Record Numbers Enroll

by Karen Clark

An increase of over 10 percent enrollment is the reason for the long lines in the cafeteria. Lindenwood has once again reached an all-time high in undergraduate enrollment.

This is due not only to the increase in freshmen, but also transfer and commuter students.

"These increases can be attributed to the expanded faculty this year, and also students bringing in their friends to check out Lindenwood," said President Dennis Spellmann.

Among many other major changes, residential life has grown to 930 students, up from last year's 828 students. Because of this increase in residents, the college has purchased a number of mobile homes near campus to be used as off-campus male housing. The college recently bought three more mobile homes for additional space.

"I am very pleased with this year's student body," said Spellmann. "I think we have a great senior class taking the leadership role, along with four full grades. There is also a lot of excitement with the fraternities and sororities."

Circle K Holds Convention

by LindenWorld Contributor

On August 15, three Lindenwood students boarded a plane for San Antonio, Texas. John Snipes, Taylor Stuart, and Melissa Braungardt served as delegates to the 37th Annual Circle K International Convention.

The delegates attended educational sessions, listened to internationally known speakers, and elected new officers for the 1992-93 year. A highlight of the convention came when Jim Beck, a Lindenwood alumnus, was elected to the office of International President.

But, the convention was not all work, as the delegates had an opportunity to see sights like the Alamo and Riverwalk. They also went to an actual cattle ranch, attended banquets, dances, and a talent show. The Circle K'ers returned to St. Louis on August 19.

Protect Yourself Tips on Avoiding Sexual Violence

by Lisa Finkelstein

With sexual aggression on the rise, we as college students need to use extra safety precautions. Every university has a responsibility to its students and every student has a responsibility to his or her self.

According to a volunteer at Webster University's Women's Resource Center, there are some measures you can take to protect yourself against sexual violence. These tips are geared mainly towards date rape, since that is the most common type of aggression the student needs to look out for:

1. Set sexual limits. Before going out on a date, know how far you are willing to go and stick to it. This is a limit you set to yourself, for yourself

2. Trust and act on your feelings. If your gut instinct tells you something is wrong, it probably is. Don't ignore your body's warning signals.

3. Be firm and direct with your sexual messages. Don't say no if you mean yes. Sex is not a game. It's a responsibility. You have the right to say yes and the right to say no. You always have the right to change your mind. Don't be ashamed to say no if that's how you really feel.

4. Be responsible with alcohol. On a first, second, or any 1 to 1 date, you don't need to drink. Alcohol lowers your inhibitions and impairs your judgement. If you do drink, be responsible.

5. Don't isolate. Stay with the group. If it's a first date, there's nothing wrong with meeting him or her at a public place.
6. After the sun sets or in deserted areas, use the buddy system. Do not walk alone, no matter how short the distance.

Self-protection devices such as Mace can be found at several universities, including Webster and UMSL. Washington University sells a small battery-operated personal alarm that can be attached to a key chain.

If any other type of weapon is desired, make sure that it's legal and that you know how to use it properly. Improper use of a weapon can be used against you.

Theatre Season Features Some of the Best

by Alisa Baumer

The Lindenwood Theatre Department will feature four diverse productions on the Jelkyl Mainstage this 1992-93 season.

"Brighton Beach Memoirs," by Neil Simon, America's foremost comedic playwright, will open the 1992-93 season, running October 1, 2, and 3 and October 8, 9, and 10. The play is an autobiographical work.

The cast for the play includes Brian Peters in the lead role as Eugene Jerome. Jennifer Jonassen is his mother, Kate; Scott Elgart plays Eugene's father, Jack. Aaron Black will play Stanley, Eugene's brother; Sarah Yunker plays Aunt Blanche; Christine Angelo plays his cousin Laurie; and Nicole Schlueter plays Eugene's cousin Nora.

Jesse Bean, a third-year graduate student, is directing the play. Donnell Walsh, assistant professor, is scenic designer and Niki Juncker, associate professor, is the costume designer for the play. Student Sarah Evans will be stage manager. Tickets for the play go on sale Sept. 24 at the theatre box office, Roemer 17.

