Alumnae Council Plans Sesquicentennial

Great things are being planned for Lindenwood's Sesquicennial celebration year which will begin January 1, 1977, and end December 31, 1977. Marie Christensen Robb, President of the Alumnae Association, and the members of the Council met October 23, 24 and 25 on the campus to crystalize plans and designate areas of responsibility for each member.

The Council has decided that alumnae will be responsible for plans for very special reunion festivities in the spring of 1977 and Founders' Day in October 1977.

Since the reunion in 1977 will be such a significant one, the Council voted unanimously that no reunion be held this year. Those classes who would have had their reunions in 1976 will share the honors with those for 1977. This decision was partly in response to suggestions from some members of the reunion classes that they plan to wait until '77 to return. For this reason, there was concern that a reunion this year would be very

The annual business meeting of the Alumnae Association will be called April 24, 1975, at 10:30 a.m. followed by a luncheon for all those who attend. A ballot to elect officers and council-members for 1976-77 will be printed in the spring issue of the ALUMNI NEWS.

The money from the Country Fairs held the past few years, together with the one to be held in '77, will help defray expenses of the Sesquicentennial.

Seniors were welcomed to the Alumnae Association by the Council October 24 with a party at the Faculty House.

Alumnae Council members are: Marilyn MANGUM Heilman, Tanya YELDELL Mallory, Joan LEIPER Johnson, Mary Lou McLEOD Bertram, Helen MEYER Fuerhoff, Marian TITUS Ellis, Janet LEWIS Bornstein, Dorothy DuQUOIN Warner, Marie CHRISTENSEN Robb, Marcia COOPER Giske, and Folsta BAILEY Gibbons.

Lindenwood 4 off to a Flying Start

Lindenwood 4, College for Individualized Study, has become an actuality in the three regional centers established this summer. Thirty-two students have enrolled in the St. Charles-St. Louis Center, 21 undergraduates and 11 graduates. In Los Angeles, 28 have enrolled, 25 of whom are undergraduates. The Washington Center has 12 enrolled, 9 of whom are graduate students.

At the present time six alumnae have taken advantage of this program: Helen Hartig, Cathleen Klohr, Ruth Ann Meyer, Miriam King Watts and Kay Moore in the Lindenwood Center and Janice Kinsella in the Washington Center.

The story of three students, one from each Center, indicates the diversity of the type of people attracted to this program.

In Washington, we have Portia Franklin who has been teaching in a high school government studies program, and challenging students with questions and insights about the complex problems of American institutions. The program is CloseUp, a nonpartisan, nonprofit forum supported by many public figures. The forum brings young people to the nation's capital for brief, intense studies and involvement in government.

Portia did an outstanding job with her students. Yet; she knew she needed more depth of knowledge about the problems of American institutions in order to help young people learn about the serious problems which they will inherit. As a result, she has planned a Master's degree study to better inform herself and to meet her teaching needs.

Portia will focus her program on American studies with special emphasis on politics, socialist theory, history, and institutions in relation to their structures and their bearing on collective aggression and social destructiveness. The final phase will study questions of alternative forms of social order as solutions to the problems studied.

In L.C. 4, Portia will study these important and difficult value questions in her own individual way in a supportive setting. Portia has outlined an outstanding indepth study, and will be assisted by a faculty person from the wellknown Institute for Policy Studies in Washington, D.C.

Esther Zide, a 33-year-old epitome of creativity, brought three years' concentrated study at Santa Monica City College, and California Institute of Arts, predominently in the humanities, with a clear focus on art. Aside from her academic work, she has studied yoga for nine years, taught Hatha Yoga for four years, explored the field of dance and movement as it is used with art and creative expression, worked as an interior designer, teacher's aide, studied art history and is raising two children.

Her current life situation is such that she needs-wants to begin earning a wage, using her training to do so. She approached L.C. 4 with the idea of learning about the advertising, public relations, newspaper, textbook publishing fields as related to graphic illustrator. And, since her organic learning structure has been the expressive arts, she is also exploring the marriage of art and the field of theraphy, i.e., art

Since she has concentrated on skills and training within the field of art, she is now working with a faculty sponsor whose background is in the business field. Because Lindenwood 4 works on a team concept wherein all students have access on a space available basis to all faculty resources, Esther is currently exploring her new interest in art therapy with another faculty sponsor.

