

25 to benefit from scholarships

An Arkansas couple has committed itself to helping 25 students at Lindenwood College with the creation of a sustaining scholarship program for $1,000 in assistance to each student during their next four years at the St. Charles-based institution.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard Walker of Springdale, AR, have agreed to provide a $1,000 scholarship to each of 25 students beginning this fall and to renew the awards in each of the ensuing academic years until the students graduate in 1987. The couple's gift has a maximum potential of $100,000 during the next four years.

The award will be known as the "Walker Sustaining Scholarship" and each recipient will be called a Walker Scholar. To receive the scholarships in ensuing years, students must maintain a 2.5 grade-point average (C+) on a 4.0 scale and must not be on disciplinary or social probation.

Additional Walker Scholars shall be added when necessary to bring the total to 25 in any given year, provided the recipient understands that the scholarship will not be renewed beyond the 1986-87 academic year, said Lindenwood President James I. Spainhower.

Mr. and Mrs. Walker are long-time residents of Arkansas and Oklahoma and have been active in the work of the Christian Church and in various philanthropic activities for many years. Long active in the retail business industry, Walker presently is a rancher and real estate developer in the Springdale area.

In announcing the "Walker Sustaining Scholarships," Dr.

Spainhower said the Walkers' prime motive in establishing their gift is "their conviction that a college education is tremendously important in preparing an individual to cope in today's world."

He said both receive pleasure in assisting the Lindenwood College in its expanded efforts to meet the education needs of those who turn to it for assistance.

Names of the Walker Scholars will be announced during special convocation September 12 at the Lindenwood College campus.

'A new Lindenwood'

Name change, mission adopted

The Lindenwood College Board of Directors has approved committee recommendations that the institution's name be changed to "Lindenwood College" and that a new mission statement be adopted for the 156-year-old institution.

The board's action, which Lindenwood officials are calling "the beginning of a new Lindenwood," stems from recommendations made last spring by the Long-Range Planning Committee, a 16-member group representing community, student, faculty, alumni and board of director interests.

$304,000 thus far!

In the first seven months of Lindenwood College's 18-month fund-raising campaign, 43 percent of its $700,000 goal has been raised in gifts and pledges from faculty and staff members, alumni, corporations and foundations, the Lindenwood College Board of Directors and St. Charles area residents.

The $304,026 raised since January 1 represents a significant increase from the $87,877 contributed between January 1 and August 1 last year, said President James I. Spainhower. This year's campaign began seven months ago and will continue through the current fiscal year, which ends June 30, 1984.

In announcing the seven-month tabulations, Spainhower said $72,401 has been raised from corporations and foundations, including a $50,000 gift from the Monsanto Fund in St. Louis; $71,000 from St. Charles residents;

To recognize and celebrate the new "Lindenwood College" and its mission statement, a special convocation has been scheduled September 12.

In its recommendation, the committee said the plural of "college" is confusing and partially inaccurate. "We are not many colleges, but one. By calling ourselves simply 'Lindenwood College,' we would reestablish ties with our heritage and publicly affirm our unity as one institution of higher learning," it said.

The Lindenwood Colleges name was adopted in 1970 after the institution switched to coeducational status. With the addition of the Lindenwood Evening College and the Lindenwood College for Individualized Education, it was felt the plural noun would convey more of a sense of diversified and separate interests.

"The concept of using the plural noun has served its purpose, but we now want to stress unity rather than

president's message

by JAMES I. SPAINHOWER

"I was out for the stars
I would not come in -
Not even if I were invited."
- Robert Frost

Last summer, while traveling in the New England states outside Middlebury, VT, my wife and I pulled our car off the road into a simple clearing where the New England poet Robert Frost used to meditate. Inscribed on a plain plaque was a poem in which Frost describes himself alone with the earth as his footstool and the heavens as his limit. On that plaque I read these words:

"I was out for the stars
I would not come in -
Not even if I were invited."

Society always needs men and women - and colleges - out for the stars - unwilling to fold up their tents and head for more permanent shelter, regardless of how turbulent the weather becomes! Our world especially needs colleges "out for the stars"; colleges whose mission is clear, whose aims are high, whose motives are ethically rooted and whose academics are educationally sound and person-centered.

A college out for the stars is one with foresight and vision. Such a college accepts its role as a steward of the legacy to life for those persons who turn to it for higher education before beginning a career or in mid-career. A college out for the stars will graduate persons who are determined to be out for the stars all their days. The mystery of the meaning of life and work will forever involve Lindenwood graduates in an unending quest for Truth, if we do our educational task right.

A college out for the stars does not spend much time debating its survival. Some colleges deserve to die because they serve no vital function that some other institution is not serving better. Lindenwood has survived for more than 156 years - and will continue to exist - because it tries to help its students secure the kind of education that prepares them to cope with and, if need be, conquer what life brings their way.

A college out for the stars, by the very nature of its aspirations, will expose its students to a generous dose of liberal arts. Work skills and practical experience in a vocational field are essential, and Lindenwood seeks to provide them for all its students. But Lindenwood also tries to enhance the life of each of its students through academic encounters and extra-curricular experiences with the traditional liberal arts.

