Students' Fate May Be in the Hands of Peers

*by Denise Durbin
LindenWorldWriter*

Lindenwood College students facing allegations which would require disciplinary action by the college may soon be facing a jury of peers and faculty.

Camille Oehler, Assistant Dean of Students, said the establishment of a judiciary board was being reviewed by the Residential Life staff.

If approved, the proposal would then be sent for approval by the administration, including President Dennis Spellmann and Vice-President Daniel Keck.

Lindenwood Students Invade Soviet Union

*by Denise L. Durbin

Six students, three graduates and the Vice-President of Lindenwood College left for the Soviet Union Thursday. They will return the 29th of September.

They went as part of an exchange program initiated by the Citizen Exchange Council. The council began the program to promote better understanding between people of the United States and the Soviet Union.

In the program students from Lindenwood visit the University of Azerbaijan in the city of Baku for about a week, then, the following semester, students from Azerbaijan come to the U.S. Lindenwood students first visited their sister school in the spring of 1989. The students from Azerbaijan first visited here in the fall of 1989. (continued on page 2)

Thief Strikes Niccolls Hall

*by Cynthia M. Foster

St. Charles police have no suspects in a theft which occurred last week in the dorm room of a Lindenwood student.

The student, Tim J. Wilson, 19, a sophomore resident of Niccolls, said he and his roommate, Sonny J. Arnel, 20, left their room for a short time last Wednesday night and while they were outside someone took a gold chain, $10, a Shell gas card, and a Visa card, which all belonged to Wilson.

He didn't notice the credit cards were missing until the next evening. He called the St. Charles police and the banks which issued his cards. According to Wilson, the thief had already charged $350 on the Visa card.

St. Charles police are investigating the incident and they do suspect it was a Lindenwood student who stole the items.

Judiciary Board

LSG began drafting a proposal for such a board last fall, after the student grievance committee had been eliminated the preceding spring.

"I see the judiciary board as something very positive for the campus," Oehler said. She said she sees it as another outlet for student involvement.

President Spellmann said he had not yet heard of the proposal in an interview Thursday, September 13. He said his views on disciplinary action are all stated in the student handbook from June of 1990 on page 16 in a statement called "Community Well-Being".

Spellmann said he would have to see the proposal before accepting or denying it. He said he thinks it could be a positive learning experience. He said he would consider accepting it "as long as we (the administration) have the opportunity to move swiftly when we have serious offenses." He cited two such offenses as being rape and possession and/or dealing of drugs.

Spellmann said that as reported in the handbook, disciplinary problems would be dealt with fairly, justly, and patiently. He said, however, "There are some things I'm not patient with." He listed rape and drugs as two of those things.

Spellmann also said "We (the college) are here to correct behavior, not punish." He said that talks about improving the quality of on-campus life are always welcome.

Soviet Exchange

Last spring our students were unable to return to Azerbaijan due to civil unrest in the country. This is why three of the people visiting now are graduates. Professor Edward Balog, Dean of the Social Sciences Department and Advisor to the Soviet Exchange Program, said all the students who were supposed to go last year were asked if they wanted to go.

The people now in the Soviet Union with Vice-President Dan Keck are seniors John Askey, Heidi Hunt, Jay Kemper, Paul Lampe, and David Rachie. Also there is junior Jackie Zaczek, and graduate student Sharon Bollinger. Graduates of Lindenwood Theresa Johnson, Annette Ilse, and Jocelyn Davis also went.

The students in the LC Soviet Exchange program have a steering committee that helps organize the exchanges. Students wishing to be part of the exchange apply and then are interviewed by a board of faculty. Out of about 39 applicants for this trip nine are going.

Balog said the students are staying in dorms on the campus of the university and will stay in students homes in Baku for one night. He said they will hopefully have one or two days to tour Moscow.

One of the students' activities in Baku will be to try to set the date for students from Azerbaijan to come here in the spring.

The students raised some money and also contributed from their own resources. They solicited contributions from businesses and had some funds left over from the auction in the fall of 1989. They also sold items such as T-shirts and plastic mugs with the Soviet Exchange logo on them, according to Balog.

The program extends for three years. When this time is up, it may expand to an exchange of individual students to study for up to a semester, Balog said.

The Citizen's Council has helped subsidize the exchanges for schools, but its funds are running out, according to Balog. Though the funding then will be left up to students, he said he thinks the chances of the program continuing are good.

