Officials keep watch over swine flu

By Amanda Ayers
Staff Reporter

One case of swine flu has been verified at Lindenwood since the start of the fall semester.

"The student reported it to us after he went to his doctor and was confirmed to have swine flu," said Dr. Jann Weitzel, provost and vice president of academic affairs.

"Other people are sick on campus, but there are no other confirmations."

The university has taken precautions, such as putting up hand sanitizer around campus and telling students daily to be aware of washing hands on a regular basis.

Ryan Guffey, assistant vice president of student development, said the university has an emergency plan in case of an outbreak.

"Local students will be sent home, and there is quarantine housing for out-of-state and international students," Guffey said.

The swine flu, or H1N1, has caused at least 300 deaths in the U.S., according to the Centers for Disease Control. Two of those deaths have occurred in Missouri, with the most recent being a 24-year-old woman from Independence.

The CDC reports an average of 36,000 U.S. deaths from the seasonal flu each year.

Over the past six months, 98 percent of people who suffered from flu-like symptoms or have been diagnosed with Influenza A have contracted the H1N1 strain, according to the St. Charles County Health Department.

"The CDC estimates about one million people in the U.S. have contracted the H1N1 virus since late April, early May," said Cameron Satterfield, public information officer for the health department.

Like the seasonal flu, symptoms of H1N1 include high fever, head and body aches, fatigue, sneezing and coughing. The county health department has reported only a couple dozen cases of H1N1 since August. "[Outbreaks have] not been as bad as we first feared," Satterfield said.

A vaccine for H1N1 is expected to be released in mid-October. "As soon as the vaccine is available, we will offer it here," said Dr. John Oldani, vice president of student development.

Faculty work day cancels classes

By Natalie Lacaria
Contributing Writer

Lindenwood has decided to give students a day off today for a faculty work day.

"While this is an unusual occurrence, the university needs time to complete the transition to the CAMS system before November registration," Provost Jann Weitzel said.

Lindenwood is transitioning to the CAMS system to give students more information about what is required for graduation. Housing, financial aid, transcripts, grades and schedules are accessible on this system.

The system is already underway, but the faculty still need to look at each student's transcripts to figure out equivalency with transferring classes.

Each student goes through a degree audit before they graduate to see if the student has all the classes needed. Unfortunately, some find out that they need another class weeks before graduation.

"There will be no more surprises at graduation time for students," said Weitzel.

Students are advised to use the day for study. Professors will be on campus from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Evening classes will be held, beginning at 4:30.

Students will be able to earn Work and Learn hours throughout the day.

State targets young drivers

By Samantha Werbiski
Opinion Editor

Freshman Kaylee Nuske logged into her Facebook account last month and discovered, to her surprise, a new state law that affects her and thousands of other students.

The law took effect Aug. 28 and bans texting-while-driving for motorists 21 and younger. "If it's gonna go for anyone, it should go for everyone," Nuske said.

Nuske isn't the only one concerned over the laws — part of an omnibus crime bill signed by Gov. Jay Nixon last spring — affecting drivers 21 and younger.

The second law decrees that those individuals have given implied consent to testing for the presence of alcohol if they purchase, possess or are under the influence of alcohol. Those who refuse testing risk losing their driving privileges for a year.

Senior Lori Damschroeder, an international marketing major, believes "everyone drives recklessly under the influence of alcohol, so [we] should be treated the same."

Texting-while-driving will cost $200 and two points against a driver's license. Each traffic ticket is equivalent to a certain number of points, which are deducted from a person's driver's license and can result in a rise in the cost of auto insurance.

Eighteen states have passed laws to deter drivers from texting. Indiana and Maine have banned texting for drivers under 18, while Texas has banned only bus drivers from texting while transporting passengers 17 or younger.

Research conducted by the Virginia Tech Transportation Institute found that texting-while-driving is 23 times more dangerous than driving without distractions, according to www.nationalpost.com. Texting while driving is more dangerous than drunken driving, the research found.

Freshman Catherine Stygar said, "My mom texts and drives; that's still dangerous. Just because she's my mom doesn't make it any safer."

In response, St. Charles Councilman Bob Kneemiller presented an ordinance last month to include all drivers, but state law overrides Kneemiller's proposal. "[Texting-while-driving] is not a safe practice ... and the way the state law is written makes it Ok for drivers over 21 to do it," Kneemiller said.

The bill's sponsor, Sen. Ryan McKenna, D-Crystal City District 22, proposed that the law apply to all drivers. During the legislative process, the bill was altered to include the age restriction. He plans to re-address the law during the 2010 state legislative session.