A college out for the stars in the 1980s will recognize the need of its students to acquire knowledge and skills in the highly technological aspects of today's work world. Peter F. Drucker notes in a recent Wall Street Journal article that there has been a switch to what Drucker calls "knowledge work" in the last few years. He insists that "the large-scale movement to new technologies means above all that productivity will increasingly be determined by the knowledge and skill workers put into their task." This is why Lindenwood is always open to innovation. A college has to be flexible and accommodate the ever changing knowledge demands of the times.

At our Fall Convocation on September 12 (see the front page for details), I want to discuss in greater detail some of the aspirations I have for this fine old college. As we return to the name which has served us for most of our history and adopt a new mission to guide our footsteps, it may be helpful to spell out clearly what kind of college we are going to be in the years ahead. I realize that just saying what we are going to be does not make us that. Nor do the voiced aspirations of a college's president necessarily correspond with the aim of its alumni, board, faculty, students and friends.

But when a long-range committee representing alumni, board, faculty, staff, students and the community-at-large spends months analyzing Lindenwood's past within the context of today's realities and tomorrows needs, surely the mission statement which was the result of its deliberations is worth the scrutiny of a Fall Convocation! So come and join us, if you can, on September 12 as I speak of the Lindenwood Mission we have approved on behalf of the board and the entire Lindenwood constituency. Perhaps together we can chart a course and point Lindenwood toward a future that will enable it to serve well its students of today and tomorrow. Perhaps we can resolve that Lindenwood will always be a college out for the stars!

Coaches named

As a means of strengthening Lindenwood's inter-collegiate sports program, Deborah M. Suchman and Christian Storey have been named coaches of the women's soccer and basketball teams, respectively, at Lindenwood College.

Ms. Suchman is soccer instructor and coach of the girl's varsity and freshman teams at Ritenour High School in St. Louis. Miss Storey is freshman women's basketball coach at Ritenour and a soccer coach for the Special School District of St. Louis.

The two appointments combine with the recent naming of Bob Benben, well-known basketball coach at Pattonville High School in St. Louis, as head coach of men's basketball at Lindenwood. Benben is a 1964 graduate of Washington University in St. Louis and has a master's degree in secondary education from the University of Missouri - St. Louis (UMSL).

A secondary teacher of math at Ritenour, Ms.

For joint program

CASA teams with Lindenwood

The Lindenwood campus has been selected as the fifth location for a satellite facility of the St. Louis Conservatory & School for the Arts (CASA) to serve the rapidly-growing needs of music students in the St. Charles area.

The joint announcement of the new school, which opens next month in the Memorial Arts Building (MAB), was made recently by Jane Childs, interim president of CASA, and President James I. Spainhower. Both expressed a delight at entering into a formal relationship that will strengthen and complement the quality programs in arts education at both institutions.

One of those responsible on Lindenwood's behalf for the cooperative venture is Aaron Miller, Ph.D., dean of faculty and provost. "CASA is one of the outstanding music education organizations in the country," he said, "and we are pleased to be involved in the instruction of its students. The school will be offering outstanding music instruction to youngsters, and its activities will blend with our own growth in the area of performing arts," Dr. Miller added.

Called CASA Lindenwood, the St. Charles facility initially will offer instruction in music - private lessons in piano, voice, guitar and orchestral instruments as well as classes in music theory.

Kitto to direct CASA school

Armand W. Kitto, Ph.D., former vocal music teacher for the St. Louis Public Schools, has been appointed director of CASA Lindenwood, the new facility on the Lindenwood campus operated by the St. Louis Conservatory & School for the Arts (CASA).

Volunteers are sought

Volunteers are needed by the Lindenwood College Alumni Office to take part in an alumni phone-a-thon to be held on campus during the last two weeks in September.

The phone-a-thon will be held evenings September 19-22 and 26-29 and on mornings September 24 and October 1. Volunteers will contact area alumni, extending them a personal invitation to attend Alumni Reunion Weekend, October 28-30.

If you are interested in volunteering a few hours of your time, contact Esther Fenning at the Alumni Affairs Office.

CASA Lindenwood's facilities on campus include several studios with pianos and an administrative office. Upstairs classrooms in the MAB will fill the needs for musicianship/theory classes while auditoriums and other facilities on campus will be available for recitals and other CASA functions.

In addition to the satellite branch of the MAB, the cooperative agreement calls for Lindenwood faculty members to teach courses in psychology, performing arts, sociology and art at CASA's headquarters in University City. In turn, CASA instructors will provide ensembles, private lessons and theory work for students and the community as adjunct members of Lindenwood's Performing Arts Department.

The joint program also provides that Lindenwood students can utilize facilities at CASA and take part in its programs and vice-versa, said Robert Peffers, Ph.D., chairman of the Performing Arts Department. "The agreement enables faculty and staff members at both CASA and Lindenwood to share resources and facilities for the creation of artistic performances, such as last spring's opera performances in University City and St. Charles," Dr. Peffers said.

A well-known music educator, he received a bachelor of music degree, a master's degree in music education and a doctorate in performance practice and choral music from Washington University.

