THE COVER

A lone student heads for classes the day after the first snow of the year at St. Charles. The scenes are not new—alumnae know and love each of the familiar landmarks presented in our "Winter on Campus" pictorial story which begins in this issue on page 8.

FINDING YOUR DESTINY

(Editor's Note: Dr. Johnson is associate professor of religion and director of Lindenwood's program for the preparation of certified church educators. Her address was presented to mothers and daughters present at the college's Parents' Day luncheon Saturday, Oct. 12.)

By Dr. Esther L. Johnson

Here at Lindenwood, on this usually quiet campus, we can sometimes hear the jet planes coming into the airport just eight miles east of here. Yesterday, as I heard two or three big jets come in, I wondered how many of you parents had arrived by air. I was reminded that St. Louis is in many ways the crossroads of the nation.

I want to begin what I have to say today with a story about a man and an airplane. In one of our airbases in the middle west, there is a young flier in the United States Air Force who is especially skilled at long, dangerous flying. He is so skilled that the flight commander on the base gives him special missions to fly under difficult circumstances of storm winds, low temperatures, and poor visibility. Sometimes these missions have involved landing on limited runways in the Arctic with special risks and difficulties. Always, Ted has brought the plane back safely.

One day, last winter, Ted was called to the flight commander's office to receive some special instructions. The commander said, "Ted, the United States needs a pilot to make a top-secret flying mission to secure information necessary to our country. We have chosen you because of your experience, character, and record." He handed Ted a sealed envelope.

"In this sealed envelope are three instructions. You must be willing to obey them to the letter before you accept this mission. Take them home. Read them. If you are willing after reading them to take the mission, come back tomorrow and tell me."

That night, in his quarters, Ted opened the sealed envelope and read the following three instructions:

1. You have one month in which to find out everything you can about where you are going. Study maps, weather conditions, previous flights over the area, etc.
2. You must be willing to give your life, if necessary, to carry out this mission.
3. You must not come back until you have accomplished your mission.

The next day, Ted reported to the flight commander and accepted the mission. He then began immediately to use the one short month to study in preparation. During the flight itself, he ran into storms, had engine trouble, battled snow and ice, landed on a short runway; yet he secured his information, reboarded his plane and returned to his base—MISSION ACCOMPLISHED.

Today, I want to talk to those of you who are students, particularly, but also to the parents, about your mission at Lindenwood College—and your mission, though different from a flight to the Arctic, begins with three instructions:

1. You have four years in which to find out everything you can about this mission.
2. You must be willing to give your life for the mission, if necessary.
3. You must not leave these halls of learning here at Lindenwood until you have accomplished this mission.

And what is this mission? Your mission is to find your place in the world as an educated woman—as one who has had the privilege (the very high privilege denied to thousands of women in our world) of a higher education. Saying it a different way—your mission is to find the work you are best fitted to do. To discover your vocation. To find your destiny.

And you will discover, (especially the freshmen—seniors already know it!) that there are many challenges on the way—tests of your ability to grow and to learn. There are many difficulties in your academic and personal lives you may not have anticipated when you first came here. There is the need to develop skills and competences which will enable you to fulfill your mission. But, above all, there is the need to develop certain attitudes toward yourself, toward other people, and toward truth which will determine your philosophy of life and your skill in human relations. Having this mission (to find your life work) will give your life in this liberal arts college a goal that will enable you to rise above the difficulties and accept the challenges.

I would like, now, to take each of these three instructions and discuss them:

First Instruction—You have four years in which to find out everything you can about this mission.

I think of a college student, like you, who, in 1893, decided to prepare himself, through his university training, to be a teacher and a musician (he later became one of the greatest living interpreters of the music of Bach.) His name was Albert Schweitzer. During his years at the university he studied Hebrew, Greek, Bible, theology, literature, modern languages, and music. He sought out the professors on his campus who could stimulate him in conversation and in discussion. He wrote papers, did research, took trips to special libraries for information. He so well filled his time at the university that he was able to go on to graduate study to achieve three doctorates. All through this period, Dr. Schweitzer had a sense of purpose and vocation; for, early in life, he discovered a desire to serve people—to make his life count among those really in need. And we know that today he has made a significant contribution to medical service in Africa.

Here at Lindenwood we offer you an opportunity to get the same kind of broad education Schweitzer found in the humanities, arts, and sciences—also, to train yourselves in a major field where you can contribute to your community as a specialist.

I think also of Dr. Millicent MacIntosh, who has been president of Barnard College in New York City—a distinguished woman in the field of education for women—who trained herself during four years at Bryn Mawr in a broad number of subjects. Later appointed as headmistress of the Brearley School, she continued the habits of study acquired in college. Her distinguished contributions to education resulted in her call to the presidency of Barnard. In the midst of this busy career, she also married, had five children, and was a creative homemaker, wife, and mother. She used to tell her students at Barnard that her ability to make a creative home had only been possible because of habits learned in college, and I remember her speaking of these specific habits—reading the newspaper every day, reading at least one stimulating book each week, and choosing friends who could broaden her horizon and keep her intellectually alive. It was these habits that helped to make her a stimulating companion to her husband and children. Although famous as a college president, she felt her greatest achievement and challenge lay in preparing four sons and a daughter to enter life as educated people.