Alan Crook, a mass communication major, deems the law unfair. "Age doesn't have anything to do with it," Crook said. "It's dumb they've put an age limit on it."

Marriage proposal steals halftime show at football opener

By Natasha Sakovich
Asst. Editor-in-Chief

During halftime of the Lindenwood home football game on Saturday, Sept. 12, spectators received a unique performance.

As sophomore Tony Blecher knelt in front of sophomore Christie Schmid in center field, the Lindenwood football crowd gaped and whistled collectively as they witnessed his marriage proposal.

As the band, cheerleaders and dance team finished their halftime routine, most of them unusually stayed behind on the field. The announcer boomed "Christie Schmid, please report to the field." Schmid made her way to the 40-yard line, and Blecher appeared in the center of the band with the cheer-leading team sitting two feet away on the turf.

Holding a checkmark in her hand — given to Schmid by a cheerleader while walking over to Blecher — Schmid approached the mascot, holding a sign asking "Will you marry him?" The sign featured two boxes, one under the word yes and one under the word no. Schmid placed the check marked yes.

As Blecher knelt and tearfully proclaimed his love and proposal, he slipped the ring on Schmid's finger. The crowd roared with applause, whistles and shouts as the newly engaged couple embraced.

Countless people flooded towards the couple, and many flashes were seen from friends taking pictures.

The fans were not shy about showing their excitement, as many gave their congratulations to the couple afterwards.

"I think my face hurt from smiling so much," Schmid said.

The home opener for the Lindenwood football team will not only be remembered by fans for its 66-23 win vs. Central Methodist University, but also for the unique and show-stopping halftime proposal.

New LU Commons makes headway

By Natasha Sakovich
Asst. Editor-in-Chief

Construction of LU Commons continues making headway toward completion of the new student center.

Adjacent to the Hyland Performance Arena, the projected $20 million dollar project features three floors of student-centered accommodations. The building is scheduled to be in use by fall 2011.

Athletes, as well as those looking for additional recreational facilities, will have access to four new gymnasium courts located on the first floor of the new facility.

The four courts will be housed together in one large open air gym.

These courts can be used not only for sports activities but also for events led by Student Activities, such as dances or other social events.

"At first, just one court was going to be a multipurpose use court, but now all four will feature a multipurpose playing court," Lindenwood Vice President Julie Mueller said.

In addition to the four multipurpose courts, there will also be a general use fitness center on the first floor. It will be designed with students in mind who are not necessarily involved in sports but want to participate in various physical activities.

Another feature of the LU Commons will be a new cafeteria located on the second floor, similar to the Spellmann Center's. Mueller said this eatery will also feature a "food court style section for students to choose from for their meals."

A new U.S. post office and a student laundry facility will also be located on the second floor. The third floor of the building will feature Lindenwood Student Government Association (LSGA) offices, an international student room, a game room and a suspended track. The new mail and laundry facilities, as well as the other additions, will help accommodate the growing number of students on campus.

The fall semester started with about 3,800 residents, at least 100 more than the previous year.

Such facilities will help alleviate long lines and congestion.

"Lindenwood has been extremely blessed to see student population growth exceeding expected numbers this year, even during the economic downturns," Mueller said.

The Spellmann Center cafeteria and Connection will stay open after completion of the new student center.

Mueller said the new LU Commons, "is geared toward the students," and will help accommodate future population growth.

School goes online

New Web site launched for business

By Sam Werbiski
Opinion Editor

The School of Business and Entrepreneurship began the school year with a new Web site. The Web site, www.lindenwood.edu/business, provides an abundance of information for both current and prospective students.

The vast information on the site helps students choose degree programs and includes a course listing, accreditation and new developments.

The content and mapping of the site is attributed to Judy Eberhart, assistant professor of marketing in the School of Business and Entrepreneurship.

The Web site is "marketing for the School of Business," Eberhart said.

The home page is currently dedicated to relevant news and important events as well as the renovation of Harmon Hall.

Harmon Hall will be the new location for the School of Business and Entrepreneurship beginning next year.

Several other features supply essential information on the department and faculty.

Prospective students can fill out an inquiry form to request any additional information.

"The Web site is updated daily," Eberhart said. "It changes constantly."

Jason Waack, Lindenwood's webmaster, designed and constructed the Web site.

The site is an addition to the new Web site design that Lindenwood updated spring of 2009.

