Students protest Mo. grant cuts

Lindenwood holds second letter-writing campaign to oppose Nixon's proposal

By Andrew Tessmer
Staff Reporter

Missouri Gov. Jay Nixon's proposed elimination of the Access Mo. state grant to private college students was met with opposition from the Lindenwood Student Government Association (LSGA) in a letter-writing and telephone campaign on April 7.

"This campaign is directed at Governor Jay Nixon in hopes that we can prevent him from cutting Access Missouri funding to all independent school students," LSGA member Zach Hess said.

"We are attempting to protect the interests of all independent schools in Missouri."

Students have held letter-writing campaigns before, aimed at legislative moves to decrease the size of the grant from a maximum of $4,600 to $2,850. Last week's campaign took place after Nixon said in a statement last month that subsidizing private school students' education is "a luxury that Missouri taxpayers can no longer afford, in our opinion."

Senior Rachel Miller called this statement an "ignorant comment."

Miller, a senior with a double major in nonprofit administration and philosophy, plans to graduate in December 2011. She receives $3,690 in Access Mo. funding. With Nixon's looming cut to the program, she fears for her education.

"If [Nixon] wants [private school students] to stay in our state and contribute to the economy," Miller said, "he needs to realize the importance of private colleges and universities in the state." Currently, 1,656 LU students receive financial aid through the Access Mo. grant, said Lori Bode, director of financial aid at Lindenwood.

Of those students, 1,240 receive the full statutory amount of the grant.

"Lots of students have come into my office upset about the cuts," said Kerry Cox, Director of Student Activities. "Many staff members are upset. They don't want to see students go. They care deeply about their students."

Under Nixon's proposed cuts, students like sophomore James Kelley, who receives the full Access Mo. funding, would have to make sacrifices just to attend Lindenwood or another independent college.

LSGA plans 'Greek Week'

By Natasha Sakovich
Asst. Editor-in-Chief

The Lindenwood Student Government addressed plans for this week's fraternity and sorority sponsored "Greek Week" at the April 6 meeting. "Greek Week" is currently in progress, as it began Monday, April 12, and continues till Thursday, April 15.

Today, Delta Zeta and Alpha Sigma Phi are hosting ultimate kickball at 3 p.m. A swing dance will take place today at 5 p.m., sponsored by Sigma Alpha Iota.

On Thursday, a "Greek Recess" will occur at 2 p.m., followed by a barbeque at 4 p.m. A toga party is also scheduled for 7 p.m. at the patio above the football field, said Kerry Cox, Director of Student Activities.

Phi Lambda Phi sponsored a pudding wrestling tournament on Monday at 6 p.m., and Alpha Phi Omega, along with Phi Mu Alpha, hosted a baseball game on Tuesday.

LSGA also worked towards planning events for the annual Spring Fling week at the meeting. Spring Fling will take place April 19-23.

Several big events are in the works for the week-long festival. Details involving what day and time most events will take place have yet to be finalized, said LSGA president Ashley Stewart.

Top bands take stage at 'Break Musical Festival'

The afternoon sunlight, light breeze and enthusiastic energy from the bands/public set the scene last Saturday for the beginning of The Break Music Festival.

Formerly known as LU*Palooza, the annual festival is an all-day outdoor concert organized cooperatively by Student Activities and the Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity. Organizers decided to change the name because LU*Palooza was so similar to the national musical event Lollapalooza.

Planning for The Break Music Festival started in October 2009. The concert lasted about eight hours and entailed eight bands performing on the Spellmann Center lower-level parking lot.

Student Activities selected the bands in part because they were identified as emerging artists in AP Magazine. The bands included Me Verse You, Zack Weber, State & Madison, We Should Whisper, The Noise FM, Fundamental Elements, Murphy

Lee and Stereo Skyline.

Two of the bands, Fundamental Elements and Zack Weber, have played with well-known groups such as Maroon 5, John Mayer and Rihanna. Murphy Lee and Stereo Skyline were the most anticipated bands, organizers said.

"I really like just meeting outside and listening to music," said Katie Bock, a school counseling major. "I am really excited that all these people are here. Most of them are friends of mine, and it is just a good place to hang out on a Saturday."

Business school to hold tourney

By Kenny Gerling
Staff Reporter

Organizing a large charity event is hard work, and many would not even know where to begin. But one Lindenwood class faces this task, and the event is right around the corner.

Instructor Abby Weber's "Event Management" class is organizing the third annual golf tournament fundraiser for the Lindenwood School of Business and Entrepreneurship. It will be held on April 30 at Whitmoor Country Club in St. Charles, Mo. All money raised will benefit the newly remodeled Harmon Hall.

Students were divided into five teams, each of which was responsible for either marketing, sponsorships, risk management, operations or finance. Three of those students were appointed as project managers, who oversaw individual groups as well as met with members of the community.

