Volunteer leadership, volunteer service and voluntary support are essential to the progress of an independent college and a strong society. For one hundred and fifty years Lindenwood has prospered because men and women have given of themselves and their substance to support the cause of higher education and thereby enhance the quality of life. That tradition continues today. This initial issue of THE LINDENWOODS looks at volunteerism in the many sectors of the Lindenwood community.

Future teachers profit from retired professionals' expertise

by Elizabeth Fischer O'Brien

Retired public school professionals in St. Charles may not remain retired for long. A new concept of teaching, which utilizes such professionals in the training of undergraduate education majors, is now being used at The Lindenwood Colleges. The program is required for Lindenwood undergraduate education students working toward bachelor's degrees in elementary and secondary education.

Nine recently retired teachers who taught in the St. Charles public schools for many years are now assisting in this program called Retired Educational Professionals in Teacher Education, or REPTE.

"We call them the repeat group," says Dr. John S. Burd, originator of the program and chairman of Lindenwood's Education Department. "It's a completely new type of program which works with undergraduate pre-service teachers in developing skills necessary to be an effective teacher. These retired teachers are sharp intellectually and professionally, and they bring with them a perspective which is not available from other instructors."

Future teachers learn how to read out loud effectively, speak extemporaneously, develop proper handwriting skills, use creativity and get their message across effectively. They also learn the correct use of grammar, word pronunciation, inflection and logic. Video-tapes are made while the students conduct a class, and the tapes are played back for evaluation and discussion of their performances and how they could be improved.

Presently each public school professional is assigned three students and works with them on a flexible schedule during the 15-week semester. The 24 students involved are currently enrolled in the class, "Orientation to Opportunities in Education." Students must take the course before they can continue in the education program.

"It is strictly volunteer work, donating their time and service," says Dr. Burd of the professionals. "They teach our students on the Lindenwood campus, or students go to their homes for sessions.

"These retired professionals also develop a good relationship with students in a give and take situation, where students can learn from their experiences. They're very alert people and this program allows them to remain involved by using their skills and knowledge to benefit the whole teaching profession."

Mrs. Janelle Tuder is a first grade teacher who retired after 39 years of teaching in Princeton, Mo., Kirksville, Mo., and at Lincoln Elementary School in St. Charles. Mrs. Lena Ellis is a former business education teacher at St. Charles High School who retired last year after teaching for 20 years. They teach a class together in the new program.

Dr. John Burd and Mrs. Vivian Downs in a seminar with Lindenwood students; Kathy Kleba, Taryn Moore, Becky King.

"I teach the secondary level needs and Mrs. Tudor teaches what is needed at the grade school level," says Mrs. Ellis. "I think it has worked very well in mixing view points. We both try to give the students what they can't get in books. Books can't tell the whole story."

In the first session of the Ellis-Tuder class students read material out loud as class members listened and commented on each other's use of expression, diction, voice volume and eye contact. During the second session, Mrs. Ellis and Mrs. Tudor corrected students' assigned papers. In the third session, students were video-taped as they taught a hypothetical class, after which they could see for themselves how they looked and sounded as they conducted the class.

"When you hear you own voice on tape, it sounds differently than you think," says Mrs. Ellis. "It's essential that the teacher know what he or she is doing. Sometimes people do distracting things while they are teaching, not realizing what they're doing. This is one of the purposes of the program. We're all being critical to be helpful, learning by trial and error."

Mrs. Tudor agrees. She points out to her students that any time they present a lesson to a class, they may make an error. "It's only human," she says. "Seeing is believing. Self criticism is your best judge."

"It's always enjoyable to work with young people and wonderful to share any knowledge with others. Things I've learned the hard way, I'm glad to pass on to others. I would have been happy to receive such training and experience in college as these Lindenwood students are getting in this program."

Students go out to area schools during the semester to observe teaching in classroom situations. They agree that such experience helps prepare them for the time they must get up in front of their own class. "To get up and do it is different from watching and listening," says Maureen Cahill, a junior in the Lindenwood education program. "This program helps. We're experiencing what the

"There's so much expertise in retired professionals which is not being tapped at all. The students say that just listening to the professionals about situations experienced and how the teaching profession has changed over the years gives them good insights."

classroom is like and what to expect."