It will now serve as the base for new developments and progress for the School of Business and Entrepreneurship.

LUTV goes worldwide, streams live online

By Alex Kerns
Staff Reporter

Since the second week of August, the LUTV station has been streaming select shows live on the Internet.

Professors Ben Scholle and Peter Carlos have been working together to make this possible.

They spent most of the summer trying to get the live streaming aspect to work.

A couple of individual shows, such as football games and this past May's graduation, have been shown live, but Carlos said they wanted to stream the entire station live 24/7.

"Parents can watch their sons and daughters play sports anywhere in the world," Carlos said. "I think it's important that today's youth is able to get video streaming. They won't need cable to see our station."

Carlos and Scholle have been working with a company called Granicus (located in San Francisco) to make the online streaming possible.

Carlos said there is a little delay of about five to 10 seconds on the Web when it's streaming live. The signal has to travel to San Francisco and then back to Lindenwood.

Carlos said LUTV chose Granicus because many other cable companies, especially those in St. Peters, are using Granicus to stream live and have had success.

"Parents can watch their sons and daughters play sports anywhere in the world."

"It gets our name out there. It helps us with our popularity," graduate student Sarah Mares said. "I think it's important for students as well. It helps different communities and possible employers see our work."

Andy Reed, a transfer student from DePauw University in Indiana, said his last school did not stream online and only had an on campus channel. "I think it's great," he said. "It's a great opportunity so that anyone that wants to see us can."

In October, LUTV will be getting video on-demand so students and their families can go back and watch different shows or football games they may have missed.

To watch LUTV streaming live, go to Lindenwood's Web site and click the LUTV icon in the bottom right hand corner.

Then click on the "Watch LUTV Live Now" button on the top left side of the page.

Sudanese 'Lost Boy' gives speech

By Kenny Gerling
Staff Reporter

Lindenwood's annual speaker series began last week with former Sudanese refugee John Dau.

One of the former Lost Boys of Sudan in northeast Africa, Dau fled from the civil-war stricken nation in the mid-1980s.

His life has been the subject of the award winning documentary "God Grew Tired of Us," as well as an autobiography of the same name.

Dau spoke to a full house in the Anheuser-Busch Leadership Room in Spellmann Center on Sept. 15.

During the course of his hour-long talk, Dau explained how he, and at times as many as 27,000 other displaced children called the Lost Boys of Sudan, wandered through the barren African landscape in search of safety.

The Lost Boys were faced with a multitude of dangers, including disease, starvation, wild animals and government forces that frequently attacked the group.

"We lived on wild fruits and chewing grass," Dau said. "At night there was nothing to cover yourself. But we didn't give up."

After years on the run, Dau and the remaining Lost Boys eventually found relative safety at the Kakuma Refugee Camp in Kenya. There, Dau began his education at 17.

After nine years in Kenya, Dau was chosen to be relocated to the United States as part of a program to settle the Lost Boys.

Once in the United States, he worked two to three jobs while also attending college.

Dau now has a wife and family and frequently speaks about his experience as a Lost Boy. He has started three separate charities to help the Lost Boys and his native Sudan.

His current charity, the John Dau Sudan Foundation, has raised more than over $1 million to help build clinics and improve healthcare in southern Sudan, according to its Web site.

The packed crowd listened intently and reaction appeared to be positive.

"(Dau) was inspirational. If you put your mind to it, anything is possible," said Erin Whitson, an LU student.

Dau emphasized the importance of education and family, as well as overcoming adversity to make your life and the world a better place.

"Don't let your past hold you back," he said. "Never ever give up."

What do you think about the swine flu and its media coverage?

By Samantha Werbiski
Opinions Editor

“I used to work for a doctor over the summer and she said it’s nothing to worry about. Yeah, it sucks, but it’s just like the regular flu.”

—Becca Enos, Freshman

“Swine flu is not so bad. I got over it in a couple of hours, but I got a lot of Vitamin C.”

—John Murphy, Senior

“I think people need to get over it. Use common sense. Don’t sneeze on your hand and then hug somebody. Practice good hygiene.”

—Amanda McCannon and Jeromi Moody, Juniors

“I think it’s pretty stupid because it’s reached an exaggerated level. Being from Mexico, I can honestly say that it wasn’t as bad as the media made it seem, not even close.”

—Rodrigo Baeza, Freshman

“I try to go to the sanitizers as often as I can. If I get sick, I don’t have family members to take care of me.”