"Students have to plan, organize and execute the golf tournament," said Weber, women's golf coach and professor in the School of Business and Entrepreneurship. This is the second year Weber has been involved. Each tournament was put on by an event management class.

"It's been a lot of work, but now that the time is coming closer to the tournament, it's nice seeing how our hard work has paid off. I have enjoyed this project so much," said Jessica Standfuss, a junior majoring in Marketing and Entrepreneurship. Stradfuss will be one of the three student project managers.

The golf scramble is only one of the events held that day. Other activities include a dinner after the tournament and a silent auction.

Process begins for LSGA officer elections

By Jessica Vines
Contributing Reporter

With Spring Break over, the Lindenwood Student Government Association (LSGA) will begin the election process to choose officers for next year.

Treasurer Katie Gaska said no dates have been set yet, but elections will be held before the end of the semester.

Guidelines to run for LSGA officers, according to the LSGA Constitution on the Lindenwood Web site, call for candidates to have been active members of LSGA the semester prior to taking office.

They must also maintain at least a 2.5 cumulative grade point average.

Candidates running specifically for president must live on campus, be at least a junior, and have been active LSGA members for the two semesters before taking office.

Gaska said that an LSGA member must be nominated to run for office by another member.

“The process takes two weeks, with nominations one week and members voting the next,” she said.

Students can join LSGA as representatives from student organizations, dorms, sports teams or at-large representatives by submitting petitions with signatures from at least 15 full-time students.

Election procedures and positions can be found on Lindenwood’s Web site. For more information, contact LSGA President Ashley Stewart through the Student Activities Office, next to the Connection on first floor of Spellmann, phone number 636-949-4983.

Students visit exotic/unusual spots for break

By Holly Hoechstebach

As the months of March and April come around, the typical beach scene grows jam-packed with college students.

While many associate spring break with a hard partying image in Daytona, Florida, forgetting the night before due to too many tequila shots, this is not always the case.

Lindenwood senior Satomi Ota and three other girls drove to an unusual spring break location – Rapid City, South Dakota.

“It sounded interesting, and we wanted to experience something different,” Ota said.

Having never been to a national state park, Ota visited Custer State Park, a wildlife reserve with 71,000 acres and around 1,500 roaming bison.

“Upon arriving in South

Dakota, we were excited to eat bison burgers. But after seeing them, we lost our appetites,” Ota said. “They’re dirty and ugly.”

Aside from wildlife, Ota also visited Mount Rushmore, a famous American memorial that is well-known in her native Japan, and she even explored Rockerville, an abandoned ghost town.

The town had quite the success because of the discovery of gold in the late 1800s, but around the 1930s scandals and a lack of gold led to the town’s death.

Currently up for sale and no longer a popular tourist attraction, this old western town still draws attention.

Lindenwood junior Stefanie Wollenberg also had an exhilarating spring break in Mexico City, sight-seeing and enjoying the Six Flags amusement park.

In brief

Juniors, seniors invited to MBA meeting

Lindenwood’s School of Business and Entrepreneurship will host an MBA (Master of Business Administration) Information Session on Wednesday, April 21, at 3 p.m. in the Harmon Hall Auditorium, Room 117.

All juniors and seniors – business and non-business majors alike – are invited to the presentation, said Judy Eberhart, assistant professor of marketing.

The Early Access MBA program will also be discussed, and a question-and-answer session with professors from each area of the school will follow the presentation.

New group Spectrum plans meetings, activities

Members of the recently formed Spectrum Alliance meet every Friday at 4 p.m. in Young Hall, Room 111.

The group welcomes all socially concerned students, with a special focus on people who are disabled, and lesbian and gay issues.

The group’s goal is to have a non-discriminatory organization on campus.

For Sibley Day in February, Spectrum Alliance held a showing of the movie “Milk,” in which Sean Penn won an Oscar for Best Actor, and the group will sponsor a table for Spring Fling April 19-23.

On Friday, April 16, Spectrum Alliance will take part in a National Day of Silence on campus, supporting equality across the nation, before breaking the silence at its meeting at 4 p.m.

Day without shoes aims to raise awareness

Everyday encounters with homelessness and poverty are reminders to appreciate having food and shelter, but people forget about their feet. Food, shelter AND shoes are life’s fundamentals.

An event called One Day Without Shoes was held April 8, promoted on campus by the Lindenwood synchronized swim team and sponsored nationally by TOMS Shoes to spread awareness of the impact a simple pair of shoes can have on a child’s life.

Students, faculty and staff were encouraged to go without shoes, even for a short period of time, though building health regulations and colder weather limited participation. The event is held in conjunction with donations of shoes.

Film, TV camp returns for high school students

Lindenwood’s School of Communications will host its second annual Film and Television Camp this summer for high school students interested in learning production skills. Two sessions are scheduled, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily, June 14-18 and June 21-25.