A former minister of music at Brownson Memorial Presbyterian Church in Southern Pines, NC, Dr. Kitto has served as a member of the music faculties at the University of Evansville (IN), St. Mary's College in Notre Dame, IN, and Western Carolina University in Cullowhee, NC.

He is a member of the American Choral Directors Association, the American Choral Foundation, the Association of American University Professors, the American Musicological Society, the American Guild of Organists and the College Music Society.

Married, Dr. Kitto and his wife, Margaret, have four grown children.

CASA is a non not-for-profit educational and performing arts institutions involving students of all ages in art, dance, music and theater. In addition to its main facility and CASA Lindenwood, CASA operates other schools in St. Louis, West St. Louis County and Webster Groves.

Watkins to participate in White House event

Edward D. Watkins, vice-president for institutional development and president of the national Career Productivity Institute (CPI), has been asked to participate in the White House Conference on Productivity, scheduled September 22-23 in Washington, DC.

This summer, Watkins, a national career development authority, served as a panelist at one of four preparatory conferences, held at St. Louis University. Similar meetings were held during the summer in Durham, NC, Pittsburgh and San Diego.

Formed by legislation signed by President Ronald Reagan last fall, the White House Conference on Productivity is charged with developing recommendations for stimulating productivity growth in the United States. It is chaired by William E. Simon, former secretary of the Treasury Department, and L. William Siedman, former economic affairs assistant during the Ford Administration.

The conference's range of concerns includes such policy areas as reorganization of government, improving general and basic skills of American labor, sharing government research with industry, revising tax and federal civil service laws and reviewing antitrust and patent laws.

Speaking on the nation's career preparation system, Watkins said "education has done a poor job of preparing people for productive work and living."

Most Americans make career decisions on the basis of a ridiculously small amount of information, a situation that causes job dissatisfaction and low productivity, he said.

Citing Lindenwood as an example, Watkins said Lindenwood has a work-service program that provides career preparation for every student on campus.

Watkins is the founder of the CPI, a national center on the Lindenwood campus that promotes societal values, skill performance and work preparation - "educational issues that must be addressed in order to promote long-range productivity in the United States," he said.

The CPI works with local and national corporations and businesses, secondary and post-secondary schools and social and religious agencies to promote and implement its themes - that productivity growth must be supported by a strong value system, by a well-educated populace and by people who are prepared to work, Watkins said.

Monsanto challenge

Lindenwood has received a $25,000 gift and a challenge to raise an additional $75,000 from the Monsanto Fund in St. Louis.

To receive the unrestricted gift, the institution must raise $75,000 from new sources by March 1, 1984.

One-third of the amount already has been raised with the creation of a sustaining scholarship program, established recently by Mr. and Mrs. Willard Walker of Springdale, AR. Remaining are fund-raising efforts for $50,000 from new sources before the March deadline.

In making the challenge gift to Lindenwood, William F. Symes, president of the Monsanto Fund, said "I know that Lindenwood has real potential and hope this challenge aids in its development."

The Monsanto Fund has a record of support for the 156-year-old institution, which currently is in the midst of a $700,000 annual fund drive.

Valuation Sciences:

Program has impact upon economy

by RICHARD RICKERT

On the Lindenwood campus and in antique shops and shows, museums, real estate establishments and tax reassessment offices, a cluster of Lindenwood College students is making visible marks on the American economy.

They are Valuation Sciences students.

These students and recent graduates of the program have had a big share in Lindenwood's reputation as perhaps having the finest Valuation Science program in the country. As students or graduates, they have made uniquely important contributions to the professions of appraising. They have developed a methodology for appraising mass-produced antiques as Tea Leaf china, a totally unique computerizable data bank for appraising antiquities and a major assessment of the impact of inflation on the American economy. Two graduate papers already have been published in journals.

Current students are studying Missouri's impending tax reassessment, a computerizable procedures manual for beginning appraisers and methodologies for appraising ceramics, toys, American furniture and health care facilities.

One student, a nationally-known art lecturer, gave up her career as one of St. Louis' leading gallery owner to study appraisal. Another student is a docent in the governor's mansion in Jefferson City, which might lead to the first appraisal ever of the furnishings in the mansion. One student was hired as a supervisor in the St. Louis County reassessment program.

Other students and graduates work with a national department store corporation, leading industrial insurers, national appraisal corporations, the Internal Revenue Service, or as independent appraisers with national reputations. The Valuation Science faculty themselves are

Six named to board of directors

Newly-elected members of the Lindenwood College Board of Directors are Mrs. Leo T. Brougham of Kansas City, a 1960 graduate of Lindenwood; Robert J. Baer, president and chief operating officer of United Van Lines, Inc., Fenton, MO; Joe H. Hunt, executive vice-president of Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., St. Louis; James A. Donnelly, Jr., president and publisher of Suburban Newspapers of Greater St. Louis; and Raymond W. Harmon, president of Hasco International, Inc., St. Charles.

At its recent meeting, the board also appointed Jeanine Butts-Webster of Yonkers, NY, president of the Lindenwood College Alumni Council, an ex-officio voting member of the board, marking the first time for alumni association representation on the Lindenwood College Board of Directors.