It is no exaggeration to say that Sheila Lenkman is an excellent student. Born and educated in England, Mrs. Lenkman comes to Lindenwood 4 with a nursing diploma and 20 years experience, mostly in the St. Louis area, in nursing and nursing education. Like most of our students, Mrs. Lenkman is working full time; she is the Clinical Coordinator at the Normandy Osteopathic Hospital in St. Louis County. She is also a wife and mother of five chilren, ranging in age from 7 to 17. In 1974, Mrs. Lenkman became an

A new degree program in the Administration of Justice, designed to meet the growing need for course work in the field by law enforcement personnel began this fall at Lindenwood. In keeping with goals recommended by the U.S. Department of Justice, the studies will emphasize the social science fields as well as providing both classroom and field experience in the administration of justice.

According to Dr. John Bartholomew, Dean of the Lindenwood Evening College, twenty students began this fall taking the basic course. These students include local law enforcement Probate Judge David Dalton, former St. Charles County Prosecuting Attorney.

Sandy Lovinguth and Ed Gorsky admire a colorful woven wall hanging, titled "Legendary Legacy," which depicts South Main Street in St. Charles in the early 1800's. Diane Carithers, Class of 1967 and past president of the Southern California Club, donated this historical representation to the Admissions Office in the hope that it would "welcome and cheer prospectives and visitors to Lindenwood."

International Women's Year 1975

Lindenwood was well represented at the International Women's Year conference in Mexico City. Jean Berg, wife of Dr. B. Richard Berg, was an official observer for the Experiment in International Living, and Diane Stanley, who attended Lindenwood 1955-57, was there as an officer for the U.S. Information Agency. The following are first-hand reports of their participation.

By Jean Berg

Thousands of men and women met in Mexico City this past June to observe the United Nation's Declaration of 1975 as INTERNATIONAL WOMEN'S YEAR.

Representatives from 133 countries, speaking more than twenty languages and dialects, gathered under the I.W.Y. dove to discuss the tri-part theme, Equality, Development and Peace.

The resulting document, World Plan of Action, is a ten-year blueprint that mandates each participating nation to find ways within its own societal structure to fully incorporate women in every aspect of life.

As the official observer from one of the 160 non-governmental organizations, The Experiment in International Living, I came away more convinced than ever that as women we must share our experiences and develop expertise in problem-solving to become full partners in the decision-making processes that affect our lives.

Mrs. Berg, a graduate of the University of California, has filed as a Democratic candidate for Congress from the Ninth Congressional District, the seat now held by Rep. William Hungate.

By Diane Stanley

What can be said about the IWY Conference that has not already been said? Despite the fact that many delegates and other Americans attending the giant meeting, felt the conference did not generate much media coverage in the U.S., it did actually receive considerable coverage in this country.

And I was in a unique position to know because, as an officer for the United States Information Agency detailed to Mexico City to work with the U.S. media and the American delegation, I helped prepare a daily summary for our delegates — provided telegraphically from USIA in Washington — that detailed press and television coverage of the conference. Rather than repeat much of what has been recorded, I would like to share my personal impressions.

My most vivid impression remains that of the composition of the U.S. delegation. I have never been exposed to so many truly outstanding, competent and successful women. Persons such as Jill Ruckleshaus, U.N. Ambassador Barbara White, Anne Armstrong, Congresswoman Bella Abzug, Patsy Mink and Margaret Heckler, Dr. Virginia Trotter and Jewel LaFontant, Deputy Solicitor General.

Another revelation for me was how hard the U.S. delegates worked. Our delegation, probably the best organized in Mexico City despite the fact that with 37 members it was second only to

Mexico's enormous delegation, arrived already knowing exactly what each delegate's responsibilities were.