Balog visited the Soviet Union with the first group of students. He said one surprise for this group might be the openness of discussion on political and economic issues. He said that he and the students had frank discussions with the people of Baku about the state of their nation.

Asbestos To Be Removed From Tunnels

by Paula R. Doyle
LindenWorldWriter

A cancer-causing material is currently being removed from the tunnels on campus by Midwest Asbestos Abatement Corporation.

At the turn of the century, asbestos was used as an insulator and wrapped around the steam lines. Project Manager for Midwest, Larry Eckelkamp, stated "As long as no one tampers with the wrap around the steam lines and releases the fibers into the air, no harm can be done." He said that once the asbestos is removed the steam lines will be re-insulated with fiberglass which he estimated will take 1500 man hours with an average of 20 men to complete the job.

President Spellmann said Tuesday that the re-insulating of the steam lines will help heat the buildings and water more efficiently.

He explained that the removal of asbestos from the tunnel was part of the agreement with the bank when a loan was acquired. The college was given five years to remove the asbestos. Spellmann decided to go ahead with the removal now to avoid any risks since the cable, phone, and computer wires will be put in the tunnels soon.

Another reason for the asbestos being removed now instead of the summer is because the company is in its off-season. That means a savings of $81,000 for the college.

Lindenwood sophomore, Robert Bingham, who has had some experience with asbestos abatement says that the removal of the asbestos seems to be going smoothly. "The workers are taking every precaution to insure that the asbestos fibers are not released into the air," said Bingham.

Eckelkamp says the asbestos should be completely removed by the 25th or 27th of September.

LC Professor Wins A Local Emmy

by Ambra Jackson

Carole Knight, a graduate of Lindenwood and an adjunct professor of communications at Lindenwood, was awarded an Emmy for Best Program in Performing Arts and Entertainment.

Knight produced the winning KETC-TV special "Concerto: The Whitaker Competition for Strings."

As well as being an instructor at Lindenwood, Knight is pursuing a Master of Science degree in communications here.

Knight recently produced the United Way Kick-Off Campaign telecast. She was formerly a production assistant and stage manager at KMOV-TV and co-producer of Channel 9's St. Louis Skyline.

Talent Scouts Conduct Star Search at LC

by Ambra Jackson

A modeling and talent agency was on campus last week to scout for new faces.

Alicia Tessler and Kasey Bergh, representatives from Talent Plus were at Lindenwood on September 19 taking information applications, resumes, and pictures.

They met with students in the Legacy Room and tried to let students know what it takes to be a model. They stressed that modeling is not all glamour, but most of the time it is hard work too.

Lindenwood is the first school Talent Plus visited since deciding to scout on college campuses.

The agency does hold open calls for possible models and actors to attend during the week and be seen by the agency.

Circle K Members Attend District Convention

by J. Sean Busking

The Missouri-Arkansas district of Circle K International recently held its 35th annual district convention in Anaheim, California.

Lindenwood Circle K was represented by: Nicole Schlueter, Jackie Zaczek, Theresa DiMaggio, Jill Henkel, Mary Halleman, Jim Beck, and Kenton Kolker, Kiwanis advisor.

Beck, a 1990 graduate of Lindenwood received the distinguished J.M. Emerson Lieutenant Governor Award, with $2000 in scholarships. Beck also took a first place finish in the National Oratorical Contest with a speech entitled "Developing Human Potential: A Circle K's Quest for the Betterment of Society". Beck presented his winning speech to the St. Charles Noonday Kiwanis club last week.

Circle K is the largest collegiate service organization in the world. Each club conducts service and fund-raising projects to benefit its school and community affiliations.

Currently Zaczek (Lindenwood's Circle K president) reports that there are 19 returning club members and about 21 new members. Zaczek stated, "The club is always open for any students who are interested."

LSG Holds Election--The Results Are In

by Denise L. Durbin
LindenWorldWriter

Elections for the Lindenwood Student Government (LSG) new Academic Chair, College Life Chair and six senate seats were held last week.

Kelly L. Johnson is the new Academic Chair. She ran against Lorna Johnson.

Marlin J. Ivy is the new College Life Chair. He ran against Pete Sims.

The new senators are: Dan Hamilton, Donna Kaiser, Stephen Meyers, Kim Rayford, Pete Sims, and Terri L. Terrell.