Participants will learn introductory skills and techniques from award-winning faculty with extensive experience creating Hollywood movies, network television shows, local newscasts and documentaries. Students will work in the Charter Communications LUTV HD Studio in the university’s J. Scheidegger Center for the Arts.

“The camp is perfect for future directors, editors and on-camera talent, whether they already have experience or are just getting started,” said Peter Carlos, LUTV station manager and associate professor of communications.

Intl. Festival starts Friday

By Alizeh Jumani
Contributing Reporter

Students will have a chance to expand their cultural diversity at the annual International Festival on Friday, April 16, from 5 to 11 p.m. inside the Hyland Performance Arena at Lindenwood University.

Out of a residential enrollment of around 3,500, “We have 803 international students from 80 countries,” according to Ryan Guffey, assistant vice president of student development.

Cassandra Ickes, graduate coordinator of the International Student Organization, said that the International Festival offers a chance to celebrate the diversity of cultures that make up Lindenwood’s population.

Activities for the popular event will include a flag parade, food from different countries, dance and other special performances.

“The students will represent their countries with their flags,” Ickes said. “The parade will start at Roemer Hall and will end at the Performance Arena.”

Inside Hyland, lots of student groups and outside bands will perform, she said.

“A special performance includes a salsa dance presented by Latin students, and Japan is going to present two performances, one hip-hop and another traditional,” Ickes said. “It’s still an ongoing process.”

Ickes said that the international festival brings the students a sense of belonging and they get a chance to represent their culture.

Carrier pigeons are the answer

To improve the somewhat chaotic nature of the Lindenwood housing registration process, I propose a tested and true system, one that has served many institutions effectively for many thousands of years.

Carrier pigeons, trained to deliver registration forms from the students to the housing staff, will allow for a smoother and quicker registration process.

Implementing this system would be simple: a pigeon trainer would teach a team of several dozen pigeons to recognize the housing office as home, and to recognize their routes for traveling to the students around campus.

Housing registration would remain scheduled as it has been, with the days of registration week assigned to different years of students.

For example, freshmen would continue to register on the Thursday before Spring Break.

That Thursday would be further broken up by last name, with those students whose last name begins near the beginning of the alphabet receiving their pigeons earlier in the day than those with last names near the end of the alphabet.

Once a student has received his pigeon, he would remove a small sheet of paper from the bird’s leg canister, write his housing request, replace the paper, and set the bird free.

There are many benefits to utilizing carrier pigeons. One would be the reduced wait time.

Carrier pigeons would simply arrive at each student’s current residence, receive the housing request, and fly back to the office.

This system would eliminate the need for large line ups in the Spellmann Center, which tend to disrupt both classes going on in the building, and the classes the students are missing by waiting around.

Another perk is the fact that one does not need to be a carrier pigeon expert to handle the birds, and after the birds’ initial training, the pigeons could be controlled by the two-person staff that currently handles housing registration.

How economical would that be, to keep the staff small and improve efficiency!

Carrier pigeons are also blessed with the inability to understand English. They won’t get upset if you tell them no, or if you angrily mutter about them behind their backs. Carrier pigeons will remain oblivious, contentedly and patiently waiting until they are able to serve their purposes and deliver the messages.

Carrier pigeons don’t stress, and they certainly don’t cut in lines, and save places for their friends. Carrier pigeons are simple creatures, happy to serve their purposes.

A naysayer may point out that pigeons are messy, and will quickly turn our campus into a rancid smelling disaster.

However, as the birds will only be used for one week of the year, they will cause no more of a mess than the students who lounged outside the Leadership Room, leaving their breakfast leftovers haphazardly towering against the walls.

Who cleans up after these irresponsible students? Other students, cleaning the Spellmann Center as part of their Work and Learn!

So, it is logical to assume that students could clean up after the birds, too. Yes, we certainly do have student grounds workers fit for the job.

Carrier pigeons are practical. They can get to anywhere, quickly. They are small in size and are nimbly able to navigate through the winding hallways of residence halls and deliver their messages.

Should Lindenwood ever choose to utilize the carrier pigeon method of housing registration, I believe the entire registration process will improve, lead-

CAMS prereqs cause needless hassles

I got up early on registration day just like hundreds of other students hoping to just jump on the portal, register for classes, print a new schedule and then head off to the café for an early breakfast. But one thing that registering for classes has taught me in my two years at Lindenwood is that it’s never that easy.

After waiting fifteen minutes to just get into the initial registration portal, I signed up for three classes successfully before hitting a snag. While trying to register for COM308, Applied Journalism-Newspaper, I found a red Prereq label where the enroll box should have been.

Lindenwood recently instituted a new prerequisite system for CAMS. If you don’t have the needed prerequisites, then you can’t enroll in that class.