A final impression I would mention is how highly politicized the conference was. Our delegation was prepared for this, but I was repeatedly surprised how often world politics entered into what essentially was a conference to further the rights of women. Thus, Panama denounced the U.S. on the Panama Canal issue; Mrs. Sadat criticized Israel; numerous countries censured the Chilean regime and so on. The insistent theme, however, was the Third World's call for a New International Economic Order.

The U.S. position — echoed time and again by our delegates — was that Mexico City was not the forum to discuss such matters. But the Third World delegates were equally insistent that women's position will not improve unless the world economic situation changes. Nor was our delegation successful in countering this argument.

The Third World's, "Declaration of Mexico City," which contained many useful recommendations for the liberation of women throughout the world, also included language on the New International Economic Order and Zionism that our delegation — instructed as it was by the Department of State — could not vote for.

More positively, however, was the adoption by the conference of the World Plan of Action. Whether many of its recommendations are implemented remains to be seen, but consciousness was raised in Mexico City and I am hopeful that within its ten-year scope many of these important recommendations will be put into effect.

L.C. Goes to St. Luke's

Seventy-nine students from St. Luke's Hospital School of Nursing were recently enrolled at Lindenwood. The program allows a nursing student to receive regular credit toward a college degree at the same time the student is studying to become a registered nurse. The plan was made possible by an affiliation agreement between the Colleges and St. Luke's Hospital School of Nursing.

Lindenwood faculty members teach eight courses at St. Luke's Hospital West, which are an integral part of the nursing students' academic program, during three trimesters — fall, winter and summer. Each student is enrolled in a different number of courses according to their needs for completion of an RN diploma.

Former Student President Commencement Speaker

Betty J. Littleton, Class of 1951, coordinator of Women's Studies and a member of the English Department at Stephens College, Columbia, Missouri, was asked to give the Commencement address there last spring. Her address was quoted in the NATIONAL OBSERVER during the summer. The title of her address was "Women's Education: To Discover Ourselves as Women." Her thesis was that a woman's college in this day and age, after all, must be feminist. "A woman's college can concentrate its energies on banishing prejudice from its curriculum and teaching. It can make a conscious effort to enlighten its students about the psychology and sociology of sex-role ferentiation in our society and others. It can develop elaborate advising and counseling services to encourage and support women of all ages. It can allow women to compete with each other for positions of leadership. It can help them succeed and so acquire confidence and self-esteem. It can insist that women learn to articulate with clarity and precision the ideas, opinions and feelings that matter to them. It can teach women to take themselves seriously and to respect and support each other. It can convince women of the importance of work in everyone's life and it can help them prepare themselves for work that means something to them. It can demonstrate in its staff appointments and its treatment of women that it believes the abstractions it professes.

The more difficult task of the women's college has to do with recognizing the internal impediments to women's discovery of themselves — recognizing those impediments and finding ways to deal with them. Consciousness of ourselves, belief in our worth as independent human beings - for most women these convictions are fragile and uncertain. The women's college must recognize this fact and consciously, laboriously, begin to deal with it directly. But our search for the truth about ourselves-about the way we are-comes first."

Counselors Appointed

Two 1975 graduates of The Lindenwood Colleges, Amy Basore and Barry Freese, have recently joined the admissions staff.

Amy and Barry are very enthusiastic about their new positions and have already visited many high school students throughout the United States.

FACULTY HONORED

Three members of the Lindenwood Colleges faculty have been chosen as Outstanding Educators in America for 1975. They are Dr. John Bornmann, professor of chemistry and chairman of the department; Dr. Vincent Brescia, assistant professor of biology; and Mrs. Jeanne Huesemann, associate professor of mathematics.

Nominations for the honor of Outstanding Educators in America are made by officials of the colleges and universities. Guidelines for selection include the educator's talents in the classroom, contributions to research, administrative abilities, civic service and professional recognition.

LINDENWOOD REVISITED—An Editor's Return

The September issue of GLORY, a West Michigan magazine edited by our own Gloria BURSEY Slykhouse, Class of '55, carried her story of a return visit to Lindenwood, "Journey Into Nostalgia - The advantages of a Small College." In the summer of 1974, Gloria came back to the Lindenwood campus to interview several of her classmates -Nancy MILLER Pecha, Ronnie DYSART Baue and Susie AN-DERSON Stockman. It was a warm, happy reunion as they discussed the merits of attending a small college and what each had done with their lives since graduation.