The Academic Chair works with issues such as concerns of teaching methods and possible changes in curriculum, according to John Batts, president of LSG. He said the chair may act as a liaison between faculty and students with academic concerns.

Batts said the College Life Chair deals with social concerns of students. This includes helping students who want to start new clubs and helping students with problems or concerns about residential life. The College Life Chair also directs students with problems or concerns LSG can't address, Batts said.

personal benefit" for the students who go. He said the program is also beneficial to the entire college community. Having the students from Azerbaijan come here can be insightful even for those who aren't directly involved in the exchange.

Heidi Hunt said the group plans to hold a discussion in the cafeteria after they get back from their trip. The exact time has not been set yet. She also said they were asked to make a presentation to the Board of Directors of Lindenwood.

LC Student Wins Beauty Pageant

by Cynthia M. Foster

A student at Lindenwood was recently chosen as Big Beautiful Woman on Campus (BBWOC) by southern California's Big Beautiful Women magazine.

Ambra Jackson, junior, attended Inglewood High School in California where she was selected "Miss Personality" in the Miss America Coed Pageant. She found out about the opportunity of becoming a BBWOC through an article published in the magazine.

"It was exciting to be chosen as a BBWOC and now I plan on entering the magazine's cover girl contest," Jackson said.

Jackson is majoring in fashion marketing and communications. She is a member of Lindenwood's Fashion Marketing Club and plans to become involved in full figure fashion modeling. Her career goal is to promote a large size section in every fashion magazine on the market.

The LindenWorld erroneously reported in their last edition Diann DiMaggio, a student at Lindenwood, as a junior. DiMaggio is a senior.

by Tim Stouffer
LindenWorldWriter

The Harry D. Hendren Gallery is now exhibiting a new show.

The show began September 23 with an opening reception from 2-5 p.m. and features a photography exhibit of works by Lindenwood College graduate, Tim Smith.

Smith is a resident of St. Louis and received his Bachelor of Fine Arts degree from Washington University and a Master of Arts with a photography emphasis from Lindenwood College. He teaches in the Parkway School District and has recently shown his works in juried exhibitions throughout the Midwest.

Smith's exhibit will be featured from September 23 to October 9 at the Hendren Gallery which is located in the Fine Arts Building at the corner of Watson and Gamble Streets. Gallery showing hours are 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. weekdays and 1:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. weekends.

Mainstage Theatre Casts First Play

by Tim Stouffer
LindenWorldWriter

The lights go down...the theatre is packed...your seat is comfortable...you've heard the show is great...what could make it a better show? How about a live performance and free admission? Lindenwood Theatre Mainstage performances are free for students, faculty, and staff.

The Mainstage opens with the unusual and suspenseful "An Inspector Calls" on October 4. The play will run October 4-6 and October 11-13.

Among the cast are theatre veterans Jimmy Freund as Inspector Goole, Jeff Cox as Arthur Birling, and Jennifer Jonassen as Sybil Birling.

The rest of the cast is new to Lindenwood. They are graduate student, Jesse Bean as Gerald Croft, freshmen Brook Martin as Sheila Birling, Joey Landwehr as Eric Birling, and Heather Stewart as Edna.

"An Inspector Calls" is directed by Bryan Reeder, who stunned Lindenwood last season with a masterful direction of Harold Pinter's, "The Birthday Party".

AIDS is a Major Threat to College Students Across America

by Diann DiMaggio
LindenWorldWriter

The AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome) epidemic is becoming a major problem across college campuses. College students are at risk to the human immune deficiency virus (HIV) that could lead to the AIDS virus.

The HIV virus infects disease-fighting white blood cells of the immune system. The first sign of symptoms is usually an infection like an unusual pneumonia or viral illness, fatigue, or major weight loss. The virus cannot be spread by kissing, touching, or by a toilet seat.

According to blood sample surveys at 19 campuses by the American College Health Association, one in 500 college students may carry the virus. This is due to the fact that 70% of girls and 80% of guys are sexually active by the time they are 20 years old. Sex with multiple partners, the risk-taking involved with not using condoms, and the rise in crack-cocaine and alcohol abuse, which could lead to promiscuity, make students susceptible to the risk of getting the HIV virus.

Most college students aren't aware of the growing threat of AIDS because it may take as long as seven years for symptoms to occur.
