*Lindenwood Through
the
Looking Glass—1950*

College life, like Lewis Carroll's "Wonderland," is very similar to other ways of living—only different. Some say it's four years of perpetual animation. Certainly there are times when one feels the truth of the Red Queen's explanation that "it takes all the running you can do, to keep in the same place."

The staff of the Linden Leaves presents this yearbook as a modern parallel of Alice's magic looking glass. Through it you may look with Alice on the panorama that was Lindenwood 1949-50.

Winter at Lindenwood

*Stumbling to class in what seems to be the middle of the night . . .
sledding on the golf course . . . snowy boots dripping puddles on classroom floors . . . beginning to hate winter clothes when . . .*

First it's a feeling, a pleasant apathy, a persuasive lethargy; then class attendance goes down and the sun decks are lined with reddening half-baked bodies. Peonies bloom on Butler Drive, and vernal agrophobia is here to stay.

The sudden death of Guy Cleveland Motley on December 27, 1949, was the loss of a personal friend. It is fitting that we dedicate this yearbook to him, for he was the first person to give a homesick student a friendly smile, to arrange for her room, or to offer her a shoulder to cry on. To all of Lindenwood, he was known as "Uncle Guy."

"Yippee" was his battle cry, and the Democratic party his banner. He was, as he styled himself, our "counsel for the defense" and the one who saw us off on vacations with the admonition "Keep your powder dry!"

"Uncle Guy" will always occupy a place in the hearts of the thousands of students who have attended Lindenwood—this is the memorial he would have wanted.

Senior Class

OAKES, R., JOY, S., FINNEY, S.

Four, even three years ago, seniors were dignified well-adjusted people who held important positions on campus, sat upstairs in chapels, and knew all the quirks and characteristics of each instructor. Seniors were those V.I.P.s who made grades without doing much serious work and managed a casual air about semester exams and other life-and-death matters. As seniors, however, the class has found that actual experience differs radically from distant observation. Where, oh where, is that long-awaited leisure time? It isn't here . . . the seniors of past years must have taken it with them.

Highlights among memories of the Senior Class include the Harvest Ball when they were freshmen; the traditional Christmas caroling as sophomores; going all-out on plans that produced the first post-war Junior-Senior prom on the Starlight Roof of the Chase. And as seniors there was Skip Day, May Day week-end, and pinning the juniors . . . realizing that at last Commencement was practically a reality. Commencement and diplomas, careers and marriage plans are in the future.

Junior Class

Second row: FURNISH, C., POWELL, J.

The juniors have finally achieved the envied privileges of sitting "upstairs" in convos and assemblies, an unlimited number of cuts, and the title upperclassmen. To prove their worldly status to the weathered seniors, they held the traditional Junior-Senior prom on the Starlight Roof of the Hotel Chase. Convinced that this was sufficient proof of maturity, the seniors, in turn, "pinned" the juniors, who suddenly found themselves with both the responsibilities and the privileges of the Senior Class of 1951.

The college career of the class has not been one of complete frivolity, however. As freshmen they adopted a French war-orphan and have supported this child for three years, a plan which is to continue until the long-awaited day of emancipation, or academically speaking, graduation.

Sophomore Class

LENT, D., KLOSS, P., TREFZ, E., BOWMAN, L.

Sophomores . . . trembling on the brink of being upperclassmen. As a class, the sophomores found that required math courses aren't so hard—well, not very—that one can't afford to sleep through too many eight-o'clock classes (they aren't to be snoozed at), and that the question of what to major in isn't so difficult to decide after two years of testing one's abilities.

The Sophomore Class brought one of the first touches of Christmas to the campus with their candlelight procession and traditional caroling. A Valentine dance resplendent with hearts, cupids, and a lovely queen and two attendants was another of the most outstanding events of their year. The class braved the grueling sophomore testing program without a casualty and proved their wisdom beyond doubt.

Freshman Class

KILLINGER, J., WALTHALL, A., BARTENBACH, G., BANTA, M.