Both Dr. MacIntosh and Dr. Schweitzer are examples of two leaders who took their college training seriously and used their four years to lay the groundwork for service to the world.

Let us go on to the second instruction for your mission:

You must be willing to give your life for this mission if necessary.

This is surely a frightening statement—to be willing to give your life. What does it mean to be willing to give your life?

It means to take risks, to accept sacrifices, to put your service to the world before your personal pleasure and success. Becoming educated is very risky. Who knows? If you really study some subject seriously in college, you may find you have to change the ideas you've had since childhood. You may have to accept a higher goal for your life than you ever dreamed. But, as a great teacher once said “. . . he who loseth his life shall find it.” He who takes the risk of losing himself will find himself. Some people cannot learn because they are not willing to take the risk of learning.

I think of a man who was willing to risk his life for his mission. Michelangelo, one of the greatest artists, architects, painters of all time, risked his life literally to learn the subject of human anatomy. In his work as a sculptor and fresco painter, Michelangelo needed to understand the human body. If you have read The Agony and The Ecstasy by Irving Stone, you remember the difficulties Michelangelo had in getting the key to the room in the monastery in Florence where he could do the dissection necessary to his scientific inquiry. In those days, dissection of a human body was a crime punishable by death. Michelangelo found the task unpleasant, nerve-wracking, full of anguish. He had to worry constantly about being detected.

But, in that little room in the monastery, he got the scientific knowledge necessary to bring his statues to life and to paint the magnificent frescoes on the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel.

I think also of Dr. Jonas Salk who discovered the polio vaccine. Last summer, when I moved here from California, one of my neighbours said to me, “It’s so wonderful not to have to worry about polio every time I take my children to a swimming pool or to the beach. The Salk Vaccine shots have changed all that.”

For years, Dr. Salk worked in his laboratory and gave overtime each day with immense concentration on delicate experiments for vaccine development. He even innoculated himself, taking the risk of death. His mission was to discover a vaccine which would save the lives of thousands.

What does all this mean for you? It means that, here at Lindenwood, you will have to be willing to lose your life if you are to find your life. The science majors will want to lose themselves in the laboratory with chemistry, physics, and biology. The music majors will want to lose themselves in the practice room with piano, voice, cello, and choral singing. The drama majors will want to give unsparingly to produce the plays and productions which it will be our privilege to see. The religion and philosophy majors will want to lose themselves in the library coming to grips with historical and systematic thought.

In other areas at Lindenwood, too, all of you will be taking risks and making sacrifices, forgetting yourselves in order to help others. You will be taking risks in human relations. Making friends is very risky. They may ask you to give in friendship. Being part of a dormitory family also involves demands. You may have to serve on a committee and participate in dormitory management.

A famous person remarked recently that although knowledge in atomic science and spacial navigation changes every day—the constants in human relations remain the same. And understanding these constants and growing in interpersonal skills is essential to the fulfillment of any vocation you may choose.

This brings us to our third instruction:

You must not go home until you have accomplished your mission.

This does not mean that your education has ended when you leave Lindenwood. Far from it! But it does mean that before you marry, take a job, or choose a graduate school, it is important for you to have a purpose and a sense of direction. It is important for you to have acquired an understanding of yourself and your unique interests and abilities. Dr. Thomas W. Mendenhall, president of a large women's eastern college, has said that a college education exists to produce a unique individual who will make a unique contribution to society and culture.

I remember a comment by Miss Alice Freeman Palmer, then president of Wellesley College. Someone asked her what she got out of college. She replied, "In college, I discovered what my strongest points and abilities were—and, after college, I tried to bring the 'whole' of my life up to that level!"

What a wonderful idea! To discover one's gifts and abilities and to bring the whole of one's life up to that level!

I think of a girl in the news recently—Valentina Tereshkova. In a Russian University, she discovered a calling, a sense of mission in aviation engineering. Later, she entered the Russian cosmonaut program and recently made the first space flight of any woman in the world. Here is a woman who completed her mission before she came home.

I think of Tania Metzel, a French protestant woman, who discovered in college a great interest in prison reform and penology. After college, she did graduate work in a seminary and is now doing acts of mercy and compassion as French protestant chaplain to the women prisoners in the prisons of Paris.

Some of you may have read in one of the September issues of Life magazine the story about the American Mount Everest expedition which put six men (in three separate teams) on top of Mount Everest. Jim Whittaker, one of the leaders, described in the article the excitement and satisfaction of reaching the top. But all through the account, Whittaker stresses one thing over and over again. In his mind, the success of the expedition was chiefly due to the supporting party of carriers, scientists, and climbers who stayed at the foot of the mountain and brought up oxygen, food, and supplies, when necessary, to the various camps on the trail.

I would like to say that in your expedition through college you too have a supporting party always ready to encourage and help you. If I may speak for the faculty and administration of Lindenwood—we stand ready to support you during your four years of college; to give you oxygen, if necessary (and I mean that literally). We care about you. We pray for you. We work for you.

We want you to make it to the top—and then to go out into the world and fulfill your destiny.

A PRAYER FOR LINDENWOOD COLLEGE

Offered by Dr. C. Eugene Conover, dean of the chapel, at the opening meeting of the faculty Sept. 7, 1963.