It seems kind of funny to me that not only am I the Assistant Entertainment Editor for The Legacy but I’ve also taken the class before. But now the CAMS system is telling me that I don’t have the basic education to take that class.

After forgetting the COM308, I tried registering for the general education math class I wanted to take, and guess what? I can’t take a math class that counts as general education until I take ANOTHER math class.

I will concede to the fact that a prerequisite system is necessary to an extent, but I feel like it has been taken to an unnecessary extreme in this case.

Students should have to take introductory courses to help prepare for higher level courses. But when CAMS locks students out of a 100 level math course because they don’t have the necessary requirements on paper to take it, that’s when this unreasonable system needs to be reassessed.

There is a policy exemption to CAMS in regard to getting into locked classes, which includes getting a registration form signed by several deans, but getting one of those completed is so time consuming and frustrating that it’s hardly worth it.

Lindenwood, over the summer please work on improving your CAMS system. It would make so much of us, the customers, I mean the students, happy.

New baseball season brings back memories

Finally, the winter has waned and the re-birthing process of spring is in full effect; blossoms are blooming, bunnies are bouncing, birds are bathing, bugs are bounding (to my dismay) and, best of all, baseball is back in action.

Though this beloved American game has lost its stranglehold over the American public the last 15 or so years and football has slowly become our new national pastime, there is nothing more gratifying, in my eyes, as the beginning of baseball season.

Despite the fall from grace caused by the 1994-95 MLB strike, which essentially handed the NFL the average American sports fan on a golden platter, the lore and legacy of baseball and its heroes are still entrenched into our country’s landscape.

But what makes baseball special goes beyond its history. It’s the soundtrack to our summer. It’s the t-shirt that gets hidden in our closet for months at a time, but once it’s found, the scent and the feel is the same as it was the last time it slipped over your head. It’s the old friend you run into at a bar and pick up right where you left off.

The values that baseball embodies, such as perseverance, consistency, patience and overcoming adversity, speak to nearly everyone. It’s those values that make people like David Eckstein unlikely heroes and mortal men, such as Ozzie Smith, legends.

Baseball is the game of our fathers and our father’s fathers.

Some of my fondest memories of a child is being in the backyard and playing catch with my dad or hitting balls off a tee. The ball became a metaphor for a father’s knowledge and a child’s unabashed joy, being unselfishly given from one to the other.

The late, great comedian George Carlin once said that, in a comparison of football and baseball, the point of baseball was to go home and to be safe when you got there. He couldn’t have been more right.

Hero film takes new approach

By Matt Korn

Asst. Entertainment Editor

Director Matthew Vaughn and his new movie “Kick-Ass” give us the most realistic version of a superhero’s story to date.

Dave Lizewski is your average nerd.

He’s invisible at school, has few friends, gets beat up on a regular basis, fantasizes about his dream girl and loves comic books.

This leads him into creating a superhero suit of his own and creating the persona Kick-Ass.

When Lizewski gives the costume its first test, his question of “why has nobody ever tried becoming a superhero?” is answered the hard way. Instead of giving up after his first painful encounter, Kick-Ass goes out and stops a gang from killing an unarmed man.

Several camera phones capture this, and Kick-Ass is an Internet sensation.

His antics are noticed by Big Daddy and Hit Girl; the two save his life and then offer a friendship.

But when ruthless mob boss Frank D’Amico comes under the impression that Kick-Ass is to blame for his business ventures going terribly wrong, life becomes more difficult for the character.

The introduction of the Red Mist provides an element to the film that nonreaders of the graphic novel might find surprising.

Before the movie started, expectations for its quality were highly underrated. “Kick-Ass” does a fantastic job of not only proving that it’s a great film, but proving that it’s one of the better superhero flicks of recent time.

From the second this movie starts until the second it’s over, “Kick-Ass” grabs you and takes you on a thrill ride.

The action sequences are fast paced and highly entertaining; to the film’s credit, there’s just enough gore to make a statement without being overkill.

Each action scene was skillfully shot. Vaughn even manages to throw in an enjoyable first person action scene to shake things up.

The comedic elements of “Kick-Ass” make the film hilarious as well.

Juggling both components effectively, the film will have you rolling on the floor at times.

However, sensitive ears be warned, this film uses more foul language than a group of sailors.

While the film is packed with action and comedy, it still has room to execute an original and refreshing story.

With good acting across the board the story is translated perfectly from its graphic novel to the silver screen.

The ending did a great job of rounding out the story, and to the audience’s delight set up for a sequel.

He Said/She Said

What do you think of health care reform?

By Matt Korn

Asst. Entertainment Editor

When looking over topics for the He Said/She Said column, we here at The Legacy make sure to pick an intelligent topic that will hopefully challenge you the reader into thinking about what we have to say. Ok, I lied; we just close our eyes and pick a topic at random, and this week’s unlucky topic is healthcare.