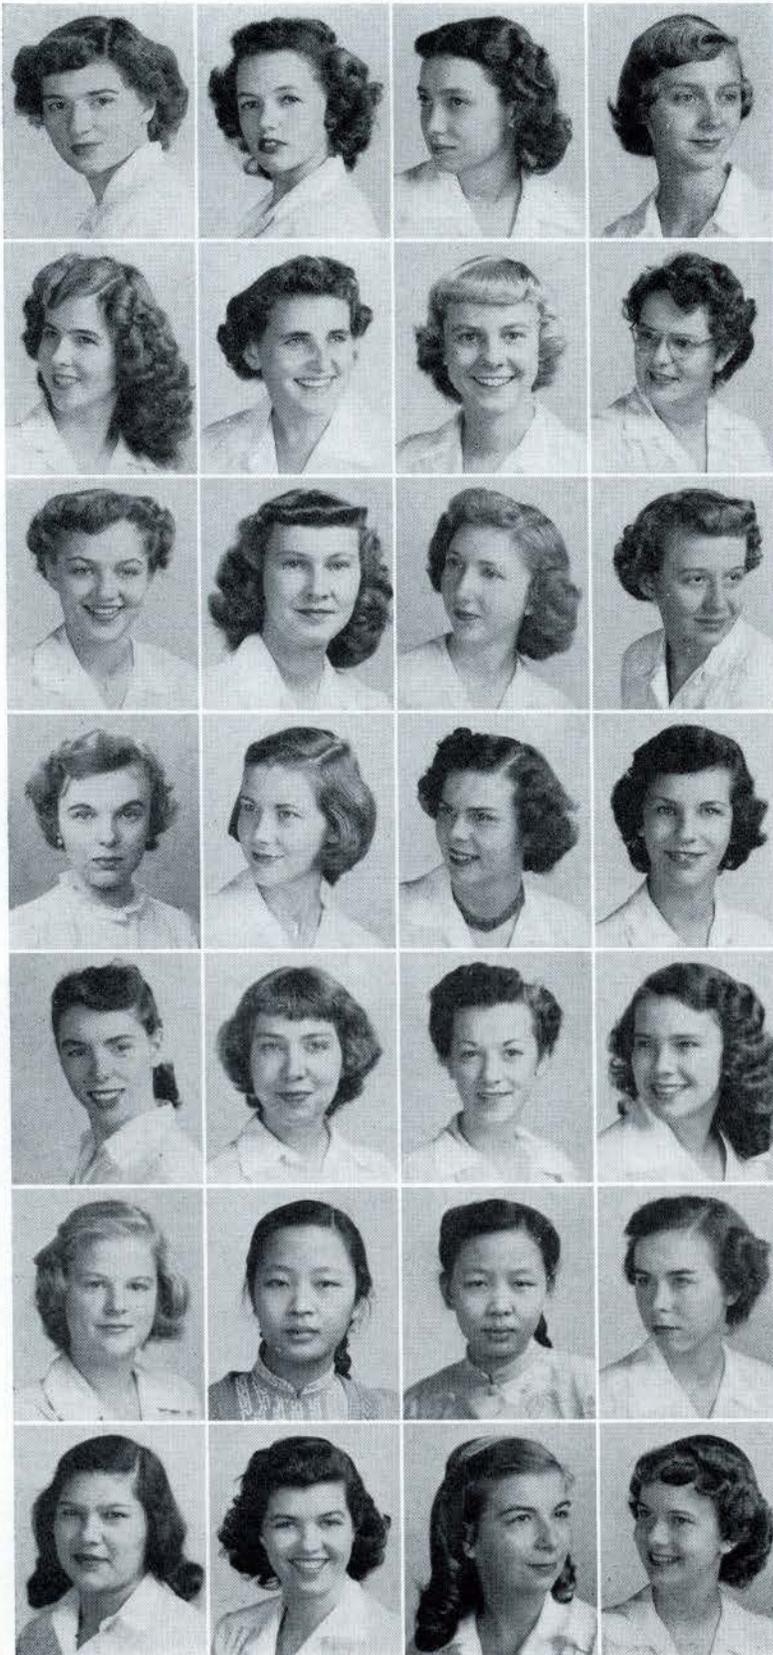

Just going through that first hectic week as a part of the Freshman Class is enough to prepare one for a career on the stage . . . Facing an unfamiliar world of strange professors, going to street suppers, square dances, placement tests, and gabbing with new friends require versatility. Freshmen find that there is an art to finding a seat at those first meals, learning where to sit in chapel, and when to use which "sign-out" book. The faux pas are something to laugh about after one is finally oriented, however. Next they can sit back, relax, and feel sophisticated.

The freshmen gave the annual Harvest Ball, reigned over by the Harvest Queen and twelve attendants chosen from the class. Freshman-Junior Haze Day saw a reversal of situation with morning calisthenics, bowing, and salutations of "My Illustrious Miss So-and-so" on the part of the juniors to the freshmen. And in May the freshmen chose two of their prettiest girls to represent them as class attendants on the May Court. This was their prelude to the coming years . . .

Commercial Club

Commercial Club is made up of prospective "white collar" girls who have made the grade of B or better in at least two subjects in the Secretarial Science Department. At meetings, club members delve into problems of the business world and mix business with pleasure by giving a St. Patrick's Day tea and a picnic in the spring.

Linden Leaves Board

These girls with the slightly fanatic glints in their eyes lost their sense of proportion early in the year—they are the Linden Leaves Board. Before this year such expressions as “bleed pages,” or “gutter bleeds,” “copy,” and “proof” held little meaning and less significance for these students, but during the last few months the slightest whisper of any one of these terms has caused them to leap into the air, click their heels, and yell “Linden Leaves!” They gave up their ivory tower for a precarious perch in the Tower Room and got the yearbook out. With the last comma inserted, the final proof corrected and sent to the printer, the Linden Leaves staff sighed in amazement, and as a unit, collapsed.

Our thanks to all who contributed to the Linden Leaves, 1949-50.

Alice looks in on the Linden Leaves Board, thinks she has stumbled into nightmare alley. 'Tis only the editors, haggard, happy—the annual's out!

Not too LARGE

Yearbook staffs are best served by a printer who is not too pre-occupied with such mammoth productions that school annuals shrink in importance. The staff needs and is entitled to personal service which concentrates on the details of the staff's difficult and urgent task of getting out its yearbook.

COLLEGE YEARBOOK Printing AT ITS BEST

Not too SMALL

On the other hand, the printer of your annual ought to have facilities large enough and complete enough and efficient enough to produce a fine piece of printing and binding economically. Also, he ought to have sufficient reserve power to breeze in at the finish in spite of unforeseen emergencies.

Just Right!

After thirty-five years of college annual specialization, it is obvious that our personnel and equipment must be ideal for this field of publishing.

The equipment of our plant, in size and nature, is tailor-made for yearbook production. Typography, presswork and binding are produced in one plant.

But more important is the specialized know-how of an interested personnel. Nothing, absolutely nothing, can take the place of people who know their jobs, are proud of what they do, and are always asking, "How did 'they' like their book?"

That is our kind of organization.