Eternal God, before whose Face the generations rise and pass away, we come before Thee as this new academic year begins, conscious of the depth and richness of the culture which we represent and share as educators, and of the long and useful history of the college in which we serve.

We ask not only for competence and wisdom in our varied forms of research and teaching, and in our counseling, but also for increasing understanding and agreement concerning ways in which Lindenwood College may most effectively serve its students, now and in coming years.

We ask for Thy blessing, not only for ourselves this day, but for all of the members of the Administration and the Board of Directors, for our students and their families—here and in other lands, for the wide circle of alumnae and friends who share in the life and work of this college, and for our colleagues in all colleges and universities around the world, through Jesus Christ our Lord.

—Amen.

MORAL EDUCATION

(Editor's Note: Scarcely a magazine appears today without an article or discussion on morals in our cities and on our campuses. Dr. Conover's book has received favorable reviews in many publications; he has appeared before Lindenwood alumnae for review of his book and discussion of moral education. We believe this review published in the Union Seminary Quarterly Review, Vol. XVIII, May, 1963, is important.)

Moral Education in Family, School, and Church

by C. Eugene Conover, Westminster Press, 1962, 144 pp, $3.00

The reaction against moralism and moral education or character training in contemporary theology has been so strong that one's first impulse is to ignore a book that purports to discuss "moral education." However, he who looks further will find this an absorbing, lucid, penetrating, sophisticated, and provocative book. More than that it is helpful in indicating guidelines to those who want to carry out their responsibilities for moral education.

The author is an alumnus of Union Theological Seminary, a Presbyterian minister, and dean of the chapel and chairman of the department of philosophy and religion at Lindenwood College in St. Charles, Mo. The book is addressed to parents, ministers, directors of Christian education, and youth leaders rather than to specialists in Christian ethics.

By "moral education" he means "the nurture and training given to children, teaching by example, and counseling of individuals, as well as more formal instruction in morality and ethics." He uses the term "morality" rather than the more acceptable term "ethics" because his book "is not primarily concerned with ethical theory in the philosophical sense, but rather with moral virtue and character, the goals of the moral life, and the principles and standards by which to distinguish right from wrong conduct."

He recognizes that the crisis in morals is rooted in the crisis in religion, so that the church faces real limitations today in fulfilling its role in teaching the values which matter most. It has less time to work with persons than the public school, and like the public school is dependent upon the parents to lay a foundation for morality in the home. However, the family is less and less concerned with teaching the faith and at the same time less influential in the life and conduct of its members or in developing their system of values. However, he believes that no other institution can take the "place of the church as the inspirer and transformer of human motives and conduct, for the sake of God and man."

This book contains only five chapters, but each is a gem. It would make a good study book in the church. It should appeal to college students as well as adults.

In the first chapter he analyzes morals and moral education in America today, with a telling and well-documented description of the situation on the college campus as a reflection of American morality in general. He points out that the values which are most powerfully proclaimed and central for many persons are in themselves essentially conducive to immorality and irresponsibility.

In other chapters he deals with misconceptions of morality and with the nature and purpose of morality. He characterizes the moral person. He discusses the meaning and suggests how moral education is to be accomplished. He makes a plea for dealing openly with problems of right conduct. He asks for adequate images and models of morality.

Perhaps his most telling chapter is the one analyzing the reaction against moralism in our time in which theologians have teamed up with psychoanalysts, social scientists, pragmatic philosophers, existentialists, and contemporary artists in condemning it. He meets the arguments head-on, acknowledging the positive but pointing out the negative aspects of the reaction. He concludes that the "central moral problem of our time is not that of introducing humaneness into a rigid morality. It is rather that of teaching the basic spirit and purpose of morality, and the standards by which good and evil can be recognized. . . . No movements of protest against moralism, or against immorality, meet the central moral need of our time. That need is for positive moral education." (p. 100)

True to his spirit he suggests an approach to moral education that is not "moralistic" in the pejorative sense of the term. He believes that morality is rooted in religious faith. "A religion inevitably includes a morality, for it is an appeal to accept a way of living that expresses one's faith and devotion." The increase in church membership which has brought no discernible change in character of conduct is evidence of the loss of authority and reality of religion. He affirms that we must help persons to understand what it means to be religious. We must see culture in terms of religious faith. We need to recognize that responsibility to God takes precedence over all other obligations. Otherwise society cannot be maintained and the base of individual life is threatened with disintegration. Furthermore we need to envision a way of living which can be recommended to young people as a true expression of Christian faith.

This is a timely book. No doubt it foreshadows an increasing concern in American life with moral values, goals, and character growing out of the recognition that faith has behavioral outcomes. Perhaps if we accept the fact that there is a character which issues from faith, character education will once more be restored in our vocabulary of Christian nurture.

ON CAMPUS

A two-week program, Fall Fine Arts Festival, was held on campus Oct. 17-30 with a series of convocations featuring speakers, dramas, and concerts. Six nationally known print makers were presented in an art department exhibit in Roemer Hall gallery.

Parents of Lindenwood students were guests at the college Parents' Day Oct. 12. Open house in academic departments and dormitories, special luncheons for students and their mothers and fathers were held, and the day ended with a western supper party under a circus tent erected on campus.