In addition to Mrs. Ellis and Mrs. Tudor, the professionals participating in the program and the St. Charles schools in which they taught at the time of retirement are: Mildred Heye, principal, Lincoln Elementary; Helen Schnare, St. Charles High; Lucile Meyer, Willie Harris Elementary; Robert Blubaugh, T.L. Hardin Junior High; Emma Blubaugh, Benton Elementary; Vivian Downs, principal, Blackhurst Elementary; and Marie Paugh, Monroe Elementary.

"Mrs. Downs was the first principal of Blackhurst Elementary," says Dr. Burd. "But very few of these professionals look as if they could be retirement age. It would be interesting to add the total number of years they have all taught. I would guess it would total more than 200 years."

Miss Heye, who is also a Lindenwood alumna, spent 16 years teaching fourth, fifth and sixth grades at Lincoln Elementary, and her last 21 years as principal. "I think the program is excellent," she says. "The students seem to enjoy it. They ask me many questions and are very cooperative and interested in learning."

"I try to teach them the philosophical ideals of teaching as well as what to do to be a good teacher. I've spent the last several weeks going over fifth grade public school text books so that I can show the students what to expect in teaching from these materials."

Since the program has started, Dr. Burd says other retired professionals have shown an interest. "When the need arises, we certainly want to use them," he says. "There's so much expertise in retired professionals which is not being tapped at all. The students say that just listening to the professionals about situations experienced and how the teaching profession has changed over the years gives them good insights."

"I'm convinced that the expertise of retired professionals must be tapped in the training of school teachers. If I had the funds, I'd hire one retiree full-time each semester. More than ever I see a group of professionals who still care enough to give of themselves to improve education in general. And they really do care, because they're doing it purely as volunteers."

A comment from Lucile Meyer sums it up, "This experience is of much value to me. I came across a quotation from Emerson which is apropos here: 'The days come and go like muffled and veiled figures sent from a distant friendly party; but they say nothing, and if we do not use the gifts they bring, they carry them as silently away.' I feel as if I am 'using the gifts' my past years of teaching have given me. I hope I am using them successfully in this instance, with humor and understanding."

Volunteers aren't amateurs anymore

(Reprinted by permission of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat)

TRUE OR FALSE: A volunteer is a lady in a pink smock who wheels a toy cart from hospital room to room.

True, but . . . Don't forget her clout, her political/social knowledge and her financial know-how.

That's the gutsy, tradition-breaking message from eight Lindenwood students enrolled in the college's Voluntary Association Administration Program.

The students, who range from a back-to-work housewife to an ex-pastor turned Pied Piper of O'Fallon's volunteers, are guinea pigs. They're the first enrolled in Lindenwood's program, which grew out of a national need for trained administrators in the voluntary segment.

AS ONE student, who's been working a number of years for a church-related group, described her plight: "I've been working without a degree and without specific administrative and management skills. The trend, it seems, is to take a person who has been efficient at one level and make them an administrator. You're rewarded with a position you have no training for. You do a lot of bumbling."

The Lindenwood program, though small in numbers, seeks to smooth out the bumbling. Eight students, many of whom take time off from full-time salaried jobs, meet once a week for three hours with an instructor. Topics range from budgeting to policy making and legislation.

In addition, students spend 15 or 20 hours a week on independent study, research, reading and writing. After a minimum of three 14-week trimesters, depending upon past educational and life experience backgrounds, students may graduate with bachelor's or master's degrees in administration of voluntary and non-profit organizations. Cost per trimester is $867.

October classes are now organizing. Students may enroll for a single trimester rather than aiming towards a degree.

The program, which is thought to be the most comprehensive in the country, is also offered on Lindenwood's campuses in Washington and Santa Monica, Calif.

LOCALLY THE program is run more like an academic share-and-tell than a sleep-inducing oratory. Students sit, lounge and stretch around a long table at the St. Louis Center of Lindenwood 4, the college's individualized education branch at 4653 Maryland Ave.

The building itself, which is bigger on plants and basics than it is on elaborate furnishings, stands between a photo gallery and an antique shop in the tree-shaded Central West End.

Art Erb, former Lutheran church pastor and now founder, creator and director of a multi-service agency in O'Fallon, arrives early for a lunch of sardines and green peppers, which he devours from the blade of his penknife.

Dorothy Balfanz-Teas flies in from her Mason City, Iowa, home. She is a consultant for the National Center for Voluntary Action, the umbrella agency for training and education of volunteers.

