Who's Haunting The Halls In SIBLEY

Is there really any truth to the ghostly rumors?

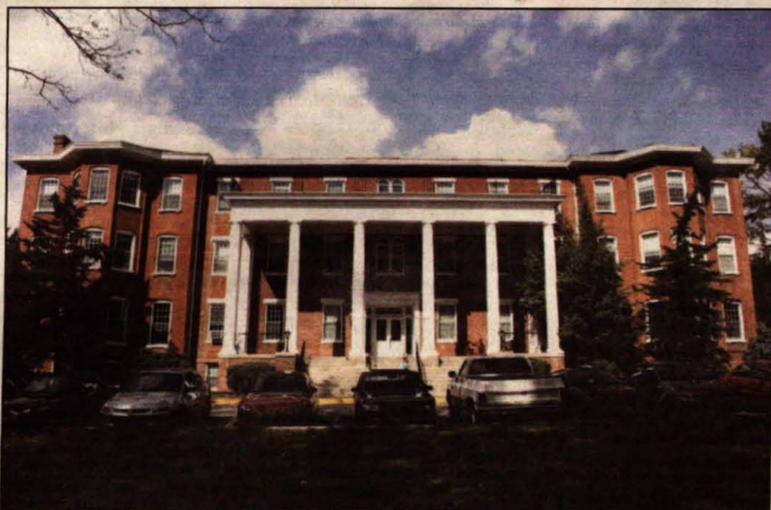

By Nick Forstmann
Legacy Staff Writer

For a long time, students have wondered if Lindenwood University's campus is haunted. Of all the Lindenwood legends, the ghost of Sibley Hall seems to be the best known. Rumored to be the spirit of Lindenwood founder Mary Easton Sibley, the specter has reportedly been seen in the lounge, basement and chapel of the women's dorm. Students through the years have reported the eeriness of dark nights in the dorm, but the questions about Sibley Hall have never been fully answered.

One of the rumors about Sibley's ghost is that there is a fourth floor to the Sibley building, and this is where she "lives." Actually, the fourth floor is a myth; it is the roof of the original Sibley home.

Skylar Finan is a resident of Sibley, and reported her experience with the ghost earlier this year.

During the second week of school, she was leaving the building when she glanced over to see a girl sitting on a nearby bench. The girl had black hair, was wearing a black dress and reading a book. Finan looked over to greet the girl, thinking that it was a friend of hers, only to find that no one was there.

Mary Sibley is one of the three ghosts reported in Sibley Hall. The other two are her husband, Major George Sibley, and a young female student who supposedly hung herself in the dorm.

The story of the girl who committed suicide in Sibley Hall has been told around campus. Chris Duggan, Lindenwood public relations coordinator, said the legend took place during the Civil War.

Campus Y leads charge for recycling at Lindenwood

By Justin Curia and Zach Stergos
Contributing Writers

Recycling – the age-old method of breaking down resources and turning them into things we can use again. Until recently, Lindenwood University had no recycling. Now, thanks to the Campus YMCA, we can rest easier knowing that we have an 8-yard paper recycling bin right here on campus, located behind the Spirit Shoppe.

The program is called "Y Frees the Trees," a growing paper recycling initiative that is out to help make LU a little "greener." Started during the 2005-2006 school year, this earth-friendly program is finally taking off.

"We started very small and only picked up (paper) from five locations," said Kate Buemi of the Campus Y. "We had to use makeshift boxes to pick up the paper."

Buemi and this year's Campus Y director, Jessica Rhodes, are the most prominent backers of the program. To date, 30 paper recycling bins have been placed around campus in each building. They are only working with paper currently, but eventually hope to collect bottles, cans and cardboard.

"We want to first see if people are interested, and then go from there," Rhodes said.

Until this year, the group took collected paper goods and dumped them in a recycling bin at Immanuel Lutheran Church in St. Charles. Now, a company called Abitibi Paper Retrieval has joined with the university to place a recycling dumpster on campus.

According to Joyce Norman, who oversees Lindenwood's sanitation, a number of 8-yard trash bins on campus are dumped once – sometimes twice – a day. Assuming these are full every time they are dumped (they're not), that would equal nearly a football field of trash every day. That's why the Campus Y took the initiative.