Class officers this year include:

Seniors—Anita Gerken, St. Charles, president; Mary Sue Stockenburg, University City, vice-president; Linda Hoke, El Dorado, Ark., secretary-treasurer; and Judy Leatherby, Glenshaw, Pa., Student Council representative.

Juniors—Maxine Basch, Los Angeles, Calif., president; Bobi Randolph, Manitowoc, Wis., vice-president; Marty Sparks, Cave Spring, Ga., treasurer; and Vivian Lane, Morrilton, Ark., Student Council representative.

Sophomores—Betty Cline, Carrollton, Ky., president; Karen Scholle, Concordia, Mo., vice-president; Paula Bowlin, Pocahontas, Ark., secretary; Suzie Lash, Kirkwood, Mo., treasurer; and Marilyn Kuhlmann, Glendale, Mo., Student Council representative.

Freshmen—Sue Moss, Ft. Worth, Tex., president; Cheryl Costa, Wichita, Kan., vice-president; Cynthia Graham, Corpus Christi, Tex., secretary; Lynn Russell, Hutchinson, Kan., treasurer; and Maureen Englehardt, St. Louis, Student Council representative.

Sixteen freshmen, each of whom ranked in the upper two per cent of her high school graduating class, were recognized as honor scholars and presented certificates at a special convocation in September. President F. L. McCluer presided and Dean Paul W. Pixler was speaker.

Judy Muntz, a senior from Keokuk, Ia., and president of Honor Board, was elected Cotillion Queen at the annual November event at the Chase Hotel in St. Louis. Ota Alexander, a senior from Paola, Kans., was maid of honor. Other members of the court were: Jo Ann Conrad, Denver, Colo.; Nancy Hamilton, El Dorado, Ark.; Bari Holden, Ft. Worth, Tex.; Mary Ann Messer, St. Charles, Mo.; Robi Randolph, Manitowoc, Wis.; and Ginny Staub, Darien, Conn.

Over 150 high school seniors were present for Guest Weekend on the Lindenwood campus in mid-November. Almost all the students arrived late Friday and remained until Sunday. Meetings with members of the administration, faculty, and student leaders were held; social activities were also a part of the week end.

Two awards presented Lindenwood College at the district meeting of the American Alumni Council and American College Public Relations Association meeting in Sioux Falls, S.D., early in December are shown above.

Promotion work by the college received a first and third place in separate categories. This was the first time Lindenwood has entered the competition and had a representative at the meeting. Glenn G. Thomas, director of admissions and public relations, was on hand for the three-day session.

Many special Christmas programs were planned for December, including dormitory parties. The Choralaires gave a special program at Vespers early in the month. Later they made appearances at a number of churches in the St. Louis area.

Art students, displaying works from stained glass ornaments to Christmas cards, presented an exhibit as members of the Student Artist Guild.

KCLC celebrated the Christmas season by presenting several special programs prior to the beginning of Christmas recess.

Orchesis presented an interpretation in dance of Igor Stravinsky's "Mass" in Roemer Auditorium Dec. 18.

Christmas Candlelight Services were held Sunday, Dec. 15, in the chapel with a special program planned by the Chapel Choir. Following a candlelight procession, a festival of nine lessons and carols in the Old English Cathedral tradition was presented.

Members of Lindenwood's faculty and administration appeared before the college's Alumnae Council when its fall meeting was held on campus Oct. 28 and 29.

The group, composed of officers, the past-president, and nine council members-at-large, meets each year in the fall and spring to plan activities for the college's more than 8000 alumnae.

Dyke Steinbeck Barton, president, presided at all meetings.

A curriculum center, organized and arranged for the benefit of students, faculty, and administration of Lindenwood College, is open in the library.

About 2500 pieces of material submitted by public school systems, state departments of education, colleges, campus schools, and universities where produced and in current use are included in the center.

Sponsor of the center is the department of education at Lindenwood. It is supervised by Marjorie Ann Banks, associate professor of education. Students in the teacher education program and members of the Sibley Chapter of the Student National Education Association are members of the staff and are in attendance to assist visitors.

Arrangement of contents includes 17 different divisions under which the material is being displayed. The new materials shelved in the center were displayed by the Committee for the Exhibit of Curriculum Bulletins and Instructional Materials at the 18th annual conference of the Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development, 1963.

Lindenwood alumnae have scored successful campus appearances during the fall. Lillian Nitcher, at Lindenwood for the fall Alumnae Council meeting, spoke in the Fine Arts Parlor in late October.

The next day, the following, in part, appeared on the student opinion board:

"For those of you who were not at the Fine Arts Parlor last night, you missed something. You missed a chance to see idealism in action. You missed the experience of hearing a person who is dedicated and courageous, a person willing to face the problems of the world head-on. You missed a great woman. . . .

"It is very seldom that one is lucky enough to cross paths with a wholly dynamic personality that affects one like an electric current. It happened last night.

"I am proud that I attend Lindenwood College, if our college can produce a Lillian Nitcher. I am proud because I am a woman, and perhaps most proud that I met a truly great lady."