Gloria feels strongly that the small college should be considered as an alternative to mass education. Her own testimony is certainly shared by many who attended Lindenwood. She writes, "All of my education has contributed to my success as a business woman, a writer and a human being. But I have to admit that a great deal of the credit must be given to the four informative years I spent at Lindenwood where I received a B.A. in Communications."

Each of these young women spoke of the small classes, the opportunities for leadership, the individual attention given them by faculty and administrators and the possibilities for internships. Gloria was station manager at the campus radio station KCLC and editor of the BARK.

Gloria recalled that twenty years ago when they were in college, they didn't think so much in terms of careers for women except teaching. "It was assumed," she wrote, "that we would perhaps work a little while, but then marry, have babies and that would be the end of us." She goes on to say, however, that "Surprisingly enough, our education gave us a good background and versatility."

Gloria's own career exemplifies this versatility. Upon graduation she was assistant to the program director and writer and hostess on a TV show for KETC, she then was an assistant editor and an account assistant for a travel magazine, and since 1970 has been the owner, editor and publisher of the Glory Publishing Company.

SATURDAY EVENING POST Contest Winner

We take great pride in announcing that the final winner of the contest for a national BICENTENNIAL anthem, sponsored by the SATURDAY EVENING POST, was Frances McPHERSON Stewart, Class of '34. The 300 entries were judged by the Jordan College of Music at Butler University in Indianapolis, and the 12 finalists were performed for the POST editors by a mixed chorus from the Music College. In writing about the anthem, according to the POST in the July-August issue, Dean Louis F. Chenette of the Jordan School of Music said that the song "America" by Frances Stewart was given highest rating. "The text is appropriate and melodic contours are simple but interesting. There are unusual harmonic characteristics that give it originality and a distinctiveness and will cause the song to be remembered."

At Lindenwood, Frances received her Bachelor of Music degree and then went on to Michigan State University where she earned her Master of Arts degree. She taught at Tarkio College, Florida State University and Eastern Kentucky State University. During two sabbaticals she studied piano with Alicia de Larrocha and composition with Xavier Montsalvatge in Spain.

During the thirty years she taught, Mrs. Stewart gave at least two concerts each year. One of them, given upon her return from

Frances McPHERSON Stewart

Barcelona, was an all-McPherson Concert — a cantata which she had written (performed by the University chorus), a violin and piano sonata, three arias for voice, and five piano numbers — all composed by her. She also accompanied this program.

New Faculty

Dr. Philip S. Borden has joined the Lindenwood faculty as Professor and Chairman of the Business Administration department. He came to St. Charles from California and has been consultant and board member in housing, land and environmentally oriented companies. Since 1956, he served as President and Chief Operating Executive of Huber Homes, a midwest corporation which built over 8,000 homes and apartments during his tenure.

Dr. Borden has also been a Professor in India for the Ford Foundation, Professor of Business Administration at the University of Arizona, and Director of Case and Research Research Associates at Northwestern and Harvard Universities. He has been an officer and director in civic, charitable and professional organizations.

Originally from Kansas City, Borden received his bachelor's degree from the University of Kansas in 1947. He received the Master in Business Administration and Doctor of Commercial Science degrees from The Harvard Business School.

Dr. Borden is enthusiastic about opportunities for developing Lindenwood's programs. He commented that the type and quality of students in the MBA Program's first semester are comparable to those in the best graduate business schools in the country.

Dr. Craig Eisendrath, Dean of Lindenwood 4, comes to Lindenwood with a varied background. He was Regional Director of the Goddard College Graduate Program Washington, D.C. and a faculty member at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, at Northeastern University, and at Harvard. He founded the Whitman Institute, an English language school, in Cambridge, Mass.

