting it. One is always hearing of this girl or that whose college education may be summed up in the words, "She learned a new way to make fudge, acquired a New York accent, and the ability to dance a good tango." What of it? The girl who got that out of college will probably never need anything else. If she did, she would certainly have seen to getting it. The cultural side of college is for certain ones and there are others for whom it was never intended.

Somewhat broader and less individualistic are the larger functions of a coeducational university. Yet, they are to the smaller college functions what the laboratory is to the lecture room of a chemistry course. There one may practice most freely what one has learned in the way of social conduct. It affords actual experience in the society of many different kinds of people. And who shall say that a study of human beings is not, in the highest degree, worthwhile? To people, their fellow beings are the most interesting things in the world. There is scarcely any limit to the things we may learn from association with different types. And "he who loves his fellow man loves the Lord."

Which brings us the consideration of something of a more ethical nature. Living in a big college family teaches the philosophy of "give and take" that will always be of value to the individual. The spoiled "only child" gets a taste of one's lessons, that is, what it means to give up to someone else once in a while. He also learns that the one gives the more one is likely to be permitted to take. After all, living with an eye to the feelings of others is "the most enlightened selfishness in the world."

Miss Helen Frances Weber Writes on the Art of Living

Miss Helen Francis Weber of Kirkwood, who is a freshman at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo., has had an article published in the literary supplement of the Linden Bark, the campus news-weekly. The literary supplement is issued once a month and the articles are selected for their literary merit, by the teachers of the English department. Miss Weber's article is as follows:

"What joy is greater than that of knowing how to live a happy, serviceable life? I would much rather be poor as a church mouse but able to enjoy a beautiful sunset than be rich in things of this world but utterly lacking in that sense of joy in the simplest phenomena of life. Having money without culture is like eating bread without seasoning. Unleavened bread fills the cavity but does not satisfy the palate; money supplies the necessities of life but it cannot fill that longing for the appreciation of the finer, more worth while things of life. Only when I have acquired that art of living which will make my life pleasing to myself and, because of my service, necessary to my fellowmen, will I have gained true happiness, because college fits the individual for happiness, success and leadership; because college trains the mind to think clearly, and to discern the truth; because college trains the individual not merely how to make a living, but how to live, because of these convictions have I taken advantage of a college training."

Members of different Lindenwood College clubs in different cities participated Wednesday in ceremonies commemorating the placing of a memorial tablet in Irwin Hall, at Lindenwood. The tablet, which is of bronze, bears the name of Dr. Robert Irwin, president of the college from 1880 to 1893, and of his wife. The latter, who was a great lover of flowers, was also remembered with a large basket of yellow and white flowers, Lindenwood's colors, which stood beneath the tablet. The presentation was by little Stanley Warren Koenig, whose mother before her marriage was Miss Dorothy McClusky, a Lindenwood graduate and a granddaughter of Dr. and Mrs. Irwin. Her father, Dr. E. W. McClusky, and her mother, who was formerly Miss Sarah Irwin, were both present, the former making an informal talk, as did Mrs. George W. Sutherland of Webster Groves, and Miss Alice Linnemann, head of the art department. Dr. John L. Roemer, the president, received the gift and he and Mrs. Roemer entertained the "Irwin Girls" at luncheon. Many letters were read from former students who had attended while the Irwins were at Lindenwood. Mrs. Chauncey Lick of Fort Smith, Ark., was chairman of the Tablet Committee, the movement for the memorial having started last summer at Lindenwood's centennial.

INTERESTING PHILOSOPHY BY A McPHERSON STUDENT

Miss Joan Lytle of McPherson who is a student at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Missouri, has had an article on "Ideas of College Education; published in the literary supplement of the Linden Bark, the campus news weekly. The literary supplement is issued once a month and the articles are selected by the teachers of the English department for their literary merit. Miss Lytle's article is as follows:

James Phinney Munroe said, "A person does not come to college to earn a living; he comes to learn to live." What could more completely express the real purpose of a college education. It is not the gold that we can accumulate but what we are that counts. We concede, at once, that financial success is subordinate to a happy spiritual life and the finding of one's place in the world; yet we entirely overlook this when we criticize the college of today for not making a second Mr. Rockefeller out of a man who by nature is an Aristotle. Anyone, who understands the human race can not fairly ask the college to transform all the students that enter it into successful business men. Furthermore, that is not even what the school is attempting. An education does, however, teach a man to think and this, in turn, helps him to succeed in the business world. Consider for a moment the hours spent outside of the office. Are they not usually more important, anyway? A man's mind is not blank, surely, when he is alone. Of what then is he thinking? If he is interested in literature he will read, or perhaps, write a liddle, for his own amusement; if science appeals to him he may continue his study in it; or if psycholo-

in it; or if psychology is his hobby, he has human society for his laboratory, an immense field for experimentation. Since education teaches one to take pleasure in these things, we may say that it is in college that one really learns how to live.

AT LINDENWOOD

Miss Vashti Poague who is attending Lindenwood College, at St. Charles, Missouri, as a Freshman this year, was the author of the following article appearing in the literary supplement of the Linden Park, a weekly newspaper published by the Journalism Department of the college. The literary supplement is included once a month in the Bark and is composed of any articles which the English teachers have selected from the viewpoint of originality of style and thought. Miss Poague's contribution was made as one of the opinions required of each Freshman concerning her idea of a college education, and is the following.

Mr. James Phinney Munroe, a member of the Corporation of the Massachusetts institute of Technology, says that one "does not come to college to earn a living; he comes to college to learn to live." A college education enables one to live his hours of leisure in cultural enjoyment. He learns to recognize the pleasures in life which are worth while. A college education develops his appreciation of ideals and teaches him "to distinguish the genuine from the counterfeit in the fields of art and literature." He obtains a liberal culture from which he develops a working philosophy of living. He gains a clear understanding of himself and finds his relation to the world. In learning of the past he understands to some small degree the present. He realizes that his life is a continuation of all the history that goes before and that every discovery of science affects him. There is not a doubt in anyone's mind that college does help one get his own mental grip on reality. A college student is given an index to individuality, morality, and culture and what use he makes of that index or failure. A college student cannot fail to grasp these qualities and to summarize the value of a college education in these words, "I have begun to live."

DES MOINES SUNDAY REGISTER—DEC. 18, 1927.

Miss Betty Howland, 412 Fifty-first street, who is home from Lindenwood college, recently was elected president of the "Doctors' Daughters," daughters of physicians only being eligible to membership in this club.

The movement to "join" was started last year by "Children of the Manse," embracing about a dozen girls who are clergymen's daughters at Lindenwood. This fall there are "Doctors' Daughters" and "Bankers' Daughters," each with its own claim on special fun, provided the end-of-the-term examinations do not dampen the social zeal of the joiners.

Miss Howland and the other Des Moines girls at Lindenwood, among whom is Miss Harriet Liddle, editor of Linden Leaves, the college annual, and Miss Clarice Howland, have returned for the holidays.

Lindenwood in First Place.
Centennial year seniors who graduated at Lindenwood College last May have an echo of glory in an award just announced by the Art Crafts Guild of Chicago for the Lindenwood annual of 1927. This volume, "Linden Leaves," has gained first place in the colleges of the country for the excellence of its workmanship. It was designed to be an annual of unusual merit, befitting the college centennial, which it memorialized in art, and brief biographies, besides giving the usual pictures of the faculty, classes, student clubs, activities and jokes and literary products. Two members of the Centennial graduating class, respectively, Miss Bertha M. Pepperrine of Neosho, Mo., and Miss Virginia Hoover of Kansas City, were editor-in-chief and business manager. Others on the annual staff were Misses Pauline Davis, Geraldine Schwartz, Dorothy Dunseth, Kathryn Walker, Frances Stumberg, Harriet Liddle, Marcia Wallace, Harriet Collins and Grace Walker.

MISS CAMPBELL ELECTED QUEEN

MISS CAMPBELL IS PRESIDENT OF STUDENT GOVERNMENT BOARD

Miss Virginia Sue Campbell, of Bowling Green, had another honor bestowed upon her at Lindenwood last Friday night, December 2nd, and a big one. This was the announcement of her election to be Annual Queen. This rather newly established dignity at Lindenwood is on the basis of popularity, and registers the votes of everyone subscribing to Linden Leaves, the College annual. This practically means everyone at Lindenwood, from the caretaker up to the president and of course every student and teacher.