The board also reelected Robert F. Hyland, regional vice-president of CBS, Inc., St. Louis, as chairman; David E. Babcock of St. Louis, former board chairman and chief executive officer of the May Department Stores Co. and a member of the U. S. Postal Commission; George W. Brown of Chesterfield, MO, a retired businessman; Gary W. Cowger, manager of the General Motors Assembly Division in Wentzville, MO; and S. Lee Kling of Villa Ridge, MO, board chairman and chief executive officer of Landmark Bancshares Corp. The board also reelected John C. Hannegan, a St. Charles attorney, as secretary and Kling as treasurer.

Currently, three vacancies exist on the Lindenwood Board of Directors. They are expected to be filled during the next regularly-scheduled board meeting, September 13.

Members of the college's Board of Overseers were announced recently by Hyland. Members, who serve three-year terms, are composed of those elected by the board of directors and an unspecified number (currently, six) of life overseers. Meeting three times per year, the Board of Overseers recommends actions to the full board as well as to the Lindenwood College administration and faculty.

Overseers include John M. Black of Corona del Mar, CA; Arthur S. Goodall of St. Louis; the Rev. W. Davidson

McDowell of Denton, TX; Mrs. James A. Reed of Kansas City; Mrs. Arthur Stockstrom of St. Louis; and Mrs. Horton Watkins of St. Louis.

The remaining members of the board of directors are K. Dane Brooksher of Greenwich, CT; Mrs. Russell J. Crider of St. Charles; Henry J. Elmendorf of St. Charles; Walter L. Metcalfe, Jr., of University City, MO; Jefferson L. Miller of St. Louis; John Tlapak of El Dorado, AR; and Mrs. Dorothy Warner of Laconia, NH.

Board cites Goodall

In recognition of his 46 years of continuous service as a member of the Lindenwood College Board of Directors, Arthur S. Goodall of St. Louis has been honored with the adoption of a board resolution proclaiming a few of his many accomplishments.

Presented recently by Robert F. Hyland, chairman of the board of directors, the resolution declares that the two Victorian-style lounges on the main floor of the Roemer Memorial Arts Building be known as the Arthur S. Goodall Lounges.

The resolution also cites Goodall's contributions as a member of the Fund-Raising Committee and as chairman of the Buildings & Grounds Committee for many years; his financial gifts through the establishment of the Nannie S. Goodall Memorial Scholarships, awards named for his mother from which "many students have benefited through his generosity"; his influence upon others to make contributions and gifts to Lindenwood; and his refurbishment of the two lounges in the Memorial Arts Building which now bear his name.

One of the oldest members on the board, Goodall is a retired official of Boatmen's Bank in St. Louis who was first appointed to the board in 1937. He spent more than 54 years in the investment field, more than 20 of which as the president of his own firm, Goodall & Co.

By his own estimates, Goodall has personally presented or has been instrumental in garnering more than $710,000 for the benefit of the Lindenwood College in his long tenure of service to the institution's board of directors.

He also is credited with the selection and planting of numerous varieties of trees which now landscape the 140-acre campus.

SERVICE SINCE 1937 — Arthur S. Goodall, left, recently was honored by the Lindenwood College Board of Directors and its chairman, Robert F. Hyland, right, for 46 years of continuous service as a member of the board.

Board meeting is slated

The Lindenwood College Board of Directors will hold its next regular session on September 13, beginning at 10 a.m. in the Goodall Lounge of the Memorial Arts Building (MAB).

Standing committees on Fund Raising & Development, Audit, Finance and Facilities will meet before the regular session at 8 a.m. in the MAB. The regular board meeting will conclude about 12:30 p.m.

with a luncheon at the residence of President James I. Spainhower.

On September 12, the Lindenwood College Board of Overseers is scheduled to meet from 2-5 p.m. in the MAB's Goodall Lounge. Members will be joined by the full board of directors for a 6 p.m. buffet dinner at Dr. Spainhower's home and for the 8 p.m. Fall Convocation at the Lindenwood College Chapel of the St. Charles Presbyterian Church.

Lindenwood/Lyceum venture

'A demanding, rewarding summer'

by RANDY L. WALLICK

"When we auditioned at Lindenwood last spring, they told us that we would live, eat and breathe theatre during the summer. I thought they were kidding, but now I know it is true as many of my days consist of up to 12 hours of rehearsals and performances," said Michele Spears of Louisville, KY.

A performing arts major, Miss Spears is among six students and three faculty members at Lindenwood taking part in a unique cooperative program at the Lyceum Theatre in Arrow Rock, MO, one of the oldest professional repertory theatres in the country. Four students and a faculty member are taking part in a similar summer program at the Mainstage Repertory Theatre in Odessa Beach, MO.

The cooperative venture is designed to increase academic offerings in performing arts at Lindenwood and to enhance the artistic goals of the Lyceum Theatre. Offering six hours of academic credit during the 13-week summer, it consists of participation in Lyceum's program, involving students in acting, costume design, management, marketing, properties and set construction. In a supervisory role, faculty members take part in direction, set and costume design, lighting and stage management.

