LINDENWOOD

Two new degree programs launched

Lindenwood University has launched two new degree programs, one for students interested in the rapidly growing field of information technology and the other for students interested in agriculture.

The information technology program is offered in Lindenwood's adult accelerated program. The bachelor's degree in information technology offers a wide range of courses, and is among the fastest-growing majors at LU. For more information on the information technology program, call 636-949-4933.

Lindenwood is the only institution within 100 miles offering a degree in agribusiness. This program was created based on inquiries from the public and the need to introduce students to the changing structure of agribusiness in the United States.

The program is designed for students interested in marketing positions for agricultural products companies and farm operations. For more information on the agribusiness degree program, call Kay Hammond or Judy Kamm at 636-949-4833.