Where job-related chitchat stops and class actually starts is difficult to tell. Instructor Bernard LaFayette Jr., an adjunct assistant professor at Washington University's school of social work with a doctorate in education from Harvard University, is not one for formal lectures. He recalls giving three so far to his voluntary administration students — two planned and one spontaneous.

His approach, wherever possible, is to let the class take over.

ONE STUDENT complained that she was "about to vomit" at the number of times an administrator called her a "nice, sweet girl" when she offered to begin a volunteer program at his hospital. He wasn't taking her seriously, she maintained.

One student advised "conflict strategy" — recruit the volunteers and have them come face to face with the staff. Mrs. Balfanz-Teas, whose volunteer experience goes back 30 years, issued a warning — Be sure you know where your program is going. If you try to set something up and fail, you may kill it for volunteers for a long time.

LaFayette put the whole thing together: Either 1) use the authoritarian approach and appoint someone to run the program 2) collaborate with others and get the enthusiasm perking 3) provoke a conflict or 4) recruit a group of three staff people to serve on an advisory committee.

LaFayette believes in a blend of theoretical and practical, something class members often find difficult to grasp. "The students are experience oriented," he commented. "They have a tendency to step away from raw power."

LAFAYETTE DOESN'T. He dropped out of college his senior year to become one of the founders of the Southern Negro Leaders Conference (SNLC). As a Freedom Rider in the civil rights movement, he was working with the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., when King was assassinated. For his own involvement in demonstrations, said LaFayette, he was jailed 23 times.

He was also national coordinator for the Poor People's Campaign in Washington and one of those who organized anti-lead poisoning confrontations in Chicago.

Once he completed school, his question was, "How do I take what I've been doing all my life and use it?"

LaFayette, an ordained Baptist minister, began teaching a course in nonviolent strategies for social change at Washington University. Then along came Dr. John McClusky, faculty administrator for Lindenwood 4 and director of the Voluntary Administration Program.

He asked LaFayette to bring his political awareness for working within a system to class. LaFayette accepted.

BOTH LAFAYETTE and McClusky take the need for volunteering seriously. Consider the increase in leisure time and the number of unemployed, suggests LaFayette. What better way to channel time than into voluntary action?

"It's so healthy to have people who care enough about government and their communities to take action for change," said LaFayette.

Bernard LaFayette Jr.

McClusky, a political scientist, speaks of the rewards of volunteering. "A person's sense of self and social worth shouldn't be dependent on income," he insisted. "Activities should be judged on their own merit. Volunteering gives you the opportunity to take initiative without being under the control of the personnel director of some corporation."

Still, the voluntary segment may have more than its share of problems. First off, the fact that Lindenwood's program didn't develop until 1976 says something about the worth the job market gives volunteering.

The educational areas that develop most slowly are those with the least economic value in the marketplace, explained McClusky. Therefore, charging someone to learn to run a nonprofit organization that probably hasn't had a day in the black in history was a rather revolutionary step.

THE WOMEN'S movement was another force to contend with. The movement is ambivalent on volunteering, said McClusky. "Yet they believe a volunteer has inferior status and demeans herself to work without pay," he continued.

Lindenwood officials aren't discouraged. "Offering programs in volunteering, we're unique. Of course, in an emerging field, it's not so hard to be unique," emphasized McClusky with a laugh.

Views on volunteering in the 1970s

What does it mean to work with a voluntary organization in the '70s? According to the eight students in Lindenwood's Voluntary Association Administration Program, it can mean a lot more than running a flower shop or passing out hot meals.

CHARLES ELLIS, a sociologist, an inspector for General Motors, a dabbler in real estate and co-chairman of the deacon board for his church said: "I think of myself as a new breed of volunteer. I'm interested in political action. In the black church I've learned that decision-making power has been centered on the pastor and the chairman of the board. There's been no feedback from the congregation.

"When you're making $8,000 a year and have five kids to raise, your energies and efforts go toward basic survival.

"I'm also interested in improving low-income housing. The situation is all messed up. There's been no progress in five years. To get a window-pane removed is a problem.

"I realize General Motors, where I'm employed, is unshakable by me. I may decide what kind of pen we use in my department, but nothing major.

"Volunteering opens up a whole new picture. If you devote enough of your time to something, you may put your finger on the problem. You can work to help lift somebody up."