"I told them it would be a hectic and demanding summer, but a rewarding one as well," said Michael Bollinger, producing director of the Lyceum Theatre who also stars in several of its six summer productions.

HISTORIC SETTING — A Baptist church, constructed in 1872 in the Gothic Revival style, has been converted into the Lyceum Theatre, the summer "home" for Lindenwood students and faculty in historic Arrow Rock, MO.

"I'm not knocking education," Bollinger said, "but you can read all the acting books you want and still not become a good actor. Its classwork versus the real world, and for these students, this is the type of experience that is the real world of theatre," he added.

Lindenwood students and faculty at Lyceum are among 33 artists, designers and technicians taking part in the summer production schedule. The company members were selected from among 1,700 people who auditioned at locations throughout the country or forwarded resumes to take part in the Lyceum program, Bollinger said.

Now in its 22nd season, the Lyceum Theatre is housed in the former 110-year-old Baptist Church in Arrow Rock, an historic community of 82 located in central Missouri off Interstate 70, 13 miles east of Marshall, MO. The town, which has been restored to its original 19th century setting, has particular significance to Lindenwood. One of the college's founders, Maj. George Sibley was the commander of a fort at Arrow Rock in 1813-14 prior to co-founding Lindenwood with his wife, Mary Easton Sibley, in 1827.

"Social life in Arrow Rock?" asks Edward D. Deleal, an undergraduate student who performs in three plays and serves as Lyceum's business and publicity manager. "Social life is spent with a script in your hand in your dormitory room," replies the St. Charles resident.

In addition to earning six hours of academic credit, students are paid the minimum wage for their summer work, usually averaging about $75 per week, and receive free accommodations in a nearby Lyceum-owned 12-room dormitory.

"This program is a lot more demanding than any of us realized," Deleal states. "For me, three roles and serving as business and publicity manager keeps me busy, with my days usually being 18 hours long."

Cynthia Huse, an undergraduate from St. Louis who appears in several productions and serves as assistant Box Office manager, agrees with Deleal, Miss Spears and others that the summer program is very demanding, but rewarding.

"The credit and experience are worth it," replies Miss Spears, "and the experience is nothing like you receive in a classroom situation."

The Louisville undergraduate, who performs in five of the six summer productions, said this is the first time she has worked with equity performers. "I've found everyone here to be extremely cooperative and professional and, because of this association, I have been challenged to be more professional," she said.

Consisting of 60 performances during a 12-week operation, Lyceum's summer schedule consists of evening performances Wednesday through Saturday and matinees on Tuesdays and Saturdays. It includes such classics as "West Side Story," "Barefoot in the Park," "Our Town" and "Romeo and Juliet."

Among summer productions was "Cotton Patch Gospel," a musical that includes bluegrass, country and folk songs written by Harry Chapin, guest directed by Ed Herendeen, assistant professor of theatre at Lindenwood.

Throughout the majority of the summer, the Lyceum, a nonprofit theatre with a seating capacity of 220, plays to full houses. Although it attracts people from throughout the United States, most audiences consist of regular theatregoers from within a 50-mile radius from such Missouri communities as Marshall, Boonville, Sedalia and Columbia.

Other students taking part in the program include Violet E. Horvath, a St. Charles graduate student who serves as production assistant; Jacquelyn M. Goodall of St. Charles, an undergraduate who serves as assistant costume designer; and Dara L. Townsend of St. Louis, an undergraduate who serves as properties mistress. In addition to Herendeen, faculty members include Jane Conzelman, dance instructor at Lindenwood who serves as director / choreographer at Lyceum, and Niki Junker, assistant professor of theatre, who is costume designer at Missouri's pioneer repertory theatre.

A first endeavor for both institutions, the cooperative program between Lyceum and Lindenwood was arranged by Bollinger, Robert E. Peffers, Ph.D., chairman of Lindenwood's Department of Performing Arts; and Aaron Miller, Ph.D., dean of faculty and provost at Lindenwood.

Those involved in the program have given the Lindenwood-Lyceum arrangement high marks in its first summer of existence. "We've had good response to this cooperative venture," Bollinger said, "and we are looking forward to expanding the program and utilizing more Lindenwood talent next season," he added.

alumni news

Fall reunion takes shape

by ESTHER FENNING

Legend has it that Halloween each year the ghost of Mary E. Sibley roams the portals of Lindenwood. This year, Lindenwood will provide a dormitory full of former Lindenwood students with whom Mrs. Sibley can connect.

The newly-restored and historic Sibley Hall has been reserved exclusively for Lindenwood's annual Alumni Reunion Weekend, scheduled October 28-30. Old friendships will be renewed, memories rekindled and, who knows how many spirits from Lindenwood's past may be evoked?

Because Parents Weekend and Homecoming also will be held October 28-30, many additional events will be featured along with traditional alumni activities. Sporting events, a parade, class observations, lectures, films from the college's past, a dance and dinner theatre will keep alumni interested and busy for the entire weekend.