—Delgermaa Bayartsogt, Junior

“I think that the swine flu is just as big of a deal as the regular flu so they need to stop the hype and while they’re at it, stop the hype with Michael Jackson.”

—Ciara Henderson, Grad student

—Josh Larson, Senior

“People may over-react, but I agree that we should be aware and careful.”

LU needs security presence

Hello everyone. I am a Criminologist and a graduate student at Lindenwood University. I have nearly 15 years of background experience in the criminal justice system. I am a new advice columnist with The Legacy. I will offer advice on: campus and cyber safety, crime prevention, and self-help.

For the last couple of years, I have listened to many concerns about campus security and safety from both students and faculty. Many students do not know what to do in a potential emergency situation. So I am here to offer some reassurance by addressing some concerns. Unfortunately, even on a college campus with law enforcement present, there will be people who slip through the cracks.

I would like to take a moment to address Lindenwood’s security department. Oh wait, Lindenwood doesn’t actually have a security department. Instead, they have a maintenance department.

With the exception of an occasional police officer driving through campus, who has witnessed an actual school emergency wearing a uniform with the logo “Security” on it? More importantly, who do we call when we do need help?

I was curious myself, so I called the campus operator and asked for the security department. And which department did I actually get transferred to?

Well, here is a hint. If there is a faulty sprinkler, a broken door, or a broken light bulb that needs to be changed – then a valued member of the maintenance staff will probably service your request.

However, if you feel that you are being followed by a stranger; or you need an escort to your vehicle at night; or someone has broken into your vehicle; or maybe you live on campus and someone has broken into your room; the maintenance department is probably not the right phone number to dial.

I know what some people may be thinking. Maybe the operator made a mistake, even though I did call on three different days. So I decided to look up the phone number for the security department on the Lindenwood Web site. I browsed the “Contact Us” webpage found two numbers for security.

However, the number, 636-949-4922, which is to be called between 8 a.m. – 5 p.m., is the same number as the Maintenance department. The afterhours phone number, 636-262-4622, is answered by “Residential Services.”

Do not misunderstand me. I am not insinuating that Lindenwood’s main campus is unsafe. Rather, I’m saying that the university needs to increase the presence of campus security. With any luck, the university’s administration will take an interest in these concerns as well.

Should anyone have any questions, comments or concerns that they would like discussed in my column, then please feel free to contact me at joshuabseth@gmail.com.

Obama speech gives kids hope

There are those that would call Obama’s speech to school children a socialist attempt at indoctrination of our nation’s future. I would call them ridiculous right-wing conservatives who like to leap before they look.

The last time I checked, Barack Obama was elected president of the United States, not just president of high school graduates. Why is it a problem that he speaks to our school children? I’ve seen quotes in the media from parents saying they feel that Obama is simply using this speech to further his liberal agenda – and for political recruiting. You can’t be serious.

If preventing our children from hearing a message to motivate them to stay in school and to try their hardest is at the top of the agenda, then maybe it is the parents that should be censored and not the president.

In 2007-2008, nearly 23 percent of students in the St. Louis Public High School District dropped out of school. This was an 88 percent increase from the prior year and the largest spike in the dropout rate from the past five years. Kansas City’s Public School system reported approximately a 28 percent dropout rate in that same year. According to www.all4ed.org, nearly 20,500 students did not graduate from Missouri high schools in 2009.

Let’s tie that in with health care, since that seems to be the uproar of the moment. According to the same site, “Missouri would save more than $245.1 million in health care costs over the lifetimes of each class of dropouts had they earned their diplomas.”

In addition, “Missouri’s economy would see a combination of crime-related savings and additional revenue of about $147 million each year if the male high school graduation rate increased by just five percent.”

These numbers paint a bleak picture of our nation’s immediate future, at least locally. They show that whatever we as a government, we as parents, we as a community have been doing is not working. How about we try supporting the man we elected president in trying to motivate our nation’s youth to be better, rather than attacking a motivational speech

One of the most powerful statements President Obama made was, “But at the end of the day, the circumstances of your life – what you look like, where you come from, how much money you have, what you’ve got going on at home – that’s no excuse for...dropping out of school. That’s no excuse for not trying.”

Not being a liberal is no excuse for stifling a message of hope. If those words are part of a socialist agenda, we should all help paint the White House red.

Reggie Noble

Hype over swine flu unnecessary

It’s the biggest celebrity in America and the topic of every morning show and every late-night joke. No, it’s not yellow fever; yellow journalism, maybe. That’s right, it’s swine flu.