Dr. Eisendrath has worked for the government with the National Endowment for the Humanities, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, and was a U.S. Foreign Service officer with the State Department in Naples. He has been involved with the creation of innovative college programs which led to his interest in developing Lindenwood 4 for Individualized study. "I see my role as a catalyst - I like to put bugs in people's bonnets," explained Dr. Eisendrath.

Philip Borden

Duane McGormley

From the ministry to a teacher of design and technical director in the performing arts at Lindenwood, was a natural result of Duane McGormley's training and experience. He came to us from Cleveland, Ohio. He has served the Methodist church as a Minister of Education and in the 60's had a street ministry and ran a coffee house for two years. In every situation, his religious vehicle was the performing arts.

Mr. McGormley received his B.A. from Case Western Reserve University with a double major in Speech and English Literature. His M.F.A. was also from Case Western in Scene Design. He earned the Master of Divinity from Evangelical Theological Seminary and has had extensive experience and training in small group work, sensitivity groups, conflict management labs, problem solving, etc., under the auspices of the Northern Illinois Conference of the United Methodist Church. He and his wife, Andrea, have two children.

In answer to the question of why he came to Lindenwood, Mr. Gormely stressed the individualized instruction which is given theatre students. "There is an opportunity at Lindenwood for students to learn professional (design, lighting, skills costuming, and makeup) and to learn to direct. This is unusual at the undergraduate level."

"I have a really extensive practical and theoretical background in all fields of accounting. The practical experience is due to my work in the business world as a public accountant. The theoretical experience is due to my having taught at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville since 1965." "I believe," said Mr. Burton Nissing, "that the two realms of experience enrich me as a professor at Lindenwood."

Mr. Nissing is married to Ann Gatchell, Class of '58. He received his B.S. degree in Business Administration from the University of Missouri and his M.S.C. from Saint Louis University, both degrees in accounting. He is at present working on his Ph.D. at Saint Louis University in Business Administration with an emphasis on estate planning.

A Radiant and Gallant Spirit

We are saddened by the death of Marjorie Ann Banks, Associate Professor Emeritus.

Miss Banks was above all an exceptional teacher,— able to bring out the best in every student, and to make learning and teaching an enriching experience. She brought to her classroom imagination, creativity, seriousness, respect for persons, and, above all, a radiant and gallant spirit.

Her enthusiasm for children and student teachers was contagious, and affected all those who knew her at Lindenwood. She went far beyond the call of duty as an Associate Professor, entertaining students and faculty in her home, serving on local, state, and national committees, and participating in community causes.

Her creativity produced the publication of eight books used by student teachers and pupils in schools.

Miss Banks had a gift for hospitality. Cooking and entertaining were two of her many interests, and all those who received the benefits of these gifts felt enriched and appreciative. She had an open home and an open classroom-making friendship, teaching and learning a creative and spiritual experience.

A radiant and gallant spirit has left our faculty fellowship. We are thankful for having known and loved her.

Mr. White earned his B.A. at Denison University and his M.S. at Indiana State at Terre Haute. At present, he is a doctoral candidate at Bowling Green University in the Speech Department, writing his dissertation on Martin Block, a radio programmer innovator in New York in the 30's on WNEW. Mr. White is married and has three children.

At Lindenwood, he is interested in developing theoretical courses such as teaching production values, broadcast law, and generally integrating the liberal arts into the program by the study of the historical development of broadcast media.

College Opens—Enrollment Nearly 1400

Lindenwood's enrollment continues to grow. The total student count of 1,377 sets a new record. The number of full time students, which includes those in Lindenwood 4, is 577, 358 of whom are women and 219 men. Seven hundred eighteen are enrolled as part time students and 51 are in the graduate programs, both the M.B.A. and Lindenwood 4. Our resident enrollment is 151 women and 65 men. The recent influx of Saudi Arabian students has brought the total men's resident enrollment to nearly 100.

Impressions -Kim Hanna and Cathy Lee from Fort Smith, Ark.