Registration will begin Friday, October 28, at 2 p.m. in Sibley Hall. Following registration, an art exhibit consisting of alumni art work, and a reception will be held at the Fine Arts Building. The reception will be hosted by the Associates of the Fine Arts. Weather permitting, an outdoor western barbecue will follow the art exhibit. Good old "hoedown" entertainment will be provided during and after dinner.

Saturday morning will begin with a continental breakfast at Sibley Chapel followed by the annual Lindenwood Alumni Association meeting at which President James I. Spainhower will speak and answer questions.

Immediately following lunch, a tree-planting ceremony will be held on campus. Alumni who have contributed $1,000 to plant a Linden tree will be recognized and a plaque bearing their names will be attached to the tree.

Many varied activities will be held on campus Saturday afternoon from 2:30 - 5 p.m., followed by a wine-and-cheese reception hosted at the home of Dr. Spainhower and his wife, Joanne.

"Side by Side by Son-dheim" will be the Lindenwood College Theatre presentation at 7 p.m. Saturday followed by a homecoming dance to which alumni and friends are invited.

A church service will be held Sunday morning in Sibley Chapel conducted by Dr. Spainhower, followed by a brunch in Ayres cafeteria.

Sunday at 3 p.m., a harpsichord recital will be presented by world famous harpsichordist Igor Kipnis at the Lindenwood Chapel of the St. Charles Presbyterian Church. The recital will be free to alumni.

Kipnis will play on a harpsichord made for Lindenwood by Peter Tkach. Partial funding for the harpsichord was donated by alumna Marjorie Purcell Herrick ('62) of Dallas, TX.

All Lindenwood alumni will receive a brochure this month which provides full details on the upcoming Alumni Reunion Weekend. Alumni are urged to set aside the October 28-30 weekend and make reservations early to attend this year's reunion.

Further information on the three-day event can be obtained by contacting the Alumni Affairs Office of Alumni Affairs at (314) 946-6912, extension #317.

ST. CHARLES CLUB - Club members would like to thank all of those who "drank a cup of tea for Lindenwood." Proceeds from the proxy tea party will make it possible for a local student to have a scholarship at Lindenwood this year.

For those who have not sent their tea party contributions to the Alumni Affairs Office, it is not too late, according to Anne Pals, treasurer of the St. Charles club.

A reminder to all Lindenwood alumni that there will be a potluck dinner at home of President and Mrs. James I. Spainhower at 6:30 p.m. September 19. The event is open to all St. Charles area alumni and their spouses. For reservations and further information, contact Glenda Schaefer at (314) 946-4990.

Lindenwood offers admission to qualified students regardless of race, creed, sex or national origin.

Alumnae donates maps

Mr. and Mrs. David R. Hess of St. Louis have donated $500 to the Lindenwood College for the purchase of new maps for the History Department. Mrs. Hess, the former Carol Fisher, is a 1968 graduate of Lindenwood.

Both read about Lindenwood's need for new maps in the Linden Word and responded with a $500 contribution for their purchase. The money was given in honor of James F. Hood, Ph.D., associate dean of faculty and dean of the Evening College, who was chairman of the History Department at the time Mrs. Hess attended Lindenwood.

Economic benefit is shown to St. Charles community

Data compiled for the current fund-raising campaign by the Lindenwood College indicate the institution's total direct and indirect economic benefit upon the St. Charles community is nearly $32 million annually.

The data reveals the total economic benefit derived from direct local Lindenwood expenditures is nearly $23.7 million.

The $23.7 million figure is derived from the "ripple effect" of money passing from one source to another. This effect is calculated at $1.99 for individual expenditures and $2.05 for institutional expenditures of Lindenwood.

"All of this means that Lindenwood produces more than $30 million in money spent and respent," said President James I. Spainhower. "Due to inflation and college expenses, this figure is increasing at 12 percent annually."

With nearly 340 full and part-time employees, Lindenwood is one of the largest private sector employers in St. Charles county. Its gross payroll last year was $3.8 million, which represents 46 percent of the institution's $8.2 million operating budget for the previous fiscal year.

Prepared to aid the institution's current $700,000 fund-raising campaign, the data indicates Lindenwood purchases about $2.9 million annually in goods and services in the St. Charles area. Representing about two-thirds of the institution's total expenditures that do not include salaries and wages, this amount is for equipment, printing, maintenance goods, supplies, utilities, insurance coverages, food services and travel expenditures.

This year, it is estimated that Lindenwood employees will spend more than $3.1 million for goods and services, with the majority of this amount earmarked in the St. Charles area.

In addition to the $6.6 million which Lindenwood students pay for tuition and room and board, they also spend in excess of $4.2 million. The majority of this amount will be spent locally for such things as rent, entertainment, food, clothing, television and stereo equipment and automobiles.

Giving - good for you and us!

One's desire to make a charitable contribution to Lindenwood should be motivated by a commitment to the institution's new direction, mission and leadership. It also should be motivated by an understanding of recent changes in tax laws that encourage gifts to educational institutions like Lindenwood.

The following is a brief summary of how these recent changes in the tax laws can benefit you and your estate by a charitable gift.

CASH GIFTS

Every time a person makes a gift to Lindenwood, the federal government shares in giving part of your gift, depending upon one's tax bracket.