Now I could go on and on about my position on health care, and even what I think about the bill passing with zero Republican support. But that doesn’t matter, does it? Does anybody even know what exactly the Democrats passed?

For those of you who didn’t consider the massive senate bill to be a “must read,” or have skipped the ridiculous amount of press and “Healthcare for Dummies” breakdowns that have been plastered everywhere, here’s just a few points that might interest you: the new health care reform prohibits denial for pre-existing conditions, it might cut our national debt in the future, imposes a 10% tax on tanning in tanning beds, and students can now remain on their parents’ healthcare plans until they turn 26.

On paper, the reform has some appeal; it will expand coverage, make it easier and more affordable to get insurance. Some might argue that the billions that will now be charged to insurers, pharmaceutical corporations, and medical equipment makers to help cover this will end up hurting us more than helping us. And we’ve all heard that families earning more than $250,000 will get a nasty surprise come tax time, but isn’t it supposed to be for the greater good?

Is this sweeping health care reform a good idea? It could be years, decades even before we start to see what kind of an affect this has on America. As a nation we should do our best to stay informed. After all, this could be the best thing to happen to America since the color TV, or the worst thing since George W. Bush.

By Tonaya Marr

Staff Writer

Guess what? I love healthcare, and so do 86.2% of my fellow Canadians.

In fact, Canada’s healthcare was first implemented in my home province. We like everyone getting equal treatment. We like having babies for free. We like knowing that we can break an arm, and not spend the rest of our lives paying the medical bills to cover it. Health care is working for Canada, and I think that eventually, it can work for the United States, too.

One thing people love to bring up is the wait time. Waiting lists to get surgery, to see specialists, waiting for hours in emergency rooms. When you’re the person sitting around waiting, it’s definitely less than fun, but studies have shown that increased wait times actually have benefits.

Waiting to have surgery reduces the chance of having unnecessary surgery, which often result in more surgeries, or death. Patience is a virtue, after all.

And really, waiting a couple of months rarely kills anyone.

When I learned that President Obama’s healthcare bill had passed, I was happy for Americans. Or rather, I was happy for the future generations of Americans, who will receive the benefits of health care long after we’re all dead. Does it suck that American tax payers are going to spend the rest of their lives paying into some fund that will HOPEFULLY pay for health care in the distant future? Yeah, it does.

But like I said, healthcare is awesome and even if each Lindenwood student never personally gets to bask in the warm glow of a free hospital stay, at least your children (or their children) will have that opportunity.

Unless of course we all die in 2012. In that case, you’ll all just be paying a heck of a lot more taxes than you ever thought you’d need to, with no eventual payout. Fingers crossed that’s not the case, eh?

‘Marmalade’ redefines dark comedy

By Matt Korn

Asst. Entertainment Editor

Most people have imaginary friends when they’re little. Some of those imaginary friends might be portrayed as a little girl that just moved in next door or a little boy who loves cartoons as much as you do.

Well, for little Lucy in the play “Mr. Marmalade,” her imaginary friends are a middle aged drug addict/workaholic and his faithful assistant.

Life is tough for 4-year old Lucy (Jenifer Sabbert) who lives alone with her overwhelmed mother (Hillary Gokenbach). Too young to be in school, and with her mother having to work, Lucy is forced to sit at home alone until her babysitter arrives.

Her escape comes in the form of Mr. Marmalade (Brian Kappler), a sharply dressed businessman and Lucy’s “love interest,” who on first impression seems like he gives off a false excitement about Lucy’s tea party.

Mr. Marmalade rushes off to business and Lucy’s babysitter Emily (Lauren Costigan) arrives. It isn’t much later when Emily’s boyfriend George (Eric Peters) and his suicidal stepbrother Larry (Jake Bucher) arrive. Emily and George go upstairs (to play “Doctor” one assumes) as Lucy is forced to play with Larry, who ironically end up playing doctor as well.

Mr. Marmalade’s assistant Bradley (David Moreshead) discovers Lucy’s “infidelity,” and against his better judgment agrees not to tell.

What happens after that is a whirlwind of adult situations slammed together with childhood interaction.

Kappler did fantastic as Mr. M., showing incredible versatility by playing both charming and aggressive. Moreshead was spot on in his rendition of Bradley, showing ease in playing the part of someone who acts in a professional manner (much like his role in “Andrea’s Got Two Boyfriends”).

Peters gave the audience more than they would ever want to see, but also played his role effectively. But it was Sabbert who really stole the show; her childish tirades mixed with her almost bipolar behavior make her character fun to watch. For those who paid close attention, it was interesting to see how real world instances influenced Sabbert’s character. For example, Larry explains methods of suicide to Lucy. Then toward the end of the play when Mr. Marmalade commits suicide, the method he uses is one that Larry mentioned.

Mr. Marmalade is shockingly edgy and profane; especially when you consider that the main character is four years old. But that’s why it works so incredibly well.