Of course there's a catch. Rhodes and Buemi stressed that they are only allowed to recycle certain paper items. Accepted items are newspapers, magazines, shopping catalogs, junk mail, office and school papers, and envelopes with and without windows. Items not accepted are cardboard of any type, food wrap/containers, tissue products, phone books, plastic or glass.

"It's important that students know the correct items to put in the recycling container," said Rhodes.

Recyclable goods also are used to make pulp that will eventually become newspaper. The company will cease to collect if not enough paper shows up in the dumpster. It is emptied once a month, so as Rhodes said, "If we don't use it we lose it."

Online registration is still not an option for students

By Melissa Cossarini
Assistant Managing Editor

Online registration will not be an option for students who sign up for 2008 spring semester classes.

Lindenwood University received the approval for the online system last November, but did not actively start working on the service until March. "Online registration will not be ready for the spring semester," said Dominic Soda, chief information officer. "We are in the process of converting our data into the new system."

The university is working with a company called Three Rivers Systems, Inc. The company is a web-based provider that supplies the tools schools need to make an activity such as choosing classes easier.

Soda does not know how

When should you register?
 ● Seniors: Monday, Nov. 12, 84+ credits
 ● Juniors: Tuesday, Nov. 13, 54+ credits
 ● Sophomores: Monday, Nov. 19, 24+ credits
 ● Freshman: Tuesday, Nov. 20, Less than 24 credits

the online system will be designed, but does know that there will be both a student and faculty portal.

However, the preparation process to register for classes online has been long and complicated. "It's hard to give a time of when this will happen," Soda said. "It is my hope that we will have the system by the next academic year," the 2008-2009 school year.

In the meantime, students have no choice but to arrive early for classes they want – and expect the usual long lines.

TV station working on new project

By Katharina Jung
Contributing Writer

Lindenwood University offers a great experience and opportunity to its students and anybody else who is interested. Young Hall, on the main campus, houses the university's own television station.

The channel "LU-TV26" reaches 50,000 Charter Cable subscribers in St. Charles County as well as in every dorm room on campus.

LU-TV26 provides community affairs and shows that include performance groups, faculty and students.

This gives Lindenwood students the opportunity to practice and improve practical broadcast skills and to share ideas with viewers.

The TV station is operated by Station Manager Peter Carlos, Program Manager Ben Scholle and Director of Operations Ed Voss. Carlos worked in Hollywood with stars like Jim Carey. Scholle's short films have played in festivals nationwide, and Voss' professional work "is a great addition for the TV station," said Carlos.

"I enjoy working with our students," Carlos said. "It is amazing which ideas they bring to improve the program. It's important for me to share my experience with them and help them to develop their skills."

Students work in three different studios entirely based on digital video, and also have access to 20 editing workstations in the multimedia computer lab in Spellmann Center.

LU-TV26 offers a variety of shows, produced by faculty and students.

"Fade up" features host Mike Wall, communications division dean, discussing movie related topics with movie gurus. "Entiendes" is a program entirely produced by students for students, and "Lion Pride Sports" and "News" offers highlights on campus and outside events.

"Working in the TV station is great," said senior Claudio Mermelstein. "It gives me the possibility to combine my Work and Learn with enhancing my skills and also the opportunity to work with what I love and want to do in the future."

Currently LU-TV26 is working on a joint project with the Political Science and History departments called "the first Annual Invitational High School Lindenwood History Bowl," which will air in November.

The tournament between eight regional high schools from the St. Charles area will be held in the studio, with the championship match broadcast live on Nov. 19. Professor Jeff Smith will moderate the show.

"We think this will be an enjoyable experience for both the students who participate and also for the viewers of LU-TV26," said Kris Runberg Smith, associate professor of history and program organizer. "We also would appreciate volunteers for the History Bowl tournament, especially Lindenwood students who participated in quiz bowls before."

For more information contact Runberg at (636) 949-4775 or ksmith@lindenwood.edu.

Up 'til Dawn sponsors fundraiser for support

By Jordan Lanham
Contributing Writer

The Lindenwood organization Up 'til Dawn hopes to increase student participation by sponsoring Awareness Week Oct. 24-31. Up 'til Dawn is a group that plans events to raise money for the non-profit St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, Tenn.