In the "pop contestt", which waged with great ardor, ballots being secret, Wednesday and Thursday, there were other candidates enough to make it interesting for the happy victor. Two were allowed from each class. The other senior, Miss Campbell being president of the senior class, was Miss Betty Birch, of Toledo, Ohio, a student who has the distinction of being president of Alpha Psi Omega, Lindenwood's chapter of the national dramatic sorority. Miss Ruth Bullion, of Little Rock, Arkansas, president of the junior class, and prominent in many activities, not the least of which is the editorship of Linden Bark, the campus weekly, was another rival worthy of consideration, as was also Miss Marjorie Bright, of Wichita Falls, Texas, vice-president of the juniors. The sophomore class put up two of its officers, Miss Ruth Hughes of Kansas City, and Miss Betty Kelso of Grand Island, Nebraska.

The announcement of Miss Campbell's winning the place of queen was made a feature of the annual party given in Butler Gym by the Alpha Sigma Tau, Friday night. Miss Campbell since the beginning of the college year, has held a difficult post of head of the Student Government Board, an office which every one admits requires much firmness in discipline. That she has succeeded at this, and still remains "the most popular girl" indicates the high quality of tact which Miss Campbell possesses.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Campbell of this city and one of Bowling Green's most lovely young girls.

AVIATION APPEALS TO WEBB CITY GIRL POET

Aviation has presented its appeal to a Webb City girl, Miss Marcia Wallace, who has written a poem, "Beyond the Blue," which appears in a recent number of "Linden Bark's" literary supplement, the campus newspaper of Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo. The poem follows:

The ground recedes, the motor speeds,
As he shoots aloft the plane.
His heart lifts up, his brown eyes gleam
As he glances down again.

Away from cares and troubles,
He leaves them far behind,
They fade away like bubbles
Adventure fills his mind.

What fortune lies beyond that blue
That marks the eerie space
Where earth and sky seem to lie
Close locked in fond embrace.

Where blue begins, does sorrow end
And happiness thrive always,
A calm delight fill every night
And revelry all the days?

Does God reserve that azure place
For a treasure chest of joy?
He's off to find the key for it
Amidst that roaring noise.

G. C. SIBLEY GRAVES
TO BE DECORATED

An unusual bit of Christmas decoration is that of the graves of Maj. George C. Sibley and his wife, Mary Easton Sibley, within the grounds of Lindenwood College, at St. Charles. It is the annual custom of the art department of the college, headed by Miss Alice Linnemann, an alumna, to decorate these graves with Christmas greens and flowers in memory of the founders of the college.

Within the inclosure also is the grave of Mrs. Sibley's father, Judge Rufus Easton, first Postmaster of St. Louis, which likewise is decorated by Lindenwood, together with the graves of several other relatives of this family.

Mrs. Sibley, the founder's, birthday occurred January 1, 1800, and if she were still living she would be 128 years old at New Year's. She died fifty years ago.

AURORA, LAWRENCE COUNTY, MISSOURI

FORMER AURORA GIRL AGAIN WINS HONORS

Miss Kathryn Walker, a senior at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo., who has many friends in Aurora, received the honor, at the eve of vacation, of the award for an appropriate Lindenwood College song. She has written the words for a new song for 1928, the title of which is, "Dearest of All, Lindenwood." It is not every year that anyone wins this award of $25, although it is offered each year, but the song has to pass the tests first, of the music department, and then to be voted on by the approval of the student body. Another Missouri girl, Miss Helen Roper, of West Plains, wrote the music, and they will divide the $25.

The song follows:

Dearest of All, Lindenwood

Lindenwood, we're loyal until the last Ideals you instill forever.

No school can equal your glorious past,
Deeds of today do your future forecast
Each girl must ever remember.

Nourished and loved till this century new,
Worthy of the one whose dear vision came true.

Curs just to take, not scar it,
Ours just to make, not mar it
Dearest of all, Lindenwood!

Lindenwood, our Alma Mater so dear
In our memories you shan't perish.
Not one shall fail in the way you made clear Duty will guide us though we're far from here.

Ever our college we'll cherish.
Chorus: Nourished and loved etc.