The set is highly exaggerated; it immediately gives the audience the impression that we’re supposed to be seeing things from a child’s perspective, when in reality there is nothing “childish” about this play.

Extreme profanity, violence, smoking, sexual situations, drug use, and even a scene that insinuates the killing of a baby make up this play.

It should also be noted that “Mr. Marmalade” is hysterically funny. The mix between adult situations and child interaction is so precise that you forget you’re watching little kids, but when that realization does randomly strike, you feel dirty just for watching it.

But be warned, no matter how off the wall it is, “Mr. Marmalade” will have you laughing darkly until the end.

Roller hockey wins eighth title

By Alex Jahncke
Sports Editor

After a disappointing end to last season Lindenwood's roller hockey team regained their status as champions.

This past Sunday the Lions capped off their 28-1-1 season with a 5-1 win over Arizona State to clinch their eighth national championship in the past nine years.

"It was a good time," said Head Coach Ron Beilsten. "We will enjoy this one for awhile."

The national tournament started off a little rough for the Lions. They opened up against the University of Buffalo. The Lions gave up two quick goals in the first period, then it was down hill from there. They would suffer their first loss of the season by the score of 7-2.

"It was a bad game," Beilsten said. "We didn't dwell on it and we never doubted ourselves. We knew we could play better. It was just a matter of working a little harder."

The Lions won their next game 5-2 over Michigan State University. Next, they tied University of Missouri-St. Louis 4-4, but would beat them later in the semi-finals 6-2 to earn the chance at the championship game. They also shutout Hofstra University 10-0 and beat University of Rhode Island 9-1.

Finally, they would meet Arizona State. It did not take long for the Lions to get on the board. 13 seconds into the game John McGuinness scored his first of two goals in the period. Travis Bokina added another goal midway through the first. The Lions went in to the second period up 3-0, and they did not allow a single shot on goal.

The game was much closer in the final two periods, but the damage was already done. Sean Sullivan added two more goals for the Lions, while goalie Dave Thomas only allowed one. They went on to win by the final score of 5-1, and clinched their eighth title in nine years.

"We are very excited to get it [the championship] back," said Beilsten. "It was really something special."

Heading into the offseason the Lions will work to stay atop of the game. Their best asset is the youthfulness of the team. They will not be losing many players due to graduation. There are many strong recruits that will be added. With this in mind coach Beilsten feels confident about next season too.

"We are not losing much next year," he said. "With the addition of some new players fighting for positions will be keen."

"We are very excited to get it [the championship] back. It was really something special"

Lions take 3rd at nationals

The Men's Swimming and Diving team finishing in third place at the 2010 Swimming and Diving National Championships with 477 points, and the women finishing in tenth place with 139 points, Lindenwood seemed to have a satisfying finish to the season.

The Men and Women's teams finished the meet with seven All-Americans and sixteen All-American awards, and coach Craig Penrose was named NAIA men's coach of the year. Seven different swimmers finished with All-American swims, with one being a record-breaking time in the 200 yard breaststroke while taking first. Molina broke the record by just a little less than eight seconds which will be a hard one to beat. Junior Simon Morley and freshman DJ Ashruf finished with two All-American swims and senior John Tocjeck, Collin Sharpe and sophomore Sarah Billamosa each received one. Morley finished first in the 200 backstroke consolation final. Morley was also a part of the 400 medley relay team who finished second, runner up to Fresno Pacific. The three other swimmers in this relay consisted of Ashruf, Molina, and Hernandez. Ashruf also finished fourth in the 100 yard freestyle while breaking a school record, and Ubaldo Zavaleta set a school record in the 1650 yard freestyle as well

"I'm proud of all of the athletes, and our success as a team. The California teams are getting better and we did exceptionally well"

—Coach Penrose

Freshmen Javier Hernandez finished the meet having the most All-Americans swims, with five. Hernandez was a member of the 200 yard medley relay team which consisted of Simon Morely, Sergio Molina, and DJ Ashruf, who finished second place and were named All-Americans. Hernandez finished a second time with All-American status in the 200 yard individual medley, where he finished in third place. Hernandez was named All-American when he finished in second in the 100 yard fly and when he finished first in the 200 yard butterfly. Not only did Hernandez finish first in the 200 yard butterfly, but he broke the school record and the NAIA record while doing so. Hernandez was new to the team this year and has a lot of potential in the future to come.

"With more talent, comes more success," coach Penrose said.

Freshman Sergio Molina finished with four All-American swimmers and finished fifth while doing so.

Tocjeck made his mark by taking second in the three meter diving event, and Sharpe made his mark also taking second place, but in the one meter event. Billamosa earned her honors by placing third in the 200 yard individual medley, winning the 400 individual medley, and placing fourth in the 200 yard butterfly.

