Torrid Temperatures

As students walk into classes in Roemer Hall, doors are left open to help keep rooms without air conditioning as cool as possible.

Classroom climates in Roemer Hall cause some distractions

By Melissa Cossarini
Assistant Managing Editor

Roemer Hall is a building that provides the campus community with administration offices, registration and records center and classrooms. However, aside from the luxuries that the structure as a whole offers, it continues to lack an important necessity – air conditioning.

For students, sitting in the classrooms is uncomfortable and, for some, unbearable. In one class the first few days of school a student was excused, expressing her worries of passing out. Another got sick from the heat.

“I have two classes in Roemer that are insanely hot,” said senior Kevin Knepper. “I believe that the top floor is the worst. It’s very miserable because it feels like there isn’t any air circulation.”

Notebooks are used as fans, and shirts are soaked from sweat. Some professors prefer to teach in the dark, trying to find an efficient way to cool the room. Others leave doors and windows open hoping to find some source of air for students.

“There are days when it’s too hot for us,” said Professor Jo Ellen Kerksiek. “But it’s probably harder for the students than the faculty.”

“We are looking into a central air-conditioning system,” said Julie

Many students bring bottles of water to class in hopes of finding some relief from the heat. Some classrooms in Roemer Hall do not have air conditioning, and in times of excessive heat temperatures can soar.

Mueller, vice president of operations and finance. “We add air conditioning in different places of the building each year.”

Administrators have just started talking about the possibility of an air-conditioning system. No contracts or estimates have been made.

“It’s really an electrical issue, there is just not enough power in the building,” Mueller said. “We add one thing and in some places another breaks.”

Mueller said she had received only one complaint this semester concerning the heat. “We don’t even know if air will be installed or not,” Mueller said.

“I think LU should either put in an AC system or put an oscillating fan in all of the rooms,” Knepper said.

Lindenwood has provided some fans for Roemer classrooms, but many remain without fans because of electrical problems.

“Cooler temperatures are something the faculty would like to see and I think it’s something the administration would like to do,” Kerksiek said.

Cox ‘falls in’ to activities director role

By Dan Sonderman
Managing Editor

Kerry Cox may be a familiar face at Lindenwood University – he graduated last year and has been involved with student activities, here and at several schools for the past 10 years. He has planned and run college events, taught courses, coordinated student organizations and provided large topic lectures to students. He currently helps teach LU 101, a course to help freshmen adapt to college.

Cox is Lindenwood’s new student activities director, hired last month to replace Eric Click, who left to pursue a graduate degree in public affairs at University of Texas-Dallas.

“Kerry showed a real passion for the position,” said Ryan Guffey, assistant vice president for student development. “He has a wealth of knowledge with college based programs. That made the decision very easy.”

Cox says he was surprised when they chose him.

“I fell into this job,” he said. “I’m really excited to help students and make their college experience better.”

Cox has been a campus minister, so he’s used to working with students to help make their college experience more enjoyable.

“There’s tons of room for improvement here” in student activities, he said. “We can make things better.”

His plans include boosting homecoming on campus, special theme nights, more concerts and working closer with coaches on ways to involve more students with LU athletics. He also wants to organize a local battle of the bands.

“I want students to bring suggestions to me about bands they’d like to see here on campus,” he said. “I’m going to be kind of picky. We want good bands.”

Guffey said Cox “is very aware of student activities in the past and he has good ideas for the future.”

Cox also noted the Lindenwood Student Government Association as a good way for students to deal with problems. The LSGA meets every Tuesday at 4 p.m in Young Hall, Room 100. He invites students to come talk with him in his office, next to the Connection on the lower level of Spellmann Center.

“Working in campus ministry for as long as I have it’s hard to turn it off the social aspect,” he said.

Cox’s wife, Hannah, is an LU student, and they have two children, Jackson and Kennedy. He is working toward a master’s degree in communication through the LCIE program. Cox said he eventually would like to be a professor at Lindenwood.

Library is not just for studying anymore

By Ryan Trimble and Nick Fortsmann

Café and a plasma screen are making Lindenwood University’s Butler Library an ideal hangout. A new coffee shop, Java 201, is the second café at Lindenwood, the other being Java 101, next to the cafeteria on the second floor of Spellmann Center.

Amid leather cushions, chain-suspended chandeliers and stone archways, coffee mixes with books, a notion promoted at numerous well-known bookstores.

“It creates more of a cozy, lounge-like atmosphere, rather than a stoic, academic one,” said Lisa Kemmer, a library assistant.

The coffee shop is a great place to hang out, study or just socialize in a stress-free environment. Along with the books, two televisions offer distractions, but enjoying a good cup of coffee could soon become the highest priority.