Later, at a Nov. 20 recital, two alumnae presented a thrilling program. Rosemary Dysart Baue, mezzo soprano, and Virginia Ratcliff Trent, pianist, performed.

The program, a beautiful one which blended classic, romantic, and contemporary works, included compositions of Mozart, Schumann, Meyerbeer, Bizet, Cilea, Poulenc, and Paul Bowles. Of especial interest was the great cycle of songs, "Frauenliebe and Leben," by Schumann.

And, again, alumnae performances of exciting calibre.

Membership in the College Entrance Examination Board was granted Lindenwood College at the board's annual meeting in Chicago Oct. 1.

Election to the board was the last business conducted at the meeting, making Lindenwood's voting privilege as a member effective at future meetings. The college, however, will be included in all publication listings and participate in all the services and facilities of the board.

Scholastic Aptitude Tests, administered throughout the United States and foreign countries six times each year, as well as achievement tests, are part of the board's program. Lindenwood College now requires the SAT of all entering freshmen. Achievement tests are required only of applicants for competitive examination scholarships.

Stately Sibley Hall, its walks cleared of snow, is a favorite Lindenwood landmark.

Cobbs Hall seen from Niccolls Hall.

No bother—in fact, fun for many; this was the first snow ever seen by some of the college's students from 35 states and eight foreign countries.

The entrance to years of learning and memories.

Looking east is the view on Butler Way walk. Fine Arts Building is on left.

Down the hill one sees the college's chapel.

ENCORE CLUB

Thirty-nine freshmen at Lindenwood are eligible for membership in the Encore Club, Alumnae Secretary Bea Clark has announced.

The students, home towns, and the relative through whom membership is established are as follows:

Helen M. Baines, St. Louis, cousin; Lynne I. Benson, Omaha, Neb., aunt; Nancy Brace, Anderson, Mo., mother; Jane E. Calvert, Michigan City, Ind., mother and sister; Margaret Campbell, St. John, Kan., aunt and cousin; Hardee M. Clark, Lexington, Ky., sister; Ann Combs, Waterloo, Ia., aunt and sister; and Amelia S. Crispell, Joplin, Mo., sister.

Also, Lee DeLott, Lexington, Ky., aunt; Dee Dowell, Walnut Ridge, Ark., two cousins; Deborah Dunlap, Hinsdale, Ill., aunt; Jean Ann Evans, Bartlesville, Okla., cousin; Carol Ann Faeth, St. Charles, Mo., grandfather, mother, aunt, sister; Michele Fitzpatrick, Amarillo, Tex., mother; Cheryl J. Folbrecht, Nixon, N.J., cousin; and Susan Freeman, Evanston, Ill., mother and aunt.

Also, Paula Gosling, St. Louis, cousin; Susan Hartmann, Affton, Mo., sister; Bari Holden, Ft. Worth, Tex., cousin; Karen Hutchinson, Highland Park, Ill., mother; Susan Jacobsen, Clinton, Ia., cousin; Sally S. Kettelkamp, Pleasant Plains, Ill., mother; Rebecca D. Lake, Jefferson City, Mo., cousin; and Toni Laub, Las Vegas, Nev., mother and aunt.

Also, Catherine Linhart, St. Louis, two sisters; Sharon C. Loftis, Frederic, Okla., cousin; Karen K. Mingus, Lexington, Mo., aunt; Margaret Ann Moon, Forest Park, Ia., mother; Margo Musgrove, Sterling, Ill., two sisters; Jean J. Pool, Mexico, D.F., step sister; Carole Lee Seitz, St. Charles, Mo., sister and aunt; and Victoria Take, Kirkwood, mother.

Also, Lyn Thomas, San Antonio, Tex., mother; Pamela Townsend, Dallas, Tex., mother; Mary Louise Tyne, Sterling, Ill., cousin; Gretchen L. Vesely, Crete, Neb., sister; Candace E. Whitlock, Hutchinson, Kan., cousin; Judith Fox Wood, Hinsdale, Ill., sister; and Roxanna Young, Michigan City, Ind., mother and aunt.

Brunch served and a few of Kansas City's hostesses paused for a moment, in the usual order: Mrs. A. M. Neilson, Mrs. R. Lloyd Ketcham, Mrs. James A. Reed, Mrs. K. K. Barton, Lindenwood national association president, and Mrs. Max A. Giffey.

ALUMNAE . . . ON THE GO

SWEDEN

Gunilla Fredriksson

A meeting of students, former and present, was held in Sweden last August. The get-together was at the home of Gunilla Fredriksson.

Present were: Marit Salvesen Devold, Norwegian student, 1961-62; Ingrid Dahlberg and Inger Ullman, Swedish students 1962-63; and the three Swedish students at Lindenwood this year, Ulla Backe, Birgitta Ingemansson, and Eva Lundberg.

A special guest was Marcia Minsky, '63, Tulsa, Okla., who was spending a few weeks at Gunilla's home.

DETROIT

Pat Janak Handley

Lindenwood alumnae in the Detroit area got together for the first time Nov. 14 for a luncheon at the Detroit Yacht Club.

