

6-2020

Chicken Painting Hung on the Wall of My First Grade Class

Maya Salameh

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.lindenwood.edu/lindenwood-review>

Part of the Fiction Commons, Nonfiction Commons, and the Poetry Commons

Recommended Citation

Salameh, Maya (2020) "Chicken Painting Hung on the Wall of My First Grade Class," The Lindenwood Review. Vol. 1 : Iss. 10 , Article 24.

Available at: <https://digitalcommons.lindenwood.edu/lindenwood-review/vol1/iss10/24>

This Prose Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at Digital Commons@Lindenwood University. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Lindenwood Review by an authorized editor of Digital Commons@Lindenwood University. For more information, please contact phuffman@lindenwood.edu.

Chicken Painting Hung on the Wall of My First Grade Class

I grew up among absences. empty spaces where people should have been. I only ever see my relatives on Facebook but in the heartbreaking way, as in they comment that I am beautiful in a language I will never learn properly. I take this to mean I will never be able to spell beautiful in the right language. I have lost so much & all of it sits right between my brows. women see it in my eyes. the absence. I try to extrapolate the empty. I will never be this old again. I have back pains now & diagnoses decorated in chronic mink. how to live a body that is already breaking. the doctor prescribes me omeprazole & I take this to mean all the old gods are vying for residence of my guts. I have a sinus issue. (my grandmother is taking a nap.) the pain is always there. I just sing it differently. sometimes I touch things. a jar of glitter. a lung of bread. I sourdough sashay. sometimes I dislocate my elbows to calm my nerves. today I found out I grind my canines in my sleep. even unconscious I file away at my teeth. sometimes I run out of electricity & there's just me & my mislabeled elbows. sometimes when it is really bad I go somewhere quiet & chlorophyll rich. it doesn't help much but often at night there is a moon. I think a lot about how my mother had a canary who died in the neighbor's cat's mouth. the day I ululated him out his cage I started seeing shadows in mirrors. I see the dead. I see the dead & they are bored.