Up 'til Dawn Executive Director Lejla Kadric said, "We hope to gain a lot of people's attention and get a lot more participants joining us on Nov. 14 for the writing event." The letter writing event is one of Up 'til Dawn's major fundraising opportunities of the year. Students are encouraged to donate $5 and sign up for teams, which fill out 50 letters asking for donations from family and friends. This year's motto is "Stayin' Alive" with a '70s theme.

"We don't have a lot of school support," board member Beatriz Barria said. She said the group is trying to find creative ways to motivate more students to help with the event because "it hasn't been as big as at other colleges." The board hopes the week of activities will increase awareness about their organization.

• Wednesday's event is a surprise.

• Thursday is the annual "Fight the Yawn, Stay Up 'til Dawn" when members will stay up all night in front of the Spellmann Center.

• Friday is Silent Day and board members will not speak.

• Monday they will host a Ping-Pong tournament, which students can sign up for in front of the cafeteria in the Spellmann Center.

• Tuesday members will follow their '70s theme and wear wigs to class.

• Wednesday members will set up a table in front of the cafeteria and pass out toilet paper to "wipe away cancer."

Kadric herself hopes to gain students' attention when she wears an elephant suit to pass out toilet paper on Wednesday. The elephant is a symbol for St. Jude's Hospital. "We're going to look silly," Barria said about the week's events, "but it's for something good."

For more information about Up 'til Dawn, call Kadric at (314)679-0330.

In brief

Show revives music from the movies

Lindenwood's second theater production of the season offers a musical revue called "Blame It On The Movies" at the Cultural Center Auditorium, just north of the main campus at 400 N. Kingshighway. The show opened last weekend and continues at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Oct. 25-27.

"Blame It On The Movies" pays tribute to some of the most popular songs and themes from the movies, including "Gone With The Wind," "Footloose," "Jaws," "Meet Me In St. Louis" and "The Wizard Of Oz." It features music and lyrics by Billy Barnes, David Galligan and Ron Abel.

Assistant Professor of Music Pamela Grooms directed the show with help from Hassie Davis and student director Erin Klepper, and Keith Williams did the choreography.

Tickets are $12 for general admission, $10 for seniors and $8 for students ages 12-18. For more information and tickets, contact the Lindenwood University Box Office at (636)949-4906.

Campus Y to host spooky event Saturday

Campus Y will host "Spooky Saturday" at the Campus Y House on Oct. 27 from 11 a.m.- 2 p.m. Admission is $2 for children. Activities include a costume contest, fall arts and crafts, pumpkin decorating, bobbing for apples, fall photos and face painting.

To help with this event and others, Campus Y seeks committed leaders to run a branch of the Lindenwood Campus YMCA. Contact Jessica Rhodes at (636)949-4787 for more details.

Boone Home offers students opportunities

The Historic Daniel Boone Home and Boonesfield Village offers Lindenwood students a chance to strengthen their resume. Those interested in history or simply wanting to help may consider becoming a Boone Home volunteer.

Opportunities to be a demonstrator, heritage landscaper, curatorial assistant and historic escort interpreter are open, as well as activities such as special events and programming, and retail services in the museum shop.

Students can volunteer once a month or week, or whenever possible, and training is available. Individual interests will help determine training and positions.

Students interested in scheduling an interview or seeking information can contact Public Relations Director Pam Jensen at (636)798-2005 or e-mail pjensen@lindenwood.edu.

Annual security report is out

From the period of July 1, 2006, to June 30, 2007, the Lindenwood campus recorded two instances of aggravated assault, three motor vehicle thefts and 14 burglaries.

For more information on Lindenwood security issues, a copy of the annual report is on the school's Web site, or contact the Campus Life office.

Day of the Dead hosts altar

WHAT'S GOING ON

Popular 'real body' exhibit comes to St. Louis

Body Worlds 3 displays offer new way to learn about anatomy

Melissa Cossarini
Assistant Managing Editor

Many term the exhibit something that is both informative and unbelievable to see. Others squirm at the thought of attending. On Oct. 19, the St. Louis Science Center became the third location in the United States to showcase Body Worlds 3: The Anatomical Exhibition of Real Human Bodies.

"We are thrilled to have this exhibit here," said Doug King, president and CEO of the Science Center. "Doctors Gunter von Hagens and Angelina Whalley have taken the learning of anatomy to a whole new level."

Created by Dr. von Hagens, Body Worlds 3 puts more than 200 specimens including organs, bones and whole body individuals on display.

