Students to elect LSGA senate

By Natasha Sakovich
 Managing Editor

Students have an opportunity to make history this week by voting for the first members of the new student senate, a recent addition to the Lindenwood Student Government Association.

Voting for the new senate is taking place outside the cafeteria on the second floor of the Spellmann Center until Friday, Sept. 24.

This newly formed senate will consist of 10 student members, with one man and one woman representing each class (including graduate students). Kerry Cox, director of student activities said, "The purpose behind creating the senate was to increase student advocacy across the board. We felt like LSGA didn't have enough structure, and this is just one way that we're trying to reform it."

Senate members will focus more on advocacy for student concerns rather than event and activity planning. "If students have a problem or a concern, they can now directly contact their senate representatives to help resolve the issue," said LSGA Vice President Jennifer Swisher. "The senate really is all about increasing advocacy and helping every student to have a say in what goes on."

The senate is also designed to help facilitate better communication throughout the university. One of the ways individual senate members will accomplish this goal is to sit in on certain faculty committee meetings each week, like the retention committee. "At meetings, the senate will provide a student perspective to certain issues," Cox said. "It will be a great help to have student input on a lot of aspects, such as ways that Lindenwood can continue to increase student retention."

The senate election was originally set to take place the week of Sept. 13-17, but due to technical problems. Please see Election, Page 8

Faculty Day nixes classes at LU today

Administrators plan trip to Lindenwood Belleville campus to check out new facilities

By Holly Hoehstenbach
 Staff Reporter

Today students are able to catch up on sleep and class work or take a break from the week's stress. Since today is a Faculty Work Day, all classes for the day are canceled except 4:30 p.m. and later evening and graduate classes.

Each year, the purpose of Faculty Work Day varies.

Unlike previous years, this day serves a completely different purpose for faculty members.

Today they will board buses and visit the Lindenwood campus in Belleville, Ill.

Faculty members will have the opportunity to see Belleville's facilities and check out the new bachelor's degree day program.

Vice President for Academic Affairs and Provost Jann Weitzel said the goal this year is for faculty members to meet students and other members at the Belleville campus and become familiar with their day program.

"We all need to understand all aspects of the university," Weitzel said.

Spanish professor Maite Nuñez-Betelu is looking forward to this day.

"It's a good opportunity to learn about the new campus," Nuñez-Betelu said.

"I don't know anything about the Belleville campus."

Overall, students enjoy having a day with no classes.

"It's great having a day off to chill and catch up on work," graduate student Malvika Behl said.

"We need more days like this."

Junior Aaron Kothe had a similar response.

"Having no classes is great, but it would make more sense if it was held on a Monday or Friday," said.

"Also, I think bringing in speakers or providing something fun for students to do would be nice."

Parking Woes

Two cars park illegally in front of Stumberg Hall. With a record-breaking number of students on campus, ideal parking spaces have become scarce, prompting drivers to create makeshift areas. Security Director Kurt Smith implemented a new system to cut down on illegal parking.

New policies try to curb violations

By Kenny Gerling
 Staff Reporter

Updates to security procedures are having a positive effect on parking well into the fifth week of classes, security personnel say.

Kurt Smith, hired over the summer as director of public safety and security, has instituted a new set of policies to curb the rampant parking violations that have plagued the campus in the past.

Smith said that upon beginning work, there were some obstacles, with "parking enforcement being one of the main challenges."

One of the new parking control strategies is a three-step system beginning with a warning citation, escalating to a boot and then ending, on the third offense, with the car being impounded.

Smith said that issuing a warning first appears to be effective in getting the point across.

It's a way of letting drivers know that now "the policies are being vehemently enforced," Smith said.

Along with increased enforcement, security hopes that an emphasis on "alternative parking" will reduce violations.

"I've encouraged alternative parking at the performance arena, Scheidegger Center and even at the Cultural Center," Smith said.

"Students can't park in areas they're not supposed to be in."

"We don't want to issue summonses but students can't park in areas they're not supposed to be in."

Smith said that the policies' effectiveness is due to a system of open dialogue with students and faculty as well as the motto "follow-up is everything."

President purchases bronze lion statues for Lindenwood House

By Abby Buckles
 Staff Reporter

President James Evans and his wife returned from vacation in Las Vegas last July after purchasing two large adornments for the new Lindenwood House, scheduled for completion by the first week of December.

Evans and his wife, Lois, spotted the two mirror-image bronze lions in an art shop at the Paris Las Vegas Hotel & Casino.

Evans said they decided to buy them as a gift to the university because the lions would be a nice addition to the Lindenwood House.

"We think the lions will be a permanent enhancement of the beauty of the house. Since they're bronze, they should last hundreds of years, probably longer than the house. They serve as superb symbols of our intercollegiate athletic teams," Evans said.

The two bronze sculptures, standing about 5 feet tall, were transported by truck and sit on either side of the house's entrance.

The 10 room house, in the northwest corner of campus near the Lou Brock Sports Complex, will replace the old president's house next to the Memorial Arts Building near the entrance to the university.

Evans said the old house, which was built in the 1940s, was showing its age, so the Board of Directors decided to build a new one.

"It will be a beautiful addition to this historic campus," Evans said.

The house is set up to be a gathering place and reception area. It will also be a place for student organizations and VIP groups.

The $3 million home, which Evans and his wife will live in once construction is complete, was paid for through general revenue from Lindenwood's reserve.

ISO provides culture bridge for students

By Tamara Freitas
Staff Reporter

The International Student Organization (ISO) is a club designed to contribute to the global socialization on campus.

Lindenwood's ISO was initiated as a small-scaled affiliation in 1990, focusing on the welfare of international students.

The organization's purpose is to promote interaction between students from different countries, emphasizing the components of their nation, culture and traditions.

The club is a student-based organization sponsored by professors Ray Scupin and Ryan Guffey, in addition to the student officers.

The organization provides weekly meetings in which the executive board, along with the club members, plan different activities for the school year.

According to Samuel Hou, ISO president, trips to Walmart, the St. Louis Zoo, the Arch and visits to various religious temples are examples of the events the club encourages students to engage in.

In addition, the club organizes the International Festival, an