For example, assuming that you are in the 30 percent tax bracket after itemized deductions and personal exemptions, a gift to Lindenwood will cost you 70 percent. If you are in the 50 percent tax rate bracket, the gift will cost you 50 percent through the federal government's 50 percent share in the gift.

If you are considering a major gift, the government also permits you to carry the balance of the gift forward for up to five additional years if you are not able to take the full amount of the gift as a charitable income tax deduction in the current year. The amount of deduction is 50 percent of your adjusted gross income.

REAL ESTATE GIFTS

Gifts of real estate that are held more than nine months are deductible at fair-market value and, when properly given, enable one to bypass all capital gains.

You may have highly appreciated land or other real estate that you have depreciated on your books, and this type of gift may be the best way for you to make a gift to the Lindenwood College.

PERSONAL PROPERTY

The federal government permits gifts of tangible personal property, such as books, antiques or paintings, if they are related to charitable purposes of Lindenwood and if they are held for more than nine months. The tax advantages are similar to the laws for gifts of appreciated securities or property.

LIFE INSURANCE

For many donors, a gift of life insurance may be the best way for one to make a gift. College friends and supporters can sign over their life insurance to Lindenwood or they can take out insurance policies, naming the Lindenwood College as the beneficiary.

There are a number of ways to accomplish gifts by the use of life insurance. To explore the various opportunities available, the college suggests that those who are interested talk to their attorneys, insurance agents or the Office of Institutional Development for complete details.

GIFTS IN MEMORY

Lindenwood has established a number of various methods to accomplish gifts in honor or in memory of a friend or loved one. Complete information on various ways to establish such a charitable gift can be obtained by contacting the institution.

GIFT BY WILL, BEQUEST

As a not-for-profit institution, Lindenwood has been supported historically by its friends, many of whom have included the college in their wills.

Lindenwood's legal counsel has prepared a number of suggested paragraphs on how you can remember the college in your will. The institution can supply you with selected paragraphs or you can talk directly to your attorney for passages to be incorporated as part of your will.

With recent changes in tax laws that encourage charitable giving to educational institutions like the Lindenwood College, we invite you to explore the full range of possibilities with Edward D. Watkins, vice-president for institutional development at (314) 946-6912, extension #337.

Conover services held

Faculty and staff members join together in conveying sympathies to the family of the Rev. C. Eugene Conover, Lindenwood professor emeritus who died August 5 from cancer at the age of 79.

A St. Charles resident, the Rev. Conover was an ordained minister in the Presbyterian Church and professor of philosophy and religion at Lindenwood from 1948-70.

Active within his profession and community, he was past president of the St. Charles Rotary Club and was active in the St. Charles Historical Society, the Lindenwood Chapter of the American Association of University Professors, and the American Academy of Religion.

The Rev. Conover is survived by his widow, Christine, and two brothers, Merrill of Philadelphia and Donald of Cincinnati. Services were held August 10 with entombment in St. Charles Memorial Gardens.

The family has requested that donations be made to Lindenwood College in the Rev. Conover's memory.

"Tricks of the Trade - Trade of the Tricks" is the theme for the regional conference of the Midwest Society for Photographic Education, scheduled October 14-15 at the Lindenwood College campus in St. Charles.

Persons who want to participate or present papers at the two-day meeting should contact Hans Levi, assistant professor of photography, at the Lindenwood College, St. Charles, MO 63301, or phone (314) 946-6912, extension #283.

A Gift of Real Estate?

Have you taken a look at your real estate holdings lately and wondered how you could increase your income from them during this period of recession?

Do you have some land you have been trying to sell but can't—or, at least, not without considerable monetary loss to you?

Are you looking for a way to make money while helping the Lindenwood College?

We have just the help you need. Lindenwood can now accept gifts of real estate.

We can help you realize additional income through an outright gift from you or through a "life estate contract".

We want to help you market your real estate and to make it profitable. May we hear from you?

Vatican exhibit featured in AFA Chicago tour

"The Vatican Collections: the Papacy and the Art" and "China: 7,000 Years of Discovery" are exhibits to be viewed by the Associates of the Fine Arts (AFA) when the group tours the Art Institute of Chicago and the Chicago Museum of Science & Industry September 30 through October 2.

The AFA is a Lindenwood College and St. Charles community organization of 150 area art enthusiasts.

The Vatican exhibit, consisting of nearly 240 works of art, is designed to show the richness and variety of the Vatican collections which have been developed over the centuries through commissions and acquisitions. The Chicago showing along with exhibits in New York City and Los Angeles has taken years to develop and has been financed privately at a cost of $8 million for security, transportation and setup. The range of time of the works extends from the examples of classic Greek sculpture to such 20th century works as Rouault's "Holy Face."

Scheduled at the Museum of Science & Industry is the Chinese exhibit, which illustrates the contributions which the Chinese have made historically to science, technology and the arts. Of particular interest to art enthusiasts will be demonstra-internationally-recognized experts in appraisal.

The Lindenwood program was initiated in 1979 with the help of St. Louis and national members of the American Society of Appraisers (ASA). Valuation Sciences is the nationally-recognized academic degree program for the profession of appraising.