Despite the eligibility problems, the team pulled through with some excellent results. The team finished the year with much success and a lot of talent was exposed that will help the team next season. "Competition is getting tougher from year to year, which means we need to work even harder," coach Penrose said. "I'm proud of all of the athletes, and our success as a team."

Lady Lions season winding down

By Micah Woodard
Editor-In-Chief

Bouts of lengthy winning streaks and extensive losing streaks have dominated the 2010 season for Lindenwood softball.

The 22-16 Lady Lions played a long stretch of home games in March. From March 10-18, Lindenwood lost six of eight games, dropping their overall record to 6-10. However, the Lady Lions then won their next six games – all against conference foes – providing them confidence and a healthy 6-2 Heart of America Athletic Conference (HAAC) record.

But LU proceeded to travel to Arkansas and Alabama for six difficult matchups against top teams – and lost every one of them.

Poor performance in clutch hitting situations was partly to blame for the team's streaky play.

"We're not producing when we need to," Head Coach Don Loberg said. "We're getting the hits – just not when we need them."

During the losing streaks, Lindenwood lost several games by one or two runs. Loberg said they had several chances to win those games, but the timely hitting just wasn't there.

However, the year of streaks continued. Since the Alabama/Arkansas road trip, Lindenwood has gone undefeated, winning 10 consecutive games. This included a sweep of the McKendree Tournament held this past weekend, where LU won all four games and outscored its opponents 30-4.

Luckily for the Lady Lions, the winning streaks occurred during conference play, which has now provided the team with an outstanding 10-2 conference record and a No. 1 conference ranking. This is key, as Loberg said the team's only possible ticket to the NAIA national tournament is to win the HAAC conference tournament in May.

The HAAC tournament, which begins April 30, will consist of the top eight teams in the conference. In each round, teams compete in a best-of-three series to determine the victor. The higher-seeded team re-

Golf season rolling along

By Todd Schloessman Staff Reporter

With three tournaments left on the season, the men's golf team has had a successful season thus far.

"We've played consistent golf all season, and I am pleased with how the season has gone" said Head Coach Tim LaPlaut.

One of the biggest highlights of the season was the Mobile Fall Classic, in Mobile, Alabama in which the team won the tournament beating out six other schools for first place.

Recently it has played in larger tournaments finishing 10th out of 20 in the North Alabama Spring Classic in Muscle Shoals, Alabama over spring break and most recently the Carolina Springs Intercollegiate tournament in White Lake, North Carolina where the team placed 5th out of 17.

The first day of the tournament the team gathered a combined score of 298 to finish the day in 6th place, but moved into 5th on Saturday with one more stroke to end with 299.

The Lions were led by Lourens Klevnhaus who shot 74 both days on the par 72 course and finished 19th overall. Morgan Leigh had a strong showing finishing with scores of 74 and 75 on both days ending up in 24th place overall.

The Lions finished with a total of 597 to get the 5th place finish, which should have been a confidence builder after the previous 10th place finish as well as a nice way to end spring break for the team.

The team will next compete at the NAAIA Classic in Indianapolis, Indiana April 12th and 13th, followed two weeks later by the HAAC Championship in Booneville, MO.

"We're looking to build on our successes this season to finish the season on a very high note" LaPlaut said.

"We've played consistent golf all season, and I am pleased with how the season has gone."

Women's lacrosse wins three at home tournament

This past weekend the Lady Lions hosted the annual Lindenwood Invitational. They went 3-1 losing only to the number one ranked team in Santa Clara University. This ended their season high 14 game win streak.

By Issa David
Staff Reporter

The women's Lacrosse team held the annual Lindenwood Invitational, on Thursday through Sunday of last week. These were the last games of the season before the Women's Collegiate Lacrosse League (WCLL) tournament held in Toledo, Ohio on April 17 and 18. The Lady Lions have a 13-1 record entering the Invitational and are ranked number two in the country according to the Women's Division Intercollegiate Athletics (WDIA).

The team faced number seven ranked Brigham Young University (BYU) on Thursday night. The Lady Lions got off to a quick start, scoring six goals. BYU came back, but the Lady Lions held a 9-4 lead at half. In the second half the teams traded goals, both scoring four. Lindenwood came out on top 13-8. Justiene Groothuis scored seven goals in the game; LU won 14 of 21 draws.

Their second game was against the 13 ranked University of Michigan Wolverines (UM) where conditioning was the story of the game.

LU built a lead of three goals twice in the first half and both times UM got the score back within one. In the second half it was all Lions. They scored seven times while UM only scored four. Lacey Vatland had a great game, scoring five times and assisted four times. Justiene Groothuis scored twice and had four assists.

The biggest game of the tournament for LU happened on Saturday with a showdown against the number one ranked Santa Clara University (SCU) Broncos. A classic battle between the number one and two ranked teams happened.