Julie Respoli, who works as a cashier at the coffee shop, said popular items include the Verona coffee, long john donuts and a wide selection of sandwiches loaded with meat, cheese and other toppings, and many drop in to buy food and drinks in the afternoon.

Because Butler Library could become a place that students frequently visit during their college years, a cup of Starbucks House Blend can make homework less grueling and the stacks more appealing.

“It’s a great asset to the library,” said Lynn Heritage, about the new café next to her desk. “Students who have nowhere else to go can come here, have space to study and have a snack.”

Scholarships ease financial burden for students

By Tim Meyer
Contributing Writer

Thousands of applicants consider Lindenwood University as their first choice for college every year.

Michael Wade, associate director of admissions counseling at LU, said that the university receives thousands of applications every year. The applicants are assigned an admissions counselor based on areas of interest: academics, leadership, sports and many other criteria.

“Personally, I have received over 200 applications for the next fall semester and half of those will probably consider Lindenwood as their first choice for college next year,” Wade said. “I tend to be more of an academic counselor but there are other counselors here that handle only sports students and those that handle students interested in student government.”

According to Wade, admissions counselors are the individuals responsible for awarding scholarships to applicants and determining a scholarship amount. Eligibility for a scholarship at LU is not an easy task and several criteria must be met.

The first step toward awarding a scholarship is reviewing a student’s FAFSA information.

Wade said most applicants are eligible for student loans: up to $4,000 from the federal government and $1,500 from the state of Missouri.

Admissions counselors also consider financial need when awarding scholarships. “Obviously we’re not going to award a scholarship to someone whose family has a lot of money,” Wade said.

“We try to be as lenient and understanding as possible but some students don’t have a great need for more money.”

Wade said they also take a look at an applicant’s personal interests and achievements: academics, ACT scores, sports, church involvement, community service, school activities and volunteer work.

“These areas of emphasis are vital when considering which students we’re going to give scholarships to,” said Wade. “It helps us to find someone of good moral character and good citizenship in their community. We want to reward those students that exemplify hard work and dedication.”

“We’re most likely going to consider possible campus leaders, not troublemakers,” Wade added.

Group helps international students

By Cindy Muehlbacher
Legacy Staff Writer

Before the beginning of fall semester, Lindenwood University teamed up with the Christian-based organization International Students, Inc. (ISI) to offer a number of services for international students. John and Jan Dugo, as well as Marc and Elise Murchison, are the organizations' representatives for Lindenwood's international students.

ISI was established in 1953 in Colorado Springs, Colo., to promote friendships between international students and residents of the United States. Locally, John Dugo, 70, and his wife, Jan, have been involved with the organization for 22 years now.

"My wife and I started out as 'friendship partners,' but after retiring, we both felt the need to get more involved and do something for humanity," said Dugo. As friendship partners, the Dugos got in touch with international students from all over the world, participating in activities with them and providing help and assistance in dealing with day-to-day challenges.

The organization relies heavily on the work of volunteers. "Our mode of operation is to help out the internationals," said Dugo. "We want to reach out to them and help them through the difficult times."

Dugo and the other representatives picked up about 50 international students from the airport at the beginning of this semester. In addition, they provided transportation to the local Wal-Mart.

ISI also offers a number of services to help students get accustomed to the "American way of life" and improve their English language skills. The first ISI meeting was scheduled Sept. 6 from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. in Spellmann Center, room 4105. Other activities include dinners, get-togethers, trips to local attractions and events, as well as attending church services.

For the next event, on Sept. 14, ISI will hold a square-dance dinner. International students wishing to participate can contact one of the representatives. Pick-up service will be provided.

For more information on ISI, visit www.internationalstudents.org or call John Dugo at 314-952-6975 or e-mail dugoj@sbcglobal.net.

In brief

Lindenwood to host poster sale

Sept. 13 and 14 LU will hold a poster sale in the Connection, located in the lower level of the Spellmann Center.

The event is worked by employees of Beyond the Wall. Prices range from $1 to as much as $30.

McCaskill staff to visit campus

Members of Sen. Claire McCaskill's staff will hold two separate "kitchen table talks" Wednesday, Sept. 12 at Lindenwood University.

The first session will be for resident students at 3 p.m. in the parlor of Butler Library. McCaskill said she wants to know the issues affecting students in our state.

A second session will begin at 5 p.m. in the auditorium at the Lindenwood University Cultural Center. That session is for faculty, staff and LCIE students.