Now, this unique program also is available in a format for residential students. Undergraduates can take selected studies, finish their bachelor's degree and then complete the master's degree in one year. First-time graduate students, given sufficient background, can complete a master's degree in one year. People interested in coming to Lindenwood for this exciting program should contact Miriam King-Watts, Director of Adult Admissions at (314) 946-6912, extension 209, or Dr. Richard Rickert at extension 227.

tions by artists from the People's Republic in the techniques of papermaking, wood block printing, bamboo crafts, doll making, batik and embroidery.

The fee is $73 for AFA members and $83 for nonmembers. It includes bus transportation to and from Chicago, two nights of accommodations at the Palmer House in Chicago and admission to the Chinese exhibit. Tickets for the Vatican exhibit, priced at $4 each, can be obtained in Chicago.

A deposit of $15 will hold a reservation until September 7 when full payment is due. Checks should be made payable to the Associates of the Fine Arts. For further information and reservation procedures, contact W. Dean Eckert, AFA member and Lindenwood College professor of art, at (314) 946-7689.

Fund raising

$44,760 from alumni throughout the country' $44,000 from the board of directors; $50,793 from friends and supporters of the institution; and $21,072 from faculty and staff members.

Contributions from Lindenwood's 320 faculty and staff members and its board of directors paved the way to soliciting financial help from other groups, Spainhower said. "The total $700,000 goal is ambitious, but with the splendid beginnings our own faculty and staff have made, I am very optimistic that by the time we begin our 1984-85 fund-raising drive next March, we will have reached this year's goal.

"The support shown from our own faculty and staff as well as the college's board of directors demonstrates to the community Lindenwood's united commitment toward financial solvency," he said. "It also has formed the groundwork for raising additional monies from other sources to achieve our $700,000 goal."

The president cited alumni contributions as another significant aspect of this year's fund-raising campaign, saying they have more than doubled over last year's giving. Between January 1 and August 1, $44,000 has been contributed, compared to $23,137 during the same seven-month period last year.

Contributions in all other aspects of the campaign also are significantly higher than in previous years, the president added.

Article prompts offer

An article about the college's computer needs that appeared in the premiere issue of the Linden Word has prompted a generous offer by a Lindenwood alumnus.

Edward A. Lovinguth ('73), the owner of Dominion Computers in Roanoke, VA, read about Lindenwood's need for computer hardware and software to assist the institution in starting a computer science major program.

He called the Development Office after reading the article, offering to sell some equipment at cost and to provide free software to the college. He said he was intrigued by the college's new leadership and direction it was taking to meet its traditional and important roles in higher education.

Lovinguth's wife, Sandra (nee Sather) is a 1971 graduate of Lindenwood and currently serves as admissions director at Hollins College in Roanoke.

Arrangements currently are being made with Dominion Computers for the possibility of obtaining equipment for Lindenwood's computer science program, which will begin this fall with several classes.

Name change, mission adopted separate and diversified interests," said President James I. Spainhower, cochairman of the Long-Range Planning Committee.

"We are one college with separate and distinct means to deliver many educational services. It is only proper and right that we use the name that this institution has been known by for more than 100 years," said Robert F. Hyland, chairman of the Lindenwood College Board of Directors.

In recommending a new mission statement for Lindenwood, the committee said, "Lindenwood has undergone tremendous changes in the past 20 years. It is time for the college to pause and think through what it has been, has become and wants to be."

Briefly, the new mission statement contains these key parts that:

- Reaffirm the teachings and intellectual and moral values of the Judaeo-Christian faith as the value orientation of Lindenwood College;
- Call for the continuation of Lindenwood's strong commitment to higher education that is academically strong and steeped in the liberal arts tradition;
- Point out the superiority of educational experiences in which students work while they learn, and commit the college to encourage all students to work either on or off campus and/or participate in an internship program;

•And, speak to the need to fashion a campus environment that is wholesome without unrealism and is orderly without regimentation.

The statement continues, "To these ends, Lindenwood is committed to:

- A spirit of open and earnest inquiry and of dialogue among disciplines.
- Academic freedom and personal responsibility.
- High academic standards and the pursuit of excellence.
- Respect of persons for each other, understanding of divergent views, ethical and intellectual integrity, empathy, a concern for justice and for life-enhancing activity.
- Critical awareness of the impact of scientific, technological, economic literary, political, artistic and socio-scientific developments.

•Work experience to enhance the value and usefulness of liberal arts education.

•And, service to the larger community of which we are a part."

Commenting on the new mission statement, Spainhower said it "retains the commitment to quality liberal arts education that has characterized Lindenwood from its beginning.

"It also states distinctly Lindenwood's commitment to its religious heritage, to innovative educational opportunities for adults and to educational experiences that are highly work-oriented," he added.

The Long-Range Planning Committee, cochaired by Spainhower and Hyland, was appointed in January. It was charged with redefining and sharpening Lindenwood's statement of mission and purpose in light of its past 20 years of history; with establishing immediate and long-range goals; and with making recommendations on policy and procedural change to the Lindenwood Board of Directors.