LYNN BROEDER, program developer at the Presbytery of Elijah Parish Lovejoy: "When you're working with people who have crises in their life, you get to know their crises. With an ecumenical group of 300 to 400 people from across the state I worked to increase Aid to Dependent Children benefits.

"Legislation was passed between 1973 and 1975 to increase state benefits by $30 million, which amounted to about $10 per person per month.

"We had no expertise. We worked because we felt so strongly."

DOROTHY BALFANZ-TEAS, consultant for the National Center for Voluntary Action: "I come from a practical background where I've learned by doing. I've been training board members for 10 years.

"I find that today these people are feeling more threatened. They've been exposed to litigation suits. They want an understanding of what they do and how their staffs function.

"It's my thesis that a board with educational experience will make better decisions, be more secure and meet changes better than an untrained board."

"I come from a practical background where I've learned by doing."

Teresa J. Welch, assistant professor of chemistry, has received an appointment to serve as advisor, analyst and evaluator for all science-related legislation for the Missouri House of Representatives. Her appointment as a John G. Christy Faculty Research Fellow was announced by Kenneth J. Rothman, Speaker of the House. Mrs. Welch's is the first appointment made under the newly established fellowship program. She will be on leave of absence from Lindenwood during the spring term.

Lindenwood has received an $8,000 grant from the Monticello College Foundation of Godfrey, Ill. The grant will provide $4,500 for the continuance of the Monticello Scholars Program and $3,500 for new Monticello Scholars. Grants are given by the foundation to programs which assist in advancing education for women. Monticello was incorporated as a college in 1843 and as a foundation in 1971, when the college closed.

Dr. William C. Spencer, Lindenwood president, has been elected president of the Independent Colleges and Universities of Missouri. ICUM is a non-profit association of 27 private colleges and universities in the state. The organization was established to coordinate governmental relations efforts for member institutions and to act as a central agency for discussion of current problems in higher education.

David E. Babcock

David E. Babcock, chairman of the Board and chief executive officer of the May Department Stores Company, has been elected to membership on Lindenwood's Board of Directors. The announcement was made by Robert Hyland, chairman of the Board of Directors, and William C. Spencer, president of The Colleges.

Mr. Babcock was named to his present position in 1976, having served as chief administrative officer and senior executive vice president of the May Department Stores Company earlier. He is widely known for his work in personnel and management development in the retail industry and is the first executive with that background to head a major American retail corporation.

Lindenwood's total enrollment for the fall semester is 1,727. This is an increase of 127 over last year's figure. There are 1,441 undergraduates. The 286 graduate students are in the following categories: 117 Lindenwood 4 students; 36 students in the Master of Education program; and 133 pursuing a Master of Business Administration degree. Full-time students account for 804; part-time students, 923. There are 680 men enrolled, and 1,047 women. Resident students number 224; there are 708 in the Evening College; and a total of 240 in the four Lindenwood 4 Centers.

honor roll of donors

from the president

One hundred and fifty years old! Recently as I headed the academic procession of Missouri colleges and universities (the oldest is first) at the inauguration of Harvey Saunders, the new president of Westminster College (incidentally Dr. Franc L. McCluer was there and was given a standing ovation for his magnificent contribution to higher education in Missouri), I realized again that Mary Sibley's vision and daring are hard for her successors to match. She founded a college where none, except a fledgling training school for the clergy (St. Louis University), existed. She dared to challenge the status quo to offer advanced education to young women. She worked to serve the needs of a frontier society, to bring honor and attention to her native community of St. Louis and to her home town of St. Charles. She felt a special responsibility for her students, but she also helped soldiers and Indians and tradesmen. What a heritage we have to uphold.

The year 1977 has been a wonderful one for Lindenwood. Alumni, friends and supporters from many parts of the world responded to the letters, appeals, phonathons, and personal visits that we all made.