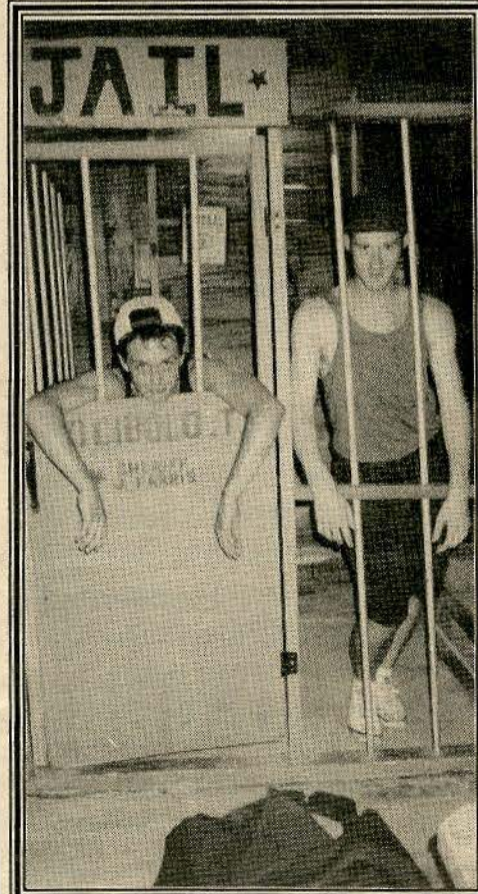

The warm-hearted Broadway musical, "The Mystery of Edwin Drood", is the second Mainstage production. Based on Charles Dickens' last unfinished novel, this Tony Award winner will be presented December 3, 4, and 5 and December 10, 11, and 12. Special matinees will be held December 5, 6, 12, and 13 at 2:00 p.m.

The next Mainstage production is the gripping story of John Merrick, in Bernard Pomerance's "The Elephant Man." This exploration of the relationship between physical and spiritual beauty will be presented February 25, 26, and 27 and March 4, 5, and 6.

The final production of the 1992-93 season will be a special program entitled, "Dance Alive: A Dance Concert." This program will mark the Mainstage debut of the Lindenwood College Dancers in a celebration of modern and jazz dance. "Dance Alive: A Dance Concert" will be presented April 15, 16, and 17 and April 22, 23, and 24.

In addition to these fine productions, several one act plays will be presented throughout the year including the plays "Women and Wallace" and "LINE."

Lindenwood Freshmen Speak Out!

Q: Ten years from now, when I look back on my first week at Lindenwood, the thing I'll remember most is.....

Margaret Williams "Going to my parent's house in St. Peters and doing their dishes. I was so bored on campus that even dishes were more exciting. I prayed for school to get better."

Anita Dupree "Acting class, my very first class was cancelled. I was relieved that there was no school, I got to sleep."

Amy Lauber "Going home and visiting my friends in Bridgeton every night, coming back at 3:00 and there being no parking spaces."

Michael Maves "My second day of football, we had to run 7 laps in 12 minutes, and I thought I was gonna die. The people who didn't make it had to report to conditioning training at 6:30 a.m."

Nicole Bach "The amazing bunch of friends I made and those groovy Irwin Hall "porch parties." I'll never forget the fun times I've shared with my Lindenwood buddies: "The Tram."

Brian A.K.A. Carl Bowes "The friends I made and Irwin Hall porch, the "mood swings," cafeteria food, dubbing Jason "Zeno," meeting Jed, Jack hugging me when he saw me in the dorm, and the "Apple Fest."

Celeste Caspermeyer "The nice, warm welcome I got from the residential director, the people I met, and checking students in. The people are very friendly and were willing to show me around campus."

Christy Havermann "How friendly all the people here are. Almost everyone is here because they want to better their education, and better themselves. And, everyone seems so nice and pleasant."

Community Work Service Program Underway For 20 Students

by Mary Hallemann

This semester, a community work service program has been developed as an alternative to the current on-campus work and learn program. The new program gives students an opportunity to work off-campus with volunteer and community service agencies. All junior and senior work and learn students with a satisfactory GPA are eligible, according to Reverend Dr. Michael Mason, college chaplain.

Designed by Mason and President Spellmann, the program is intended to expand the experience of the students.

"This allows students to do things outside their career path, but things they're still interested in," said Mason.

Also, the service program gives Lindenwood an opportunity to work with the community.

"It is a donation to the community. Instead of paying students to work for the college, we pay them to work in the community," said Mason.

Currently, the program involves approximately 20 students. According to Susan Ebbesmeyer, student organizer of the program, several local service organizations, but not all organizations, had enough, or the right kind, of work available.

"I basically went through the yellow pages and called about 50 organizations on a random basis", said Ebbesmeyer.

Now, students can choose from a list of 14 participating agencies.

Some of the agencies involved include The Child Abuse Hotline, Salvation Army, Humane Society, and Barnes Hospital of St. Peters.

"We tried to choose agencies that were in walking distance of the college or a short distance away," said Mason.

During a semester, the new program requires students to replace the 150 hours of regular work and learn hours with 150 hours of the hours of the selected off-campus service. Students are free to arrange scheduling with the agency and report hours to Mason.

The program will continue throughout the year. According to Ebbesmeyer, the program is being considered as a one semester work and learn requirement in the 1993-94 catalogue.

"This summer I received a list of 50 students to call and ask if they would like to work in the program," said Ebbesmeyer. "Those I couldn't reach by phone, we caught during orientation and the first weeks of school."

Selection of agencies was also done on a random basis.