In 1977, Dr. von Hagens invented the scientific breakthrough method called Plastination. This process stops decomposition and preserves the body after death for medical study.

Plastination, which takes days to preserve body slices and a year to preserve an entire body, drains all fluids and soluble fats and replaces them with an acetone and polymer solution.

More than 7,000 donors have given their bodies to the study. Each remains unidentified and the cause of their death is not given in the exhibit.

"We wish to show the beauty of the human body," said Dr. Whalley, the creative and conceptual designer of the exhibit. "I hope the visitors will leave the exhibit with the idea of living inspiration."

By filling out donation forms from the Heidelberg Institute of Plastination, people agree to give their lives to science. "Our foremost thanks go to the body donors. We owe them the utmost respect," said Dr. Whalley.

For the cost of $18 for adults and $12 for children, visitors have the chance to come face to face with specimens such as "The Skin Man" who was completed in 1997.

This man holds his entire layer of skin in his left hand, emphasizing the largest and heaviest organ in the human body.

"The Torchbearer," completed in 2005, stresses the anatomy of the armpit as he extends a torch in the air. All of the organs have been taken out of this specimen and are posed next to the body.

"The Archer," completed in 2005, is posed shooting an arrow while her brain sits on top of her skull. All of the bodies are positioned to draw attention to certain muscle groups and organs.

Posed to throw a javelin, this body's chest cavity (above) was pulled open and its internal organs removed to display the positioning of the spine. The bodies in the exhibit are arranged to artfully and educationally help audiences better understand human anatomy. "The Skin Man," (below) made to show the human muscular system, is actually holding his own skin, which is a display of the largest human organ.

"This is the most visited exhibit in the history of visited exhibits," King said. Since making its debut in Japan in 1996, more than 24 million visitors have viewed the different Body Worlds exhibits across the world. So far the Science Center has sold over 30,000 tickets.

Besides the 20 bodies, a baby room complete with embryos and six different fetuses are what visitors can expect to see at Body Worlds 3.

The exhibit also displays body slices of an obese person, lungs infected from smoking and a 30 foot long digestive tract.

"Looking at these dead bodies serves as a bridge to ourselves and what we are made of," said Dr. Whalley. "It is a meditation of life that helps us to realize who we are, and what it means to be human and healthy."

The exhibit will be at the Science Center from now until March 2. Tickets can be purchased at Ticketmaster or by calling 314-421-4400. For more information about Body Worlds 3 or Plastination, visit www.bodyworlds.com.

Psychology students host study

Human Subject Pool needs students for behavioral research project

By Stephanie Polizzi
Contributing Writer

LU students taking experimental psychology and research methods are conducting the Human Subject Pool studies Oct. 1 through the end of October. The research behavioral projects are done every spring and fall.

The HSP was started in the fall of 2002. "The reason why I started the HSP was because my students had a hard time recruiting participants for their research projects," said Michiko Nohara-LeClair, Lindenwood psychology professor.

Students taking beginning level psychology, sociology and anthropology classes can earn extra credit by participating in the projects. Other students are welcome to join.

"These students get the benefit of learning about the field outside of the classroom," Nohara-LeClair said.

Students help other students by participating. "The extra credit is just a way to get more subjects for the student researcher to collect information," said student Abby Ramon.

Interested participants can visit the HSP bulletin board on the fourth floor of Young Hall to sign up for the subject that interests them, or stop by the HSP office in room 407 of Young.

Benefits from the studies include not only experience, but also the ability to interact with people and to learn. Most of the office work is done by Work and Learn students.

According to Nohara-LeClair, "HSP gives Work and Learn students the opportunity to gain valuable and marketable experience managing a huge database and communicating between researchers, subjects and professors involved."

The interactive research and survey study topics must be submitted to the Board of Institutional Review for approval.

Ramon said, "Students taking a research methods class get to come up with their own ideas for their research, but other students will follow models of previous research."

Last spring, 217 students participated in similar human behavior studies and earned 581 points of extra credit.

For more information, call the HSP office at 636-949-4673 or e-mail questions to hsp@lindenwood.edu.

Students take a break with Fall Fest

Students enjoy activities such as jousting outside of the Spellmann Center on Oct. 8. Lindenwood hosts these events twice a year for students to blow off steam or just relax. In addition to jousting, inflatables were also part of the fun. There will be another activity similar to this next spring.