Film festival to start next month

The philosophy department is sponsoring its Philosophy in Film series this semester. The subject is death. It's open to all students, discussions follow each film. The next showing is on Oct. 2, Grave of the Fireflies. The festival continues through Nov. 27.

Funds approved for Blanton Hall

The Lindenwood Student Government Association canceled its first meeting after approving $80 for candy and decorations for Blanton Hall.

Dorm promotes open door policy

Calvert Rodgers Hall encouraged an open door policy to help residents meet new people and connect everyone to dorm life and activities. Other plans to improve and promote include "Happy Hour" which will be a party in the lounge on Sept. 12. A Halloween door-decorating contest begins Oct. 19.

College opens advising center

Lindenwood opened an academic advising office on the St. Charles Community College last month in attempt to provide better and more convenient service to students at the community college who are considering transferring to Lindenwood after receiving their associate's degree or completing 60 credit hours.

Vegetarians want more options at campus cafe

By Andrea Kinnison
Legacy Staff Writer

Pizza, hamburgers, pasta – most Lindenwood University students would probably declare the campus cafeteria has a fairly varied menu. However, some students feel that the cafeteria could go a step further by catering to the needs of vegetarians on campus.

There has been talk of setting up a vegetarian menu, and even bringing in a vegetarian cook. Student Andromeda Williams is one of the people focused on that goal.

"When I first came to Lindenwood I was a vegetarian," Williams said. "After three weeks here I knew ... I was going to starve."

Russ Hunt, general manager of the cafe, acknowledged and responded to the call for a more vegetarian-friendly kitchen.

"There's a vegetarian entree every day. We have veggie burgers, pasta, beans, rice, and full salad bar with hummus."

Hunt said that vegetarian students can have well-rounded, satisfying meals with these options. Last semester the kitchen introduced vegetarian rib patties, hot dogs and chicken-like sandwiches.

Williams, however, feels that is not enough to cater to vegetarian students, especially those from other countries.

"They do provide vegetarian options, but those options are for the American palate. We have about 50 students here from Nepal and 50 from India. That is 100-plus students who are likely vegetarians religiously who weren't here before, and it doesn't even include Japanese and other students."

Williams has begun compiling a list from foreign students of special vegetarian dishes and recipes from their cultures. She said foreign students she's encountered are grateful for the effort that is being put into meeting their needs. She's also trying to get culture nights where such dishes are served.

"There are a lot of things on the board right now," Williams said.

Williams has been working with the administration and the PF Food service, which provides Lindenwood's food. She said that the administration and Ralph Pfremmer, who runs PF Foods, have been very cooperative and helpful thus far.

"They've been looking for students to step up and handle our own problems," Williams said.

Despite the talk of vegetarian food between students and administration, Hunt feels that vegetarians still can get by with what Lindenwood currently offers.

Hunt said he was open and willing to listen to more comments and suggestions pertaining to Lindenwood's food service. In fact, a food service committee was created to do just that. He encourages anyone with questions or complaints to join the committee.

"It's a great way to make changes," Hunt said. "The last two years, complaints [about the food] have been minimal, and I believe it's because we have worked with the food committee.

No matter what the outcome of the vegetarian discussion, it is clear that all parties see a change coming to the food service. Williams sees that change as something that will have a positive effect on other students.

Campus ministries hosting post party

By Chelsea Lewis
Legacy Staff Writer

Everyone's invited to a huge kegger in the quad, right after the Lindenwood Lions football game this Saturday. A root beer kegger, that is.

A Cross Between Campus Ministries is hosting its third annual Root Beer Kegger at 8 p.m. on Saturday, Sept. 15. The event provides students with a chance to get together in a fun non-alcoholic environment. There will be free hot dogs, hamburgers, sodas and (what else?) a whole bunch of root beer.

T.C. Brown, president of A Cross Between, says that the kegger is "definitely a different kind of event at LU." He mentions that there were between 400 and 500 people in attendance last year, and this year it's looking to be even bigger. "It's a crazy good time," Brown said.

"Who doesn't want to drink root beer from a keg?" asks Lindenwood's new student activities director, Kerry Cox. Besides free food and drinks, A Cross Between will provide games and prizes.

There will be a DJ performing for the first hour and then newly signed local artist Zack Weber will be playing with his band.

Cox encourages students to come play a game of root beer pong, buy a T-shirt, eat free food and have fun – after all, as Cox noted, "it's the most well-attended event for a reason."

Lions trounces Avila 56-27, roars to 2-0 season record

By Patrick Houlihan
Legacy sports writers

The Lindenwood Lions football program came into this season hoping to control its emotions and improve its record from last year.