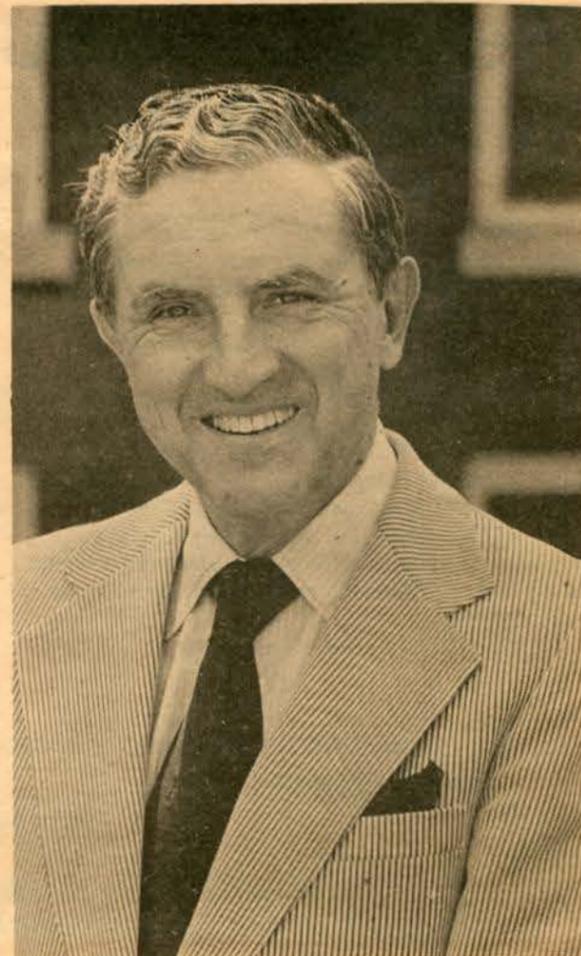

With a record enrollment of 1725 this fall, The Colleges move forward. Our new theatre program has already achieved spectacular successes; the new Bachelor of Medicine and other programs in the health professions are attracting wide attention; the new covered riding arena is a fine facility to support the rapidly-increasing enrollment in Lindenwood's already-large equitation programs; and the new stadium has well served the needs of a flourishing and promising soccer team.

The Student Activities Center is under construction, and when completed in the spring, will merge the two red houses into a complex for student organizations and government offices, lounge areas, recreation rooms, and magnificent expanded snack bar. The entire Lindenwood community, aged 18 to 80, will share a common meeting place.

I could go on and on writing about the latest events and developments at Lindenwood, but I've got a better idea. Let's meet face-to-face to get better acquainted and to share information and thoughts about The Colleges. Visit us on campus or we'll visit you whenever an interested group can be assembled. Thinking, talking and working together is the best way to make Lindenwood an even greater institution in the years following its 150th birthday.

Cordially,

Alumni giving reaches new high

ANNUAL FUND

Through June 15, 1977, 1216 alumni have responded, compared to 787 last year. This represents an increase of 429 in alumni participation and an increase of 112% in dollars. It marks a new high in participation on the part of loyal alumni!

MATCHING GIFT PROGRAMS

Several companies matched employee gifts to Lindenwood this year. This matching gift program is widespread through the U.S. and donors may not realize that their employers participate in this program. Upon request, a list of all participating companies is available from the Lindenwood Development Office.

COMMUNITY SUPPORT

Sixty-three business men and friends of Lindenwood made 272 calls on behalf of The Colleges in late April. Eugene Ayers served as the 1977 chairman. Results totaled $25,367, an increase of 6.5% over 1976 figures. Chairman Ayers attributed the excellent result to "dedicated volunteers and a matching gift challenge by First National Bank of St. Charles."

PHONATHON

A total of $14,715 was given by 522 donors who responded to a concentrated Phonathon Campaign in March. St. Charles and St. Louis alumni, students, faculty and staff made calls to alumni all over the country.

PLANNED GIVING

An increasing number of Lindenwood alumni and friends are interested in the benefits derived through thoughtful estate planning — benefits such as minimizing taxes and guaranteed life income. Many include Lindenwood in their plans. If you wish, the Development Office staff will be happy to assist you with your plans.

PARENTS' FUND

Several parents of students and former students gave generously to this fund. Participants may designate the use of the gift or give on an unrestricted basis. Mr. and Mrs. Paul Knoblauch of St. Charles headed this effort in 1977.

LINDEN LEAF SOCIETY

Alumni contributing $100 or more annually become members of this special organization. Their generosity is much appreciated and The Colleges are proud of their fine support. Linden Leaf Society members are designated by an asterisk on the alumni donor list.

OTHER GIFTS

Gifts were also received for Lindenwood's Beta Chi Horse Show; through the Associates of the Fine Arts at Lindenwood and through the Missouri Colleges Fund, of which Lindenwood is a member.