Blue October rocks Family Arena

By Nick Forstmann
Contributing Writer

The bands Blue October, Shiny Toy Guns, LoveDrug and Yellowcard played at the Family Arena on Tuesday, Oct. 9. Lindenwood students were able to get tickets for only $12, compared to the $20 price the Family Arena charged.

LU students were seated in section 120 and also occupied the pit area. Student Activities Director Kerry Cox said, "Of the 200 tickets we were given, we sold 160 of them, but more people bought their own tickets and went down to the pit area."

LoveDrug was the first band to play. People were still coming into the building as the band began.

After their set was arranged, Shiny Toy Guns took the stage and started to get the people up and dancing.

Freshman Rachel Hoff said of her first concert, "I liked Yellowcard better than Blue October. It was definitely a different experience."

Yellowcard played after Shiny Toy Guns and received the biggest ovation of the night. The crowd seemed to be livelier during Yellowcard's performance. They played the second longest set, filled with lots of fast-paced rock music. They then gave the stage to the headliner.

Blue October came out to much applause. After playing songs to liven up the crowd, they went into slower renditions. They ended the night at 11:30 p.m. by playing their hit single "Hate Me."

Blue October and Yellowcard "were very good live bands and were the best bands there."

"It was a real good time," said Ben Mullins, who works with Cox in the Student Activities office.

Cox said that he wanted to team up with the Family Arena again, and wants to know who students want to see at the arena.

Main Street brings out Halloween spirit

By Taylor Johnson
Contributing Writer

As Oct. 31 rounds the corner, Lindenwood students prepare for Halloween spirit by satisfying their sweet tooth and thirst for fright, on the streets of Main Street, St. Charles.

Main Street is popular for its nightlife and eateries. As a tradition, Lindenwood students celebrate Halloween by dressing up and interacting at local bars. South Main Street attracts people with rumors of paranormal activity.

According to St. Charles Ghost Tours, a woman wearing a moonlit wedding gown stands at the corner of a back lot, tilting her head in prayer. She is called The Lady in White. Haunting the 400 block of South Main Street, she sulks behind the buildings where no one ventures after dark.

The infamous ghost of a badly burned girl occupies buildings 519 and 523. An old riverboat captain occupies the house adjacent to 519. The captain's faint outline is seen staring from his rocking chair out the second floor window.

Historic restaurant "The Mother-In-Law House" creates uncertainty for those who eat and work there. Francis Kremer built the house in 1866 as a double-sided house for his family and mother-in-law. The right side was for his family, the left for his mother-in-law.

Today the building serves as a restaurant to the town. Many customers speak of strange events. Glasses, drinks and utensils disappear. Glasses and coffee cups fall in the laps of customers. Entrée temperatures change from hot to cold.

According to owner Donna Hafner, "Nothing seems to go right on the northern side of the restaurant."

The Little Hills winery is another hot spot for two ghosts. A woman and man disappear when approached, there's missing silverware, rearranged glasses and spilled liquor around the bar.

"When I first started working here the owner told me how bizarre things would happen," said former employee and LU grad Kate Rinaldi. "I laughed it off, until one morning I had to open; the owner showed me the spilled drinks and rearranged bottles at the bar."

Carrying on the Legacy

Lindenwood University President James Evans presents Professor Jeff Smith with The Lindenwood Scholar-Teacher Award.

History Professor Jeff Smith has won the Lindenwood Scholar-Teacher award. He was presented a plaque by President James D. Evans, commemorating the award, at the faculty meeting on Wednesday, Oct. 10.

Smith has taught at Lindenwood since 1996; he has a bachelor's from Mount Union College, an M.F.A. from Syracuse University and a doctorate from the University of Akron.

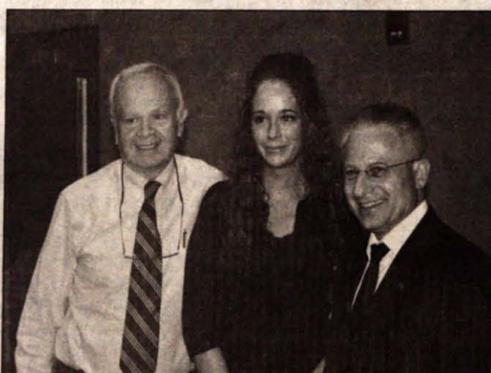

In his off time, Smith portrays various historical figures, including Andrew Carnegie, P.T. Barnum and William Clark, for different groups.