The team has controlled their destiny through the first two weeks of the season by maintaining their focus. This team has jumped to a 2-0 record – beating Avila University 56-27 Saturday – showing focus in all three phases of the game.

The first display of their focus came in the home opener 44-34 win against highly touted MidAmerica Nazarene on Sept. 1.

Quarterback Ben Kisner got the Lion offense rolling against Avila by throwing a pair of touchdown passes to put the squad up 14-0. The defense stood tall when Bruce White forced a fumble on Avila's first possession of the second half.

The Lions turned it into points when Richard Murrell took it to the house from 22 yards out to give Lindenwood a 27-14 lead.

Coach Patrick Ross was impressed with the way his offense played throughout the game.

"It was pleasing to watch our offense play; they did a nice job of moving the football all day long," Ross said. "We did a good job of controlling the clock and keeping our defense off the field."

The Lions got points off another turnover when for the second straight week; a Lions defender intercepted a pass and took it the distance for a touchdown. Brandon Gould was the key man this week as he picked the ball off around midfield and proceeded to take it all the way to make the score 37-21.

"The defense played well, we swarmed to the football and only had a couple of missed assignments on some key third down conversions," Ross said.

Lindenwood iced the game in the fourth quarter with 19 straight points to coast to a 29-point victory. Ross was excited about the start of the season but knows his team

Men's soccer cools after fast season start

By Patrick Houlihan and Fernando Sucre
Legacy sports writers

The Lindenwood University men's soccer programs got off to quick starts this year with good team play and organized strategy.

The men's squad opened with victories over Trinity International and Columbia College and a hard fought tie against Hastings College. The team then dropped its next two on the road to put their record at 2-2-1.

Nenad Todorovic and Juan Gascue have led the Lions' offense so far, each with three goals and tied for the lead in total points with six. Bryce Flynn has been dominant in goal with one shut-out, a 2.298 goals against average and a total of 20 saves through five games.

The team opened the season at home against Trinity International.

The team got five goals by three different players and showed their controlling possession style of play to dominate ball control and scoring chances. The Lions won 5-2.

Their next match was against Hastings College, where Adis Nukic scored the opener for Lindenwood, but a late goal by Hasting knotted the score at 1-1.

The teams battled through two overtime periods but were unable to notch a game winner.

Coach Carl Hutter was disappointed with not getting the win but still saw good things. "We really could have scored three to four goals today," Hutter said.

The Lions came back with a vengeance in the final game of their opening home stand against Columbia College. Both teams battled through most of the game until Hannes Backstrom buried a high moving shot into the top right corner to put Lindenwood in front with six minutes to go in the game. "The keeper was not in the goal, but on the right side, so I just tried to score," Backstrom said. The Lions won 1-0.

The Lions went on their first major road trip of the year to Cardinal Stritch and Lindsey Wilson in Kentucky. The trip was not as successful as the team wanted, with the Lions dropping both games, 4-2 and 5-3.

The Lions will look to get back on track when they host Lee on Friday at Hunter Stadium at 2 p.m.

can win your first couple is always good."

The Lions will next take the field Saturday at Hunter Stadium for another Heart of America conference matchup, facing Baker University of Baldwin City, Kan.

Ross knows that Baker will be a challenge.

"I think the biggest key right now is focusing ourselves. It is going to be a very intense game."

Nick Forstmann contributed to this story.

Scholarships

Students are also given the opportunity to work off $2,400 of their fees through the university's Work and Learn program. Each student works a total of 300 hours during an academic year, translating to $8 per hour.

"This program gives students the opportunity to not only pay some of their tuition, fees and housing bills but it also gives them the chance to provide a service to the university," said Wade. "It can also be a great way to prepare students for the work force."

Wade said that the most popular scholarship amounts range between $6,000 and $12,000 for an academic year. "It's an awesome deal but there are no full rides at Lindenwood. Sometimes we can get pretty close, but it's still better than paying the total $19,200."

The best scholarship program available at LU is the Bright Flight scholarship.

It takes the top 5 percent of high school students in Missouri who scored a 30 or better on their ACT and sends an additional $2,000 to a Missouri college of their choice. Once that amount is added to the $2,400 of work-study, the student is awarded a scholarship of $13,600 from the university, totaling $18,000.

"This scholarship is for the best of the best in Missouri," said Wade. "I don't have to justify this scholarship for students who have achieved academic success."

Wade said the scholarships are an "excellent incentive" for students to make LU their choice for college. "I think it definitely helps our increasing numbers. You spend four years in high school trying to prepare yourself for college, so this is a great way to reward those students for their hard work and dedication over the years."

For more information about scholarships at LU, contact the admissions office at 636-949-4949.