Sesquicentennial Fair benefits

Campus and community joined to celebrate Lindenwood's 150th birthday with a Sesquicentennial Fair on Oct. 22. Events began with the planting of a linden tree in St. Charles' Frontier Park, followed by a parade to the campus. Students dressed as Founders George and Mary Sibley led the parade. The passage of 150 years was symbolized by modes of transportation represented in the parade — a horse and carriage, vintage automobiles and an electric car and tram. Along the parade route, clowns frolicked to the music of the Duchesne High School Band.

With its theme "Between Yesterday and Tomorrow," the fair benefited a "now" project, the construction of a new Student Activities Center. Fair chairperson Mrs. William C. Spencer has announced that almost $7000 was raised to help finance the student center. Construction has begun on the wood and glass structure which will join the two existing red houses in the center of the campus.

its new student center

Providing delight for both the young and the young-in-heart, fair activities included horseback rides, antique car rides, a spook house, a benefit performance of Lindenwood's production of "Godspell," and an auction of donated merchandise and services. Homemade goodies were for sale in "The Pantry Shelf" and treasures from times past were offered in "Grandma's Attic," sponsored by Lindenwood alumni. "The New Leaf" and "The Art Gallery" featured plants and works of art. "Yesterday" was represented by an historical exhibit in Sibley Hall arranged by emeriti faculty members and the St. Charles Historical Society; "tomorrow" featured computer predictions of individual bio-rhythms.

Oct. 22, 1977 — it was a golden day and a golden occasion as Lindenwood reflected on a proud heritage and looked toward a future filled with promise.

California came to the Sequicentennial Reunion and added a great deal to the fun. Who else had a headress competition? Marge Turpin with a Lily Dache creation of nylon net and what-nots and Marian Ellis in bandages from a tumble she took on the way to the president's reception were easily the winners. Penny Harrison, 1977 president, brought a check for $800 from the Southern California Club. From left: Betty Burnham Ziegler, Marjorie Turpin, Marian Titus Ellis, Penny Harrison, Helen Chesbrough Kinell, Sharon Littlejohn Adler, Joan Dykema, Kathrine Perry Kaiser, Carin Chapman West, Gloria Omohundro Palmer, Judith Keniston Nettles, Kathy Kaiser Grogan. Not pictured is Margaretha Clark.

Alumna flies in Powder Puff Derby

by Betty Keighley Engstrom, '49

As I call the Torrance, Calif., Control Tower for landing, my voice has a small cracking quality, for my thoughts are of the "Sentimental Journey" that has now come to an end. Just two weeks before, 140 airplanes were flagged off from Palm Springs airport to make a commemorative flight to Tampa, Fla.

It was at the urging of the Smithsonian Institute that the 30th Anniversary Flight of the first Powder Puff Derby be flown as the Smithsonian Milestone of Flight. This would be the completion of a race which was the best known activity in women's aviation; tracing the same route as the first race 30 years before.

It was an historic flight, for many of the racers and planes had a part in aviation's beginnings. Several of the pilots were charter members of the Ninety-Nines and, with Amelia Earhart, formed this international group of women pilots; some had flown this Derby 24 times. One has her license signed by Orville Wright; some are former WASP pilots during World War II; others are corporate pilots, instructors, or examiners. All the women had at least a rating to fly in instrument weather, and wide experience in cross country flying.

It was a cross-section of women . . . professional pilots, housewives, mothers and daughters, nurses, service people and you name it. Fittingly enough, the last plane waved off was a twin Aero-Commander (with eye lashes and brows painted on the nose cowling), piloted by Jerri Cobb, the only U.S. woman qualified for space flight.

This was not a speed race as it had been the other 29 years, but one of navigation skills and proficiency contests; one of bringing aviation to communities across the nation; and, one of great comradeship and fun. (Especially the night at Thomasville, Ga., where due to the lack of motel rooms, the local mortician opened up space in you know where!!)

Or how about the townspeople of Monroeville, Ala., who the same night, rounded up any crew members in their town and presented them with a buffet and cocktail party, or the big hearted residents of the city of El Paso serving up a huge Mexican buffet and margarita party?

There were trophies presented to the top 10 winners, as well as the winners of each leg of the flight, but everybody was a winner in this race! We all won friendships in the towns where we landed, and among our fellow pilots, who won't be forgotten; and the great satisfaction in knowing that out of 30 trans-continental races, there was not one fatality.

So as I tied down my airplane after the return trip home and peeled off the race number (91), I gave her a pat of thanks for her faithful purring engine as we crossed our beautiful nation of freedom. Where else in the world could a group of women pilots, or any pilots, exercise their freedoms in such a way?