Evans presents Professor Ray Scupin with the Scholar of the Year Award for 2007.

Ray Scupin has received the school's Scholar of the Year Award for 2007. The award, recognizes the highest level of professional scholarship on the Lindenwood faculty over the past year.

Scupin has a bachelor's in history, anthropology and Asian studies from UCLA and a master's and doctorate in anthropology from University of California Santa Barbara. He has taught anthropology and sociology at Lindenwood since 1981, prior to which he taught at UC Santa Barbara and Northern Kentucky University.

Professor Edward Morris receives the Lindenwood Student Government Professor of the Year Award from LSGA President Megan Shipley and Evans.

Edward Morris, dean of the division of management, has been named Professor of the Year by the Lindenwood Student Government Association.

The award comes in the same year that Morris has seen publication of his book, "The Lindenwood Model: An Antidote to What Ails Undergraduate Education."

Morris came to Lindenwood as a professor in 2001 and was elevated to dean of the Management Division in June 2006.

Advice, whether you like it or not . . .

By Chelsea Lewis
Chief Copy Editor

I know that sometimes people need advice, but they don't really want to ask for it. That's my excuse for constantly listening in on other people's conversations as I walk through the halls between classes.

The other day as I was performing this ritual, I overheard a couple of guys talking about a friend of theirs. Apparently this friend, who I will call "Tim," has been dating his girlfriend for about six months. His family and good friends don't approve, labeling the girlfriend a "gold digger."

I have to admit, hearing this friend's side of the story, she did come off as sort of a vamp, making Tim take her out for expensive dinners every night and whatnot.

Tim's friend did not sound at all happy about the decisions Tim and his girlfriend were making.

This friend, if he actually wanted my opinion, would have asked me something along the lines of this: "Chelsea, I think my friend Tim and his girlfriend are moving too fast. How do I let my friend know I think he's making a mistake without him pushing me away?"

Well, Tim's friend, you're getting an answer, whether you like it or not.

First off, I think that you definitely need to let Tim know how you feel. If you don't tell him, then he will find out through your body language.

When you're upset with someone, they will know, no matter how hard you try to disguise it. You need to be straightforward, but not aggressive.

I know that the last thing you want to do is see things from the girlfriend's point of view, but in order to make your argument appeal to Tim, you need to give his girlfriend the benefit of the doubt.

Probably, if you know that his family doesn't approve, then he knows that his family doesn't approve. This means that he's already heard all the negatives.

Bottom line: you might just need to suck it up. If he's happy in this relationship, then there's not much you can, or should, do. He might just need to make his own mistakes, and you need to make sure that he knows you'll be there when he needs you.

That's what you, as Tim's friend, should do. That is, if you wanted my advice in the first place.

Lions defend house, record now at 8-0

By Patrick Houlihan
Sports Editor

Homecoming is a time for pomp, pageantry and a dose of good old fashioned football. The Lindenwood Lions took care of protecting their house with a 27-3 victory over the William Jewell Cardinals Saturday, Oct. 20, moving closer to a league title and first-round home game in the NAIA national tournament.

The usually dominant Lions offense relied on the defense and special teams to pick up the pace against Jewell. The defense recovered a fumble, intercepted a pass and controlled Jewell's offense. Dan Carlisle led the Lions with 14 tackles, Jeremy Coley nine and John Krieger six to keep Jewell in check.

The only Cardinals score was a field goal 30 seconds into the game. LU defensive tackle Brian Schaefering said he was confident of the defense. "It was a big win and it was just one of those days that the defense had to step up to let the offense know that we got your back," he said.

"Nobody wants to lose on homecoming and we have two games left, but after winning the HAAC, we have bigger things to look forward to."

The special teams blocked two punts and scored on one, and kicker Zac Atterberry averaged 40.5 yards on six punts, placing two inside the Jewell red zone. So far this season he has 21 punts, averaging 43.2 yards a kick, the longest an 72-yarder.

Against Jewell, quarterback Ben Kisner was only 11 of 26 for 104 yards and a touchdown.

Hall of fame brings applause for inductees

By Patrick Houlihan
Sports Editor

The inaugural class of the Lindenwood University Athletics Hall of Fame was inducted Oct. 20 in a successful campaign applauded by those at the festivities at the Hyland Performance Arena Saturday night.