As more and more cases of the H1N1 virus are reported, the media is turning its stories into a horror film trailer, sensationalizing the death and destruction about to be set upon us. But the reality is that this strain isn’t much different from the regular seasonal flu that kills an estimated 36,000 people annually in the U.S., according to the Centers for Disease Control (CDC). In fact, the CDC states that the death rate for swine flu is relatively low compared with seasonal flu and, of the estimated one million cases of swine flu in the U.S., only 500 or so have resulted in death. Furthermore, those who are dying from the H1N1 virus are the same that usually die from the seasonal flu: the very young, the very elderly and the sickly.

So why then has the nation, as a whole, been obessed with swine flu and its effects? Well, I think there are two reasons. One, since the majority of people have never had this virus before, it takes a while for the body to fight it and one can get quite sick. It’s kind of like having the chicken pox; the first time you get it, you get it bad.

The second reason is that with this type of media coverage, everyone becomes a hypochondriac. Those who are sick frequently fret over getting sick again, and those who are never sick are suddenly inundated with tons of stories about a virus that is going to suddenly steal their perfect health away like a veiled thief during a power outage.

So do what Frankie says and relax. If you get sick, take the proper precautions you normally do when you get sick. Be sure to get plenty of fluids and rest. It’s as simple as that. And if you don’t get sick, don’t worry. I’m sure next year the platypus flu will infiltrate the northern border from Canada, and you’ll have a chance to partake in that “pandemic.”

Westport comedy club caters to students

By Kaitlin Gleb
Staff Writer

If laughter is the best medicine, then The Funny Bone Comedy Club is your cure.

And if you're feeling down from the stress of approaching mid-terms, twenty-five page long papers and annoying professors, the comedians here will have you back up on your feet in no time.

Located in the heart of Westport Plaza in Maryland Heights, The Funny Bone is an ideal spot to bring friends or a date to relax and be entertained.

Comedians keep the crowd laughing for two hours of fun.

The comedic talent that performs at The Funny Bone has been featured on HBO specials, Showtime, and has even appeared in hit movies.

They'll keep you laughing with their obnoxious, honest and original humor.

Be wary of sitting in the front rows, the comedian may start talking to you or even pick on you, but it's all in good fun.

If you're the shy type who doesn't want to participate in their silly antics, they'll make fun of you till you're having a good time.

The dark club lit by candlelight provides an intimate, flirty and laidback atmosphere, perfect for bringing a date.

With such reasonable prices, The Funny Bone is hard to pass up.

Wednesdays and Thursdays are college nights and students get in for only $1 with a school ID.

Would you like to try your hand at comedy? Tuesdays are open mic night where upcoming comedic hopefuls get a chance to crack up the audience.

The only requirements are to purchase at least two drinks (they don't have to be alcoholic, water or soda is also offered) and you must be 18 or older to enter.

Be sure to make reservations because seats fill up quickly and it can get crowded.

Upcoming shows feature Rahn Ramey (Sept 30 - Oct 5) and Auggie Smith (Oct 7 - 12).

Every 7:30 p.m. Saturday show is smoke-free. So if you're in need of a study break or a great place to bring your date, The Funny Bone will make sure you're laughing until it hurts.

"9" revisits other films to describe its apocalypse

By Diane Kenley
Staff Writer

The animated film "9," whose producers include dark mastermind Tim Burton, suitably debuted in theaters on Sept. 9, 2009.

The tale, a feature-length version of director Shane Acker's 2004 Academy Award-nominated short film, begins at the end of the human race, according to Focus Feature's Web site, filmfocus.com.

Apparently, humanity's lust for better technology led to the invention of machines that turned against them. Think a mash-up of "Star Wars," "I, Robot," and "Wall-E."

Literally, it was man vs. machine, and artificial intelligence won. If you're in the mood for an uplifting film, don't see this one.

Nevertheless, this theory of the apocalypse seems familiar. Hasn't this story been done before? Well, not with an animation style like this, Acker and Burton might argue.

Throughout the film, several similarities to other stories do jump out. The title, "9," refers to voodoo doll-looking creatures created by a scientist. Their eyes are made of lenses that resemble those of "E.T." or "Wall-E."

After a violent search, the nine discover they are to save all that's left of Earth (themselves) from the evil robots.

The sinister leader, The Great Machine, is a giant red eye complete with many metal arms, akin to Doc Ock of "Spiderman 2."