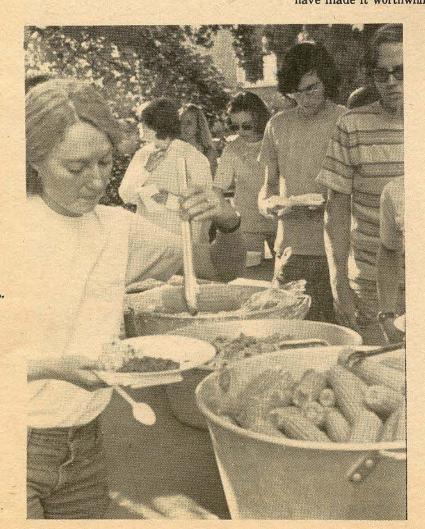

Entering Lindenwood or any college for that matter is a terrifying experience, however, now that the initial shock is over we can sit back and examine our surroundings in close perspective.

It goes without saying that the campus here at Lindenwood is second to none, not to mention the fine architecture of the old buildings which gives the school a sense of establishment. Of course, the size of the school had a great deal of influence in our decision to come here. Lindenwood is a very personal school socially as well as academically which can give a person a better understanding of himself.

The past two weeks have been full of change and excitement, but in the short time we have been here we have developed a sense of respect and gratitude for all who have made it worthwhile.

Clubs Award Scholarships

Kansas City

Glenna Sue Tehel

Glenna Sue Tehel, an incoming freshman, received the Scholarship Award which is given each year by the Kansas City Alumnae Club. She first heard of Lindenwood through a neighbor, Hetty James Price, an alumna, and had attended a concert by the Lindenwood Madrigal Singers in Kansas City.

While she had considered other colleges, she chose Lindenwood after a visit to the campus. She plans to major in music education and continue her interest in piano. She has accompanied musicals at the Shawnee Mission Parks during the summers; this year's production was "Wizard of Oz."

Glenna has joined the choir and Madrigal Singers, loves the campus, appreciates the generosity of the Kansas City St. Charles

Bunnie Jobe
Club, and is looking forward to a

Club, and is looking forward to a busy and profitable college experience.

The St. Charles Lindenwood Club awarded two scholarships this year. Bunnie Jobe and Jeanine Butts, both graduates of St. Charles High School, come to Lindenwood with excellent academic backgrounds and personal recommendations.

Bunnie Jobe plans to major in biology and enter the field of medical technology or medical research. In high school she was a divisional winner in the Science Fair, a member of the National Honor Society, president of the French Club and secretary of the Science Club. Her schedule of classes has worked out very well. "I am taking two science courses, biology and chemistry, and together with French and the Lindenwood Common find myself busy. I heard about the scholarship through my high school counselor and am glad to be at Lindenwood."

Jeanine Butts was interested in business in high school and was a member of DECA (Distributive Education Chapters of America). She was awarded honors in DECA and received two trophies in the state competition. She was a member of the Band (played the flute) and was a member of the Math Club. At Lindenwood she plans to major in business. Her reaction to the school is very positive. "I like the small school atmosphere. I have a girl friend who is going to a state school and feels so lost." Her brother, Paul Butts, is also a freshman at

Equitation News-Fern Bittner

The riding department is deeply grateful to the following for donating horses to the Equitation program or for being responsible for having horses and tack donated: Tricia Marks, Wauwatosa, Wis.; Sherri Dennis Donaldson; Janet Walker Gouldner; Lynn Gibson and Mrs. Betty Bergs Young.

Mary Todd Wise Kritz, Karen Mueller, Mary Lynn Sunderman, Mary Ann Kitchell Ward, and Sharon Niles have been showing their horses in the St. Louis area.

Susan Perry, Jane Povis, Craig Maescher, Susan Barklage Bloj and her husband, Alex, have also ridden horses from the Lindenwood Stables in local shows.

Tim Tracy is advertising director for "Saddle and Bridle" Magazine.

Mrs. Fern Bittner, on her many judging trips throughout the States, has enjoyed visiting with many friends including Ann Gardner Lorimier, Lettie Russell Murphy, Betsy Hill and Janet McAnnich White.