"The Lindenwood University inaugural sports hall of fame banquet went tremendously well," President James Evans said. "It was positive, it was emotional and it really did boost the whole LU community. We are going to continue to do this every year and it will help to solidify this whole community."

"I am extremely pleased and could not imagine it going any better," Evans said.

The 18 inductees honored included two coaches, one team, one person for meritorious service and 14 individual former student-athletes.

Coaches inducted were legendary soccer coach Debbie Washburn and current Athletics Director John Creer, who led track and field to the school's first national title in 1998. That championship team also was inducted.

The late Dennis Spellmann was inducted for his meritorious service in rebuilding and supporting the athletic programs at Lindenwood during his 17-year tenure as president.

The 14 former student-athletes inducted were: Kelly Austene-Raines (softball), Earl Austin Jr. (baseketball), Sean Birren (track and field), Jaime Bonney (basketball), Kelley Bowen (soccer), Caryn Chasteen (soccer), Dan Emrick (golf), Sallie Henry (softball), Jessica Metcalf (swimming and diving), Beth Neyman (soccer), Krista Niedenbach (soccer), Tim Nihart (baseball), Nebojsa Stefanovic (soccer) and Kris Tebbe (softball/soccer).

Austin, sports columnist for the St. Louis American and radio analyst for St. Louis University basketball, was floored by the changes since his time on campus in the 1980s.

"This is a great day for Lindenwood. I think it is just another example of how the athletic programs have moved to a new level," Austin said.

Randy Karraker, Lindenwood alum and local radio sports broadcaster on 1380 ESPN, was MC for the event and spoke of its impact on the future of LU athletics.

"First, the idea of a hall of fame is a great idea with everything that has happened here in the past 25 years," Karraker said. "I think there is a place and now is the time for the hall of fame and this is the foundation of the greatness of Lindenwood sports."

"It has been a fun seven to eight months working on this event," Creer said, "and I am looking forward to January and February when we meet and start going through the candidate list."

Recycle Football

But these do-gooders are not alone. They enlisted the help of their own "Green Team," a group of student volunteers who help empty recycling boxes from offices and classrooms around campus. Buemi and Rhodes hope to increase student volunteering and eventually get recycling bins in the dorms as well.

"Campus Y is always looking for volunteers to go and pick up bins around Lindenwood," Rhodes noted. The bin arrived over a month ago, and the administration is supportive of the new initiative, according to Rhodes and Buemi. Also, if it gets a good response, it can save Lindenwood half the trash it discards into regular trash bins. For more information, or to volunteer, contact the Campus YMCA at (636) 949-4787.

The Lions two-pronged rushing attack of Hakeem Abdullah and Richard Murrell combined for 27 carries and 117 yards on the ground. Kisner was excited with the victory and what it could mean for the rest of the season and playoffs. "It was a good team victory today, with some big plays on special teams," Kisner said. "The defense played outstanding with the offense. We have some things to work on, but a win's a win." Lindenwood will go on the road this Saturday, with the kickoff at 1:30 p.m. at Evangel. The team's magic number to clinch the HAAC conference title is two wins. The Lions will play their final home game of the regular season Nov. 3 at 1:30 p.m. against Central Methodist.

Sibley

The girl was said to have killed herself after finding out her fiancé was killed during battle. Duggan rejected this account, however. "The school was closed during a portion of the Civil War, if not all of it," Duggan said. No records could be found of the girl. Maria Porch, resident director of Sibley Hall, had a report last semester of a girl who supposedly had a run-in with the ghost. The girl was sitting in Sibley Hall chapel practicing a piece on the piano. She reported having a feeling that someone was watching her. She made a mistake on the piano and then reportedly heard giggling from an invisible source. The girl did not investigate, and ran out of the building. "Personally, I don't believe in spirits being left behind," said Porch. She did say that there were times when she was the only one in Sibley and heard noises, had lights turn on after she turned them off and had doors unlocked after she locked them. Piano playing has been heard in the chapel by students at night, but Porch said she sometimes lets girls go in to practice. The students who live in Sibley Hall still claim to have felt the presence of a paranormal visitor. Have the residents of Sibley been greeted by a spirit, or has their mind succumbed to the legends of the ghosts of Sibley Hall?