Those attending were: Mrs. Joseph Jennings, (Audrey McNulty '33), Mrs. John Richardson (Edna Mary Jacobson '45), Mrs. H. R. Halliburton (Mary McClain '44), Mrs. D. D. Struthers (Peg Fagg '29), Mrs. Robert Goeke (Mid Reaves '49), Mrs. Hugh Pribor (Judy Smith '57), Mrs. Sidney Gilliatt (Aline Day '40), Mrs. Robert Ryding (Phyllis Gambill '43), Mrs. Grace Hay (Grace Gordon '40), and Mrs. Jerry Handley (Pat Janak '55).

Pat Handley was made temporary chairman of the group. February was the date chosen for the next meeting which will be held at the home of Phyllis Gambill Ryding.

Originally the Detroit group had hoped to include alumnae in the Ann Arbor area. Distance, however, made their inclusion impossible. Several who work, while interested, could not attend. A later evening meeting is planned so that these alumnae can take part.

Interest indicated at the meeting and enthusiasm being generated by telephone calls give indications that the Detroit area will produce an active alum organization.

DES MOINES

Harriet Liddle

Fifteen Lindenwood alumnae in the Des Moines area were present for a December coffee held at the home of Harriet L. Liddle, 3663 Grand Ave., Apt. 405.

Cheryl Scanland, a student at Lindenwood from Des Moines, was present with news from the campus.

Plans are being made to hold a meeting for prospective students with alumnae, probably during the spring vacation of the college.

DALLAS

Katherine Fryfogle Sherrow

Three meetings, culminating with a visit for the third by President and Mrs. F. L. McCluer, have been held to organize an active alumnae chapter in Dallas.

The first session, a meeting in the home of Mary Rankin, resulted in the formation of a survey group to determine what could be done about organizing a club in the Dallas area. Twelve attended this session.

In early November the survey group met again at Mary's home with Glenn G. Thomas, director of admissions and public relations, who discussed current activities on campus. He told the alumnae how their organization could help the college seek those high school students best qualified in the Dallas area.

A Christmas tea was held Saturday, December 14, with President and Mrs. McCluer present. Dr. McCluer spoke to the group, and new campus pictures were shown. Punch and Christmas cookies were served.

MINNESOTA

Phyllis Williams McKay

An outdoor arts and crafts bazaar held Sept. 8 in the spacious yard of Ruth Ann Ball Haymes was the big event of the fall for alumnae in Minnesota. Much of the credit for a successful day must go to Gwen Macy Sorlien for outstanding publicity.

Money made at the bazaar has been used toward the club's pledge to furnish a room for McCluer Hall. Some of the alumnae who worked hard either as committee chairmen and workers are: Sharlene Agerter, Jane Kobel Biltonen, Carolyn Kinney Cleath, Phyllis Williams McKay, Yvonne Sichler Molinaar, Mary Kirchherr Shoquist, Lorraine Fodness Wulf, and Barbara Cushman Blue.

Donations of articles to sell or cash were given to the club by: Nancy Kern Peteler, Jeanne Dresden Rainey, Frances Bauer Floerke, Hedy Sue Woog, and Alice Rice Davis Thornburg.

MIAMI

Barbara Wexner Levy

Lillian Nitcher

Miami alumnae held their November meeting with four present: Marguerite Kahl Foster, Kathryn Porter Allen, Helyn Mavrick Thrapsimus (Mrs. James '52), and Lillian Nitcher.

Helyn, a new member, lives at 710 S.W. 67th Ave., Pembroke Pines, Hollywood, Fla., and we were certainly happy to welcome her to our meeting.

Lunch, good conversation, and things-to-come was the gist of the Jan. 17 gathering of Miami alumnae at the home of Barbara Wexner Levy (Mrs. Herbert), Miami Beach.

More typical or more enthused 'ole Lindenwood-ers could hardly be found: Kathryn Porter Allen, our most reliable secretary; Lillian Nitcher, who describes herself as "a beat-up old social worker," but is, in fact, an A-1 worker, social and otherwise, beat for Lindenwood.

Marguerite Kahl Foster, a delight and charming Lindenwood asset; another Marguerite, a treasure; and our treasurer, Marguerite Denise Broking.

A most welcomed newcomer, Carolyn Hughes Davenport, whose husband, Dr. O. W. Davenport, is an outstanding ob-gyn here. The Davenports have one son, Willia, six years old. Carolyn, herself a talented musician and composer, finds time to teach piano.

And Sylvia Knothe George (Mrs. R. W.) has intentionally been saved for last. Reason: Sylvia has graciously invited all alumnae in this area to a family affair and outing at her home, 5345 S.W. 92nd St., Sunday, Mar. 22. Weiner roast, swimming, fishing, pitching horseshoes, and, of course, Lindenwood talk.

Invitations will go out, but should we miss someone, please contact one of us for we're looking forward to a big LC pow-wow.

Then, looking ahead to May—a boat party, sort of "Down the Bay for Lindenwood," from Sunset No. 3, Barbara's address. Is this any way to run an alumnae club? "Us" Miamians say: You bet it is!

ALUMNAE . . . ON THE GO

OKLAHOMA CITY

Jean Baker Morrissey

The Lindenwood College Club of Oklahoma City held its registration tea Sunday, Sept. 6, in the home of Jo Cleta Simpson Fezler. Assisting were Marilyn Nicholas Brainard, Earleen Simon Mills, Barbara Murray Keating, Janee Falter Shelley, Martha Crable Jordan, and Jean Baker Morrissey.