Lindenwood students and alumnae won thirty-five ribbons in the "I Ride at Palmers Club Horse Show;" another thirty-five ribbons were won at the American Saddlebred Pleasure Horse International Championship Horse Show in Kansas City; and ninety-two ribbons were won at the Emerald View Stables Horse Show, O'Fallon, Mo.

Dotty Postlethwaite Pitts and her husband train race horses and hunters in Maryland.

Kathy Mussen Duerr and her daughter visited in St. Charles this summer and took riding lessons.

Mary Lee Herron came from Lexington, Kentucky, last spring to participate in the Alumnae Class for the Spring Show.

Rhonda Palmer, '75, has continued to win blue ribbons this summer and fall. She recently rode "Denmark's Born to Show," from the College stables, in the Reserve Championship in Saddle Seat Over 18 Equitation at the American Saddlebred Pleasure Horse International Championship Show held in Kansas City.

Students Greet Saudis

A group of Saudi Arabian students have come to the campus to study English and American culture. Lindenwood was selected by officials of the Saudi Arabian Educational Mission in New York because of the quality of its program and its location in mid-America adjacent to a large metropolitan area.

The students live in residence halls and participate in regular student activities sponsored by Lindenwood College for Men. They are enrolled in a special program of English language instruction in three groups and are taught by Dr. Lucy Morros, Mrs. Margretta Webster and Mrs. Dorothy Cohen, and attend classes 20 hours a week. In addition, they spend one hour a day in individual English tutoring sessions conducted by selected Lindenwood students.

Dr. Morros, one of their professors, has explained the goal of this program: "We are hoping to give the Saudis a solid background in the English language—one which will permit them to enter into American colleges and universities and purse studies in their chosen fields, which include the sciences, architecture, engineering, computer and business."

"At the same time, we are attempting to give these young Arabs an initiation into American culture through a series of films which mark certain phases in the history of American films and through visits to cultural spots in the greater St. Louis area. This week we are all going to the Planetarium, next week the Art Museum."

"We are pleased to be able to enter into this international educational program," declared President William C. Spencer, "and are looking forward to the intercultural opportunities that this program will provide not only for the Saudi Arabians, but also for all our other Lindenwood students."

Imad Kandil, an Arabian student, in response to an assignment for his English class, gave this account of his American adventure to date.

by Imad Kandil

All the Arabs here at Lindenwood are from Saudi Arabia. The majority of the students have just completed high school and a few of them have spent a year or so at a university in Saudi Arabia. There are 29 students coming from various parts of the country.

Some of them are from Riyadh, which is the capital. Some come from Jeddah, a port off the Red Sea, and others from Dammam, a city off the Arabian Gulf.

Their educational backgrounds include about the same as American students. They go to elementary school for six years, junior high for three years, and secondary school for three years. They study courses such as Arabic, math, religion, chemistry, physics, biology and some English. Following their studies, they receive their tawjehiyah or diploma.

The students were chosen by the Ministry of Defense and the Ministry of Education. The applicants with the best grades were then sent to the United States to study courses like economics, engineering, psychology, sociology, public and business administration and, of course, English. On the average, most of them will be in the United States for five years.

Allof the students are supported by the Saudi Arabian government.

Professor Conducts Column

September was the beginning of the Humanities Forum, a weekly newspaper column which brings the point of view of the humanities to the general reader. Humanities Forum is funded in part by the National Endowment for the Humanities, established by Congress in 1965, to promote the understanding of this branch of learning in American life, namely, the fields of archeology, art history, classics, history, jurisprudence, languages and linguistics, literature, philosophy and comparative religion.

The principal columnist is Dr. Howard A. Barnett, Professor of English at Lindenwood. Barnett is also a member of the Missouri Committee for the Humanities and in 1973-74 served as its chairman. Assisting Dr. Barnett will be professors from several Missouri colleges and universities. The objective of the column is to relate the ideas and insights of the Humanities to every day concerns, and will depend largely on the questions and topics submitted by readers.