May all the little boys and girls who snuggled up as close as they dared to see those flying machines have their dreams of flying come true, including the lady in Tampa who came up to me wondering if at age 65 it was too late to fulfill her dream to fly solo in an airplane.

The "Sentimental Journey" is complete. There is a spot on the shelf for my copilot and me to place our trophy for first place on the leg between Tucson and El Paso, and third place on the Dallas to Shreveport leg.

We came in 27th out of the 140 airplanes, but the biggest trophy of all was the joy of flying the race as a salute to all those pioneer women in aviation

Continuing education graduate finds life in India stimulating

Patricia Gass, a graduate of Deaconess School of Nursing, attended Lindenwood in 1971-72 to complete a bachelor of arts degree in nursing and English. She and her husband, The Reverend Eric Gass, are missionaries for United Church Board for World Ministries (United Church of Christ) and are working in Bombay, India. Pat made many friends here and, having lived and traveled in many countries, she brought a very cosmopolitan viewpoint to the classroom.

Pat and Eric travel to many parts of India, and periodically to Nepal and Sri Lanka. He serves on boards of institutions, assists missionaries with their personal requirements, serves as one of the managers of the Inter-Mission Business Office, and is generally concerned with helping the Disciples and United Church Board engage in a meaningful partnership in mission with the Indian church.

Both Pat and Eric were involved in arrangements for the Indian portion of the major UCC leaders' Asia Seminar in February 1976 and report that it was, "an exhausting but very challenging and educational task. The group was one which we were abundantly proud to introduce to key leaders of the Indian church and nation, including Indira Gandhi."

Pat has two main areas of personal involvement: the community health program of the Apnalaya slum clinic and an international cultural club. An insight into her involvement with the clinic can be gained from her comment in a recent letter: "Yesterday I spent the day struggling with bureaucracy as I took the Assistant Director of Health of Maharashtra (our state) to see our community development project. We have been trying to get the government to depute to us an experienced public health nurse to help train the illiterate slum residents in health and nutrition.

"We hope to follow the model of taking persons from within the community and teaching them to become teachers so that they can teach their own people to change and improve their eating habits, child care habits, etc. . . . The government and World Health Organization people were impressed with the commitment of our volunteer workers."

Pat's real versatility is indicated by her activities in the cross-cultural women's organization. Can you imagine a more unique blending of cultures than the one she describes here?

"At noon I must go out to attend a practice. Our international cultural club is putting on a variety show. I am taking part in the Amrut Manthan folk ballet which is taken from Hindu mythology. It tells about the time when evil was about to overcome good, and to recover the nectar of immortality, which would ensure victory to the gods, the ocean was churned, using a mountain as the churner, and a snake wrapped around it to do the churning. The gods pulled the snake on one side and the demons pulled on the other side. After various things and goddesses were churned up, the poison of the world was churned up, drunk by Lord Shiva and then the Amrut, nectar of immortality, was churned up and given to the gods. I play Indra, king of the gods. I'm enjoying it very much. There is one Swiss woman participating and one Mexican. All the others are Indian.

"We continue to be stimulated to use every opportunity to see more of India and learn more of its history, art and religious traditions. We are fortunate to live in this great land, and rejoice that our children, Robb and Sandra, respond as happily as we to its people and its culture."

Alumni College plans are underway

"The Future: 2027" was chosen by the faculty committee as the general theme for Alumni College July 23-29, 1978. Subjects related to this theme which are being considered include bioethics and human engineering; moral and ethical guidelines; mainstreaming in education and its implications for the family; changing social systems; mass communications and retirement options. Dr. James Hood, chairman of the History Department, summarizes the discussion of the first planning session:

"We don't conceive this in any Buck Rogers sense of a remote time five centuries away. We will deal with the next twenty or twenty-five years, a time through which we all plan to live. We want take some of the major institutions and trends of our time--politics, the environment, international relations, religion and the churches, the city--and try to see what is happening now that will have impact on our future--and what we can and can't do about it.

"The sessions will reflect our conviction that only through understanding can we hope to help determine our future. By not taking thought about our future, either our personal one or the group future--we allow ourselves to become pawns to those who do take thought. The sessions will range from the theoretical--what will our cities be like in the year 2000?--to the practical--how can we best prepare for retirement in the uncertain economic conditions of today and tomorrow?"