The club's constitution was adopted and plans were made for the year.

KANSAS CITY

Betty Hughes Bridges

Mrs. Arthur Stockstrom, member of Lindenwood's Board of Trustees, spoke at the November 21 meeting of the Kansas City Lindenwood College Club. Everyone enjoyed hearing Mrs. Stockstrom, a vital and interesting person.

Our scholarship committee gave a coffee for prospective students Saturday, November 30, at the home of Frances Metzger Weeks. A number of present Lindenwood students were in attendance to answer questions and give first-hand information to prospective students. The party was fun and well worth all the work. The committee had designed and executed a special table cloth which was used at the coffee and will be used for other occasions.

We have been fortunate in our club to have women who take jobs willingly and who work with enthusiasm.

A tradition held in high esteem by members of the Kansas City Chapter of the Lindenwood Alumnae Club is the annual Christmas Party. This year the brunch and program was held Dec. 21 at the home of Mrs. Max A. Giffey, mother of Sara Davis Neilson. More than 66 members attended bringing daughters, mothers, and friends with them as guests.

Hostesses of the affair were: Mrs. Neilson, Margaret Hoover Ketcham, Hester James Price, Peggy Davidson Thompson, and Martha Latshaw Humphreys.

Special entertainment was furnished by Mrs. Louis Wood, ballad singer who is affiliated with the Kansas City, Mo., school district.

In the exchange of Christmas gifts to raise funds for the Kansas City Scholarship Fund, chances were sold on gifts brought by those attending. Many a smile of appreciation was on the faces of the winners as they carried off gifts of handmade treasures.

Memories of a gala affair have helped build a bonfire of enthusiasm in our members for the year to come.

ST. LOUIS

Nancy Mueller Pecha

St. Louis area alumnae held the first meeting of the year, a coffee, at the home of Annette Crowder Wilson, 2 S. McKnight Rd. Dr. C. Eugene Conover discussed his book, "Moral Education in Family, School and Church."

A special meeting, a theater party for the scholarship fund staged at the Artists' Guild and followed by a supper party, was scheduled for November. The production was "Come Back Little Sheba."

A tea for prospective students in the St. Louis area was held at the College Club of St. Louis, late in November. President F. L. McCluer spoke to those present. Glenn G. Thomas, director of admissions and public relations, answered questions of prospectives and their mothers.

The January meeting was a tea at Eunice Holman White's home in Ladue. Mrs. Laura Love, who was chairman of the Kirkwood antique show last September was introduced. Planned for the coming year is an unusual musical interlude and silver tea Mar. 16. The final meeting, May 18, will include installation of new officers by Dr. McCluer.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Marian Titus Ellis

Twenty-seven Lindenwood alumnae and three guests were present for our October meeting held in Thelma Harpe Ogden's new penthouse apartment. Hostesses were Thelma and her mother, Mrs. Harpe, Geraldine Hamblin Gobreuegge, and Mildred Burke Simpson.

Arametha McFadden Novinger was present for the first time since the first meeting last year; Marion Bowers Beeler was also with us again. New members attending were Gunilla Fredriksson, Juli Conger, Ann England Clay, and Peg Riedel Hull.

A program including a movie "Horse Talk," was presented by a representative of the Hollywood Turf Club.

The November meeting was held at Fon's in China Town in Los Angeles with 19 present. Arrangements for the delightful luncheon were made by our first vice-president, Geraldine Hamblin Gobreuegge. Phyllis Torgerson Smith provided duplicated copies of the list of Southern California Lindenwood alums.

Janey Rasdal Kuska gave a brief report on her recent trip to Lindenwood for the Alumnae Council meeting. Our treasurer reported a balance on hand of $140.

The December 14 meeting was held at the home of Aliene Cherry Reed in Arcadia with her mother, Mrs. Cherry, Jean Starr Winberg, and her mother, Mrs. Starr, assisting.

ST. CHARLES

Helen Culbertson Beste

The first meeting of the year for the St. Charles Lindenwood College Club was held Monday, Oct. 7, in the chapel lounge. A short business meeting followed a social hour and dessert.

A "Hat Party" had been planned by the social chairman. Almost everyone found at least one hat to her liking.

New members of the Lindenwood faculty were guests of the St. Charles Club at a covered dish dinner held in fellowship hall Nov. 4.

Fred Baue, president of the St. Charles Historical Society, spoke to the group about the history of St. Charles, projects of the historical society, and future plans for the restoration of the first capitol of Missouri. Mona Hand Plackmeyer was in charge of the evening's program.

Hostesses for the dinner were Lois Mayer Boschert, Betty Littrell Porter, Mrs. Louise Ritter and Marv Jane Miller Schultz.

St. Charles Lindenwood Club met Dec. 2 in the chapel lounge. The annual Christmas auction, benefiting the scholarship committee, was held with Robert Gatzweiler acting as auctioneer. A profit of $121.65 was realized from the sale.