Elijah Wood provides the voice of the naive, yet determined main character, "9." Wood's character is on a dangerous quest to save Earth with eight companions, and a giant red eye represents the villain.

Seeing a pattern that resembles another movie?

However, some quality themes are reinforced within the film: humanity conquering technology, good old-fashioned teamwork and seeking redemption for one's greed.

Two sub-themes, looming perhaps under the surface, are religion and environmentalism. A religious symbol that cannot be missed is a cathedral, complete with large stained-glass windows and a bell-tower. This church, however, dramatically burns down.

"1," the ruler of this "sanctuary," as he calls it, has some key items: a curved staff, a cape, a tall hat and a throne. He clearly resembles a clergy member, yet he later dies due to his greed for power. Is this a subtle jab at religion?

The environmental aspects are certainly clear. Post-apocalypse, the Earth appears to be a mere shadowy, abandoned battlefield.

Oil wells pump continuously behind the evil machines' lair.

Giant towers produce black smoke, and no vegetation is present. Only harsh metal and electrical wires are seen.

Burton fans and lovers of modern animation may enjoy "9" though.

The dark tale is classic of Burton, and slight nods to characters from his films are present stylistically.

But what is most striking from a visual standpoint are the backgrounds: soft colors creeping behind the clouds at sunrise, the wind whipping torn whites flags and dust across a grey battlefield, glowing embers and ash from a huge burning church, falling like snowflakes.

Maybe this type of morbid animated story can be dubbed America's Anime.

Don't be fooled by the idea of animation. "9" contains violence, death, and a genuine sense of doom that may not sit well with children, or adults either.

Overall, "9" grades a "C."

Women's hockey looks for three-peat

By T.J. Gibbar
Staff Reporter

Winning their first national championship in 2006 was only the beginning of a great reputation. The women's ice hockey team has now won two consecutive national championships, and this year they will be attempting to get a third.

The Lady Lions have the core of their team returning and some new recruits to help fill the spots of the four players they graduated last season.

They start the season on the road at Robert Morris College on October 9 and 10. This just so happens to be a big rival for the women's ice hockey program, which couldn't be a better way to begin the season.

Not long after their first two away games will be another rivalry matchup against Michigan State University on October 17 and 18.

The team's top line will consist of all returning players from the past two championship winning seasons. Seniors Mandy

Dion and Krystal Martin will be battling it out for one more season for the Lady Lions and have helped a huge amount in the teams' success in the past. The third player of the top line is junior Lisa Moreau, who is a captain of team, along with Mandy Dion.

Not only does this team work hard on the ice, but they really focus on their grades as well. As a team they have an accumulative G.P.A. of 3.1, which is remarkable for any athletic program. Not to mention Coach Vince O'Mara is a two-time National Coach of the Year.

"We have arguably the best two goalies in the league," O'Mara said, referring to senior Rebecca Bernet and sophomore Alexa Bauer, who have both done a great job in front of the net.

"It is going to take every single person on this roster to get to where we need to be."

It will take a lot of hard work to fulfill the high expectations, but the Lady Lions have the talent and the drive to do just that.

"At first, people were questioning who Lindenwood was, and now there are many athletes looking to come here," O'Mara said.

Lions off to great start

By Alex Jahncke

This past weekend the Lions football team continued their winning ways. They are 3-0 this season and are now looking to face one of their toughest opponents this weekend in MidAmerica Nazarene University.

After the big first week win, the Lions hosted Central Methodist University for their home opener. Not only was this the season's first home game, but it was the first time they played a game on the new field. They started hot on the opening kickoff when Denodus O'Bryant returned the ball 73 yards for a touchdown. From there, the Lions kept the momentum going. O'Bryant scored two more times on big rushes, one for 59 yards and the other for 58 yards. Quarterback Philip Staback also played well, throwing for three touchdowns and rushing for two. The Lions set a new school record for offensive yards in a game with 640.

"It feels good to have this start, but we are just meeting our expectations. Our goal is to be undefeated. We just have to work on everything we can in practice," Staback said.

Offensive force leads Lady Lions to 3-2

By Micah Woodard
Editor-In-Chief

The Lady Lions came strong out of the gate, attaining a 3-2 record, led by the dominant play of sophomore forward Lindsay Shea.

Shea has accounted for 5 of the team's 7 goals, leading the team with 11 points.

"She's been incredible so far," said Head Coach Laurie Kaminski. "If she gets it in her head that she's going to the goal, there's a good chance she will score."