The Broncos started off quick, scoring six goals to LU's one. Their defense was strong as the they were able to stop the Broncos from scoring any more goals in the half. LU scored three times to make it a 6-4 game at half, but the LU defense did not hold up as SCU scored five times to win the game 11-5, ending a 14 game win streak. LU rebounded in the next game and beat Central Florida 16-5.

The Lady Lions now prepare for the WCLL tournament that will take place April 17, and then the WDIA tournament on May 5 where the team could have a rematch against the Broncos of Santa Clara.

Fling

The one finalized event is the Spring Festival. It will take place on Monday, April 19, from 4:30-7 p.m.

One of the many events for Spring Fling is the Battle of the Bulge, a giant capture the flag game sponsored by The Vine. The music fraternity Sigma Alpha Iota will host a movie night on Wednesday, April 21, featuring the film "Music Man." The Black Student Union will have a bake sale during the festival.

The sorority Delta Zeta will host the traditional "Big Man on Campus" show Thursday night. "Basically, the show is a male beauty pageant," Stewart said.

Other events include a water balloon fight sponsored by Phi Lambda Phi and a fashion design challenge on Monday, April 19, sponsored by the fashion club. The dance, traditionally the last event of the week, will be held on Friday, April 23, from 8-11 p.m.

Access

"If the Access Mo. cuts pass, I would have to get a full-time job just to help [my parents] pay for school," Kelley said after participating in the letter writing campaign.

Dan Bedell, LSGA member and co-organizer of the letter writing campaign, estimated that more than 50 letters expressing opposition to the budget cuts were written to Nixon. Bedell also said that posters would be visible on campus this week, urging students and staff to call Nixon and express their opposition to the cuts.

Items to be auctioned include baskets from local boutiques. In past years, items have included Cardinal tickets and autographed helmets. "Last year we raised a little over $5000. We are anticipating doubling that this year," Weber said.

After the event, students in the class will be given the opportunity to vote on how the money will be spent to benefit Harmon Hall.

Last year, the proceeds went toward naming rights for two of the new classrooms, Weber said.

Edward Morris, dean of the School of Business and Entrepreneurship, said, "This will be the third year of a successful event. It has a great deal of benefit for the school, but mainly for those students who participate in it."

Cost to enter the tournament is $400 per four-person team or $115 per individual. To only attend the dinner and silent auction is $25 per person.

Anyone interested in participating in or donating to the event can contact Abby Weber at (636) 697-7350 or by e-mail at AWeber@lindenwood.edu.

LU to host Honors Convocation

By Stefanie Zobus
Contributing Writer

Lindenwood will host its yearly Honors Convocation at 2 p.m. on April 25 in The Bezemes Family Theatre in the J. Scheidegger Center.

The convocation acknowledges students who have been successful in their majors, arts, and volunteerism or have shown extraordinary leadership and dedication.

There are 60 individual awards. The most important ones are the Easton Award (for females) and the Sibley Award (for males). The awards are named after Lindenwood's founders

Mary Easton Sibley and Major George C. Sibley.

They recognize seniors who have shown great leadership, high academic performance, service and good character.

Their names also appear on a plaque in Roemer Hall.

Two new awards will be introduced this year: the Community Service Transcript Designation Program, which honors students who have completed at least 500 hours of community work while at Lindenwood; and the Roselyn Zanzille Leadership Character Award, which recognizes outstanding work in interdisciplinary and global studies.

There are also group awards like Organization of the Year, which rewards an organization's extraordinary involvement in Lindenwood.

Another group award is given to seniors graduating with University Honors.

The Honors College requires the students to complete 24 hours of Honors credit with excellent grades.

Successful graduates receive a certificate from President James Evans and a purple cord at graduation.

Moreover, University Honors are shown in the transcript and diploma. This year, 13 students will graduate Honors College.

"We are trying to promote community involvement and what Lindenwood has to offer," Ickes said. "We try to invite the students and community members."

Guffey said that last year the international festival was a great success, especially with the food. "We had about 25 countries representing cuisines," he said.

Prizes are given in several categories. "Japan was best performance for their martial art demonstration and Nepal won for best cuisine," Guffey said.

He also said that more than 600 people attended the festival along with the St. Charles community.

"We couldn't be more pleased," Guffey said.

"Our goal for this year is to highlight the depth and breadth of Lindenwood's multicultural diversity in an educational and experiential

Wollenberg and a friend began with a trip into the mountains/around the city and then climbed pyramids in Teotihuacán.

"My legs hurt the next day from climbing all the stairs," Wollenberg said. "The view was amazing from the top, so it was well worth it."

By taking local touring busses, Wollenberg toured many different cities, such as Coyoacán, and shopped in Mexican markets. Another mountain town called Cuernavaca had a traditional Easter celebration taking place and different places to stop/eat.

"There was definitely a language barrier because I don't speak any Spanish except 'el bano'," Wollenberg said. "I still had a great time and managed to get by."