There will be plenty of time, too, for swimming, tennis, music and art workshops, and field trips. Alumni will also enjoy many of the cultural and sports events in the area including open practices of the St. Louis Football Cardinals. Plan now to spend a mind-challenging, fulfilled vacation week at Lindenwood.

If alumni wish to make this a family vacation, the planned program for children permits participants to bring their families without the usual problems of having children along. Daytime activities include educational tours and recreation, using campus facilities and resources of the area.

Alumni will receive a detailed schedule and reservation form with costs early in the spring. However, we need to know how many are interested so planning can begin. Please return the coupon today indicating areas of interest and the number of persons who might wish to participate.

Report of the Alumnae Council

Ten members of the Alumnae Council and two alumnae members of the Board of Directors, Barbara Ringer Hamill and Dyke Steinbeck Barton, met on the campus October 20 and 21. The major items of interest on the agenda were revision of the Alumnae Constitution and Bylaws and planning for the Alumni College, July 23-29, 1978.

Sharon Serre Smith (with help from her husband, Chris, a lawyer who is a graduate of Lindenwood II) proposed a revised constitution and bylaws which would include representation from each of the four Colleges. The Council, with advice from the Deans, made a few minor adjustments. This revision will now be given to a committee from The Colleges and published in the next issue of the "News." It will be voted upon at the next annual meeting, July 29, 1978.

Dr. James Hood, chairman of the History Department, gave a brief report of the first planning meeting of faculty members who are enthusiastic about the Alumni College. (See story)

The Council voted to have the annual meeting and reunion on Saturday, July 29, the final day of the Alumni College. Alumni from each of the Colleges will be invited to attend for the entire week or for reunion day activities only. Local residents are urged to participate in both the Alumni College and special reunion day activities. REUNION YEAR CLASSES ARE THOSE ENDING IN 3 or 8.

Memorial scholarship established

The Jana Rae (Shimkus, '73 Maddox Memorial Award in Mathematics has been established by her husband, Daniel Maddox, '73. In describing the purpose of the award, Dan states the following:

"The award will be given to that freshman Lindenwood student who, in the opinion of the faculty of the Department of Mathematics, has demonstrated a combination of financial need and promise for a career in mathematics (or related sciences) during the first year of study. The award will be given on Honors Day in the spring and will be renewable for the sophomore, junior and senior years.

"It would be my hope that this award would enrich the Lindenwood experience for some of the Colleges' finest students, and that their subsequent successful lives would serve to illuminate the reputation and strength of the Colleges abroad. All this, in some small repayment to the institution which provided my wife with many of the fondest memories of her short life."

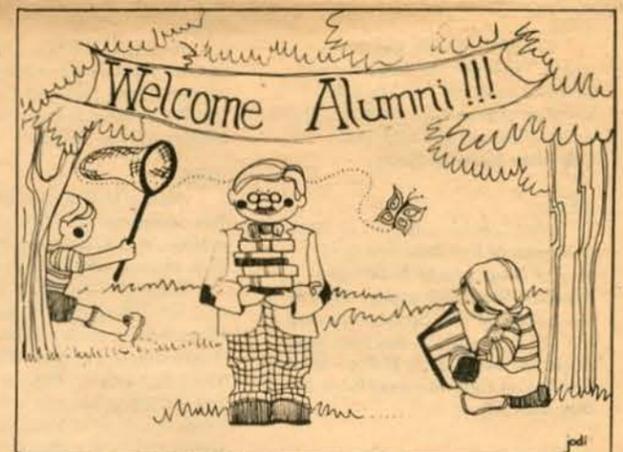

Jana Rae died October 6, 1977, at their home in Ann Arbor, Mich. Alumni and friends who wish to contribute to the Memorial Fund may do so by sending their checks to the Development Office at Lindenwood.

In Memorium

Anna Guthermuth died October 8, 1977, at the age of 88. Anna had worked for Lindenwood for 70 years and many alumni will share this memory of her as expressed in an article in the "St. Charles Banner News."

"KCLC-FM staffers have especially vivid memories of Anna. The radio station was her pet project and her next door neighbor," says Director of Broadcasting, Robert White. "Maybe she took care of broadcast students because she was so fond of the station's founder, Martha Boyer," he speculates.

If desired, memorials may be sent to the Development Office, designated for KCLC-FM.
