DIRECTOR'S NOTE

Welcome to one of my favorite stories. "Harvey" introduces you to Elwood. P. Dowd, a man who is unflappable, always pleasant, always polite, and a lover of life and people. I believe that this play still endears itself to audiences today because we all wish we could be more like Elwood. The play won the Pulitzer Prize and was made into a very successful movie starring Jimmy Stewart who also played the part on Broadway for many years. Although many people believe that this play is about an "imaginary" rabbit (By the way... Harvey does exist), I believe that this is a story that shows life is what you make of it... You can enjoy the people around you or you can be a stranger. As Elwood's mother used to say to him... "In life you can be oh, so smart or oh, so pleasant." He recommends pleasant and so do I! So sit back and enjoy this wonderful piece of theatre and remember... If you meet a nice gentleman who says his friend is a 6-foot-tall white rabbit. Don't be too sure that he is crazy. He just may be the sanest one of us all.

Larry D. Quiggins