Student Intern Promotes Mini Seminars

By Carol Recht, C.E. Student

A two-part seminar held in October called "How to Study" and "How to Meet the Challenge (and Survive)" was designed by counselor Janice Jackson and student intern Sammy Hall. "We timed the first part to come just before midterms," said Mrs. Hall. Groups averaging 35 persons met each day during the week of Oct. 6-10 to discuss "Managing Time;" and "Grades." Participants said the topics were relevant and the presentation well-prepared. Another said it was the "best use of time."

A highlight of the seminar held during the week of Oct. 20-24 was the "Familial Problems" section. Two continuing education husbands, Charles Hall and Howard Streeter, were invited to field questions wives might not feel free to ask their own husbands. "Don't criticize when he tries to help; men have feelings, too," emphasized Mr. Hall. In answering a question on working out problems in general, Mr. Streeter said, "Mutual affection and willingness to preserve the relationship are the most important factors."

Dr. Howard Barnett

that at present the column is being carried by sixteen newspapers: Cameron Citizen Observer, The Examiner (Independence), The Joplin Globe, Kansas City Star, The Lebanon Daily Record, Advertiser-News (Lexington), Daily Forum (Maryville), Memphis Democrat, Nevada Herald, Holt County Sentinel, Lake Sun and Lake Scene (Osage Beach), News-Press (St. Joseph), St. Louis Globe Democrat, Springfield Daily News and Leader-Press, Unionville Republican.

Barnett: Quoting Dr. "In this Bicentennial Year, especially the Humanities, which are so much a part of American institutions, need to be reconsidered in the light of contemporary issues. American culture is the product of more than 2,500 years of thought, study and creative effort. Every individual in a free society draws upon these resources. We believe a continuing awareness of them will increase the individual's enjoyment of life and his ability to cope with the challenges of a dynamic world."

men agreed that they are proud of their wives' accomplishments, whether or not they become employed.

The other areas covered were "The Decision to Return;" "Relating to Campus Activities, Students, and Faculty;" "Know Yourself," which included a detailed personality and interest survey to be evaluated later; and "Exploring Vocational Avenues Open to the Older Graduate." Director of Placement, Mary Lichliter, and Boyd Morros, Faculty Administrator for Lindenwood 4, shared the spotlight on this one.

"The most promising areas for women right now are accounting and health administration, which has over 200 different classifications," Miss Lichliter said. She encouraged all seniors to register with the Placement Office and secure letters of recommendation from faculty in order to enjoy maximum benefit from Lindenwood's placement service.

Mr. Morros illuminated the mechanics of both undergraduate and graduate levels of Lindenwood 4, the newest and most individualized addition to the Colleges. "Accreditation is expected next year," he said, "and will be retroactive." He also invited the students to take part in Lindenwood 4's activities.

ClubNews

Southern California

Marian TITUS Ellis, who attended the Alumnae Council Meeting, reported that the Southern California Club has plans for another busy year, including their annual Mini-Bazaar.

Kansas City

The Kansas City Club reports that "history," both formal and informal, will be the theme of their meetings this fall. In September, stories of their Lindenwood days were taped as a contribution to the Sesquicentennial archives. The speaker at the October meeting was Linda GRANGER McCormick whose senior synthesis paper was the documented early history of Lindenwood.

Minneapolis-St. Paul

The Minneapolis-St. Paul Lindenwood Club met on October 9 at the home of Mary KIR-CHHERR Shoquist. members were present for the luncheon of French onion soup and cheesecake. The highlight of the day was touring Mary's home, a multi-level hillside house, which she designed.

St. Charles

The St. Charles Lindenwood Club opened the year with a pot luck dinner at the home of President and Mrs. Spencer.

Fifty-five alumnae and spouses enjoyed the friendly hospitality of the Spencers and learned of the latest developments on campus.

St. Louis

On October 18, the St. Louis Lindenwood Club began its 1975-76 program with a reception at the home of Mrs. Horton Watkins, a member of the Board of Directors of Lindenwood. Thirty-five alumnae and friends were present to enjoy an interesting afternoon and to meet Dr. and Mrs. Spencer.

The next St. Louis Club meeting will be a Holiday Coffee on December 13 at the home of Mrs. Judith Wagner, Lafayette Square; a group of present and retired faculty members will be special