"[Shea] is too unselfish. She needs to be more selfish. When she uses her skill, she scores goals," said Assistant Coach Brian Reinhardt, adding that she could easily have twice as many goals.

Shea credited her hot start to aggressive play and perfect feeds from her teammates. She said she laughed when the coaches told her to take a selfish mentality, but admitted that it worked.

"But you definitely need a team to be behind you and support you too," she said.

Shea's intangibles are evident off the field as well – in the form of leadership.

"The kids see her work ethic and attitude. She'll do whatever it takes. She wants to win," Kaminski said. "The other kids pick up on that and feed on that. It's infectious."

Last season the Lady Lions finished second overall in the Heart of America Athletic Conference (HAAC) and fell just short of a postseason conference title, finishing second in the HAAC tournament.

"The [returning players] got a good taste of what it was like to be in the mix, to be up for a championship," Kaminski said. "They want revenge on those schools that beat them. They want to get to the national tournament."

Although Lindenwood has a lot of returning players, several new recruits/transfers have immediately made an impact.

Kaminski said that junior forward Kendall Kravec, though injured, has stepped up. Kravec scored the game-winning overtime goal in a 2-1 thriller over Trinity Christian College on Sept. 12.

"We're looking for her to impact this team as soon as she gets 100 percent. There's going to be a lot more in her future," Kaminski said. "She's getting stronger day by day and getting that confidence back up."

Sophomore midfielder Bridget Moriarty, a transfer student, has also played a lot of minutes this fall.

It helps that Moriarty and Shea have played together before.

"We work really well together ... we already know how each other play so it helps a lot," Shea said.

And perhaps the most intriguing position battle on the team is between two newcomers at the goal-keeping position. Goalies Jessica Morelli (freshman) and Erin Sage (a backup last season) are contending for the top spot on the Lady Lions' depth chart.

"You have to have a goalkeeper to be successful at this level, at any level," said Kaminski, adding that the team would choose a starter when conference play begins.

And that decision will be made soon. The Lady Lions take on MidAmerica Nazarene in their next game on Sept. 26 in a conference showdown in Olathe, Kansas.

Table tennis starts sophomore season

By Aisha Foster
Staff Reporter

The Lindenwood table tennis program is looking forward to its second year with excitement and high hopes.

The team seeks to build upon the success of its first year this season and beyond.

Head Coaches Randy and Kelly Kendle were very proud of what the team had accomplished in its debut season.

They said that the team performed very well in its first year of competition.

"We did better than expected as we went to the nationals for the first time and placed fifth in the country," said Mrs. Kendle.

Mr. Kendle said they hope to continue recruiting good players in order to build and maintain a stronger team.

One weakness the Kendles hope to improve is the numbers on the women's team.

"Currently there are two players on the women's team, so we want to work on building a larger team so that we can compete in national tournaments," Mr. Kendle said.

Their goals are to have the women's team complete at the national championship in Wisconsin, to get the co-ed team to the nationals, and to perform well throughout the season.

The team has a number of players on their roster including Andre Irigoyen, Munkhbold Bayarsaikhan, Michelle John, Frederico Cantarelli and.

Guihermi Dalcin, Brad Kendle, Nicholas Poku, Ryan Driskill and Vermin Becirbegovic make up the rest of the squad.

"I'm excited to go to Baltimore. It is a huge international tournament, and the team is looking forward to competing,"

—Brad Kendle
Senior

The team has good chemistry as all of the players get along, but table tennis is an individual sport.

The Kendles said that they needed to work on the whole team concept of cheering for each other after games.

In order to prepare for tournaments, the team practices three times a week for two hours doing drills.

They practice serves, multi-ball drills, hitting/blocking and match situations.

The Kendles said that the team has a great chance of winning the Midwest Division, which would qualify them for nationals.

They also say that many of the players will win individual events in tournaments.

Brad Kendle is looking forward to going to the 2009 North American Teams Championship in Baltimore, Maryland.

"I'm very excited to go to Baltimore," he said.

"It is a huge international tournament, and the team is looking forward to competing and performing well."

He also hopes to win nationals this year, stating that everyone has already started showing improvement.

The next tournament is the Bernard Hock Open Oct. 11.

This past weekend they escaped with a win on the road in exciting fashion against Missouri Valley College.

For the second week in a row, the Lions opened up the game with a kickoff return for a touchdown, this time from Roren Thomas. The Vikings answered back quickly with a touchdown of their own, as well as adding the two-point conversion to take the lead 8-7. It was a short lead though, as not a minute later O'Bryant ran for a 68 yard touchdown.