Refreshments were served from a table laid with a white net Christmas cloth and centerpiece of green wreath and candles. Helen Culbertson Beste is shown pouring, with others left to right: Pat Prinster Nolle, Barbara Brockgreitens, Sally Siemssen Schaefer, and Dolores Lienau Pundmann.

Robert Gatzweiler, the auctioneer, conducts a sale in the second photograph, with Patricia Prinster Nolle serving as cashier.

Priscilla Calder Selden (Mrs. Edward E.) has moved and now lives at 3002 E. Cactus Rd., Apt. 6, Phoenix 85032. The Seldens moved early in October.

Helen Jones Nicely (Mrs. J. J.) represented Lindenwood at the inauguration of the president of Philander Smith College Oct. 8-9, 1963. Upon her arrival home, she writes, "This has been a very memorable week to me, for on Sunday morning I was selected "Woman of the Year" by our Hannibal Business and Professional Women's Club. . . . On my citation it gives my early life, telling of my schooling, including my two years at Lindenwood." Her address is 2500 Hill St., Hannibal, Mo.

'27 Sympathy is extended to Mrs. William Dalgleish (Adele Marie Herman) on the loss of her mother last fall. Mrs. Dalgleish lives at 8916 Ensley, Leawood, Kans.

'28 Mabel Blair Gans, who formerly lived in Chicago, is currently in East Pakistan. Her address is: Mrs. George M. Gans, c/o Leeds Hill-DeLeuw, Box 316, Ramna, Dacca, East Pakistan.

Margaret A. Roberts has accepted a position as medical social consultant in charge of the Alaska Native Health Office in Fairbanks. She had previously completed 11 years as chief of social work service, Veterans Administration Hospital, Lebanon, Pa.

Working in a part of the Public Health Service under the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, consultants authorize medical care for natives in the area with local physicians and the hospital. Margaret's particular responsibility will necessitate her traveling over most of the upper half of Alaska to understand the social factors which have bearing on the health problems of the natives.

"If there are any Lindenwood girls in this area, I'd love to hear from them. Perhaps they have a Top of the World LC Club. I live at the Northward Building but get my mail at Box 925 Fairbanks, Alaska 99701," she writes.

'29 Mrs. George McKee (Eugenia Bair) and her family have our sympathy for the loss of Mrs. McKee's mother. Mrs. McKee lives at 118 W. 68th, Kansas City, Mo.

'33 Anna Jane Harrison, 14 Ashfield Ln., South Hadley, Mass., is chairman of the department of chemistry at Mount Holyoke College.

'40 "I think the Lindenwood College BULLETIN coming to our house all of these years has contributed to my daughter Margaret's desire to enter Lindenwood next year," writes Kathryn Craig Crouse (Mrs. Robert E.). The Crouse family now lives at 11 Beach Plum Dr., Centerport, N.Y. 11721.

'41 Kathryn Trescott Ricks (Mrs. O'Garlan) writes news of several of her classmates: "Just a line to tell you of a recent pleasant experience I had in seeing an old Lindenwood friend, Bonner Jane Lindsey Allred (Mrs. Ross) Route 2, Tahlequah, Okla. While enroute to Dallas, Tex., we noticed that Tahlequah, Okla., was only about 25 miles from Muskogee where we were spending the night. So we phoned the Allreds and then drove to Tahlequah to visit them for a few hours. Bon and I hadn't seen each other for 11 years! It was so nice to see her husband and thirteen-year old daughter, Bobbi, again. Though we have kept up with each other through Christmas cards and occasional letters, we really enjoyed getting caught up on the past 11 years, plus recalling LC memories. Eleven years ago we had spent the day together at the home of another LC friend, Nelle Motley Buckner (Mrs. Jack) of Fulton, Mo.

"Bon is teaching high school English in Tahlequah and her husband is a juvenile welfare worker."

Laurabeall Parkinson Tombaugh, 313 Iroquois Dr., Evansville, Ind., represented Lindenwood at the dedication of the Olney Community College, Olney, Ill., Oct. 6. Her daughter, Jennie, is in her second year at Lindenwood.

CLASS NOTES

Working as a resident assistant while earning her M.S. at Indiana University, Bloomington, Ind., is Ellen Gerken. Ellen's school address is Read Center—Landes 528, Indiana University, Bloomington, Ind.

Kathy Tuepker Finks (Mrs. Harry) and her husband tell about their work in the Peace Corps in a long letter. They will be in the Philippines until some time in the spring, returning to the United States in either March or May.

Both Kathy and Harry are teaching, but most of their news is about the people in general rather than the students. "Honesty and concern for the common man is not felt like we ourselves feel it. There are so many things that are upsetting for us to see. Hunger is bad, but when you see others abusing their fellow countrymen on such a local level when they really need just to live, it isn't easy to understand. The relatively rich have a great deal of control. It is those with money already who can buy and black market the government corn. This is not uncommon."

Mrs. Eric A. Eberhardt (Linda Nash) writes: "My marriage took place Oct. 19 at Eliot Unitarian Chapel in Kirkwood, Mo. My husband is presently head of the accordion department at Webster College. I am still employed as a private music instructor at Nash Music Corp."

Nancy Joan Gillard and James William Butcher were married Dec. 28 at the College Avenue Presbyterian Church, Alton, Ill. Nan is teaching English.