The game continued to go back and forth until the conclusion. With a little more than 10 minutes left in the fourth quarter the Vikings took the lead 31-30.

With 1:51 left on the clock the Lions took the field for the start of an exciting end. They quickly faced a fourth down with eight yards to go. Staback completed a 12 yard pass to gain a first down.

That started a quick drive that ended with Matt Bramow catching a touchdown pass from Staback for the lead with 19.2 seconds left, followed by another reception for the two-point conversion to make the score 38-31.

The scoring was not finished there. Missouri Valley botched a snap on their next possession and the Lions capitalized by recovering the ball in the end zone for yet another touchdown.

The game was still not over, though. The Vikings ended the game by returning the kickoff for a touchdown in the final seconds. The effort was too little too late, as the Lions won by a score of 45-37.

“That’s where you earn your respect. There was not too much pressure on me, although it may have seemed that way. I had faith in all of my teammates, so that made things a lot easier on me,” Staback said.

“The coaching staff is doing a great job getting us prepared every week.”

—Phillip Staback

Staback has been on his game all year.

In just three games, he has thrown for 697 yards and seven touchdowns, along with 84 rushing yards and two touchdowns. Considering he is replacing four year starter Ben Kisner, Staback has made the adjustments needed to start for the Lions.

As for O'Bryant, the numbers speak for themselves. On only 20 rushing attempts he has accumulated 351 yards and five touchdowns, four in which were longer than 50 yards, as well as the aforementioned 73 yard kick return.

O'Bryant is only three games into his post high school career and he has yet to have a slow game.

This week will be a much tougher task.

The Lions have not faced MidAmerica Nazarene since week one of last season, where they suffered their only regular season loss.

Still, they do not feel that will affect them

“This is a huge game for us. We just have to work hard this week,” Staback said.

“We can’t play to their level. The coaching staff is doing a great job of getting us prepared every week.”

Bowlers have impressive offseason

By Andrew Tessmer
Staff Reporter

The Lindenwood Lions bowling team looks to start the 2009-10 season strong after some impressive off-season showings.

Lions Juan Gomez and Laura Fonnegra represented Lindenwood bowling at the 2009 Pan American Bowling Confederation Youth Championships in Bogota, Colombia, July 3-12. Gomez and Fonnegra finished with gold and silver medals respectively. Freshman Daniel Spink also participated and earned the silver medal in doubles.

The Lions, coached by Randy Lightfoot, look to keep their winning tradition alive in the upcoming season. After try-outs for the team Saturday, Sept. 5, the men's team has a lot of depth, the team consists of 56 bowlers and of these, the top five bowlers were named to the A-Team for the first tournament of the season.

"The depth of this team is just so great we should dominate at most tournaments this season. We did well last season, but we are better this year," Lightfoot said.

The team has a lot of talent from previous seasons, but also a great deal of new talent. Steve Miller, out of Great Britain, is one of Lightfoot's favorites for the season.

"He's just a big, strong kid who can really hook the ball well," Lightfoot said.

The Lions will go into their first tournament of the season, the 38th Hammer Midwest Collegiate tournament in Milwaukee, Wis., with two teams ready to defend their championship title from last season.

Golfers place 2nd at tournament

By Todd Schloessman
Staff Reporter

Women's golf has begun, and the squad is off to yet another strong start this season after finishing second at the Maryville Fall Warm-Up.

"I am lucky enough to have returned all of my top golfers from last year. In addition to them, I have a couple of freshman that will make us even better for this upcoming season," Head Coach Abby Weber said. "I would consider my three seniors the core of the team. I expect them all to be very competitive." She was right. The Lady Lions were strong all the way through and left with a second-place finish.

Lindenwood was led by senior Claudia Rojas, who finished third out of 52, shooting an impressive score of 76. She was followed very closely by freshman Emily Tebow, who shot a 78, and sophomore Marcella Ax, who shot a 79.

This strong trio finished within the top 10 of the individual standings. Seniors Grace Weber and Katrina Walker shot an 86 and 93, respectively. The team played extremely well overall, finishing with a total score of 319 and topping rival Missouri Baptist University.

However, the Lady Lions came up just short of winning it all, falling two strokes behind Rend Lakewood Community College, who scored a 317 as a team.

After this showing, it's probable that the team will be one of the top in the NAIA as the season goes on.

"I expect to win our 11th straight conference championship and make a return trip to the NAIA national tournament," Weber said.

"I would consider my three seniors the core of my team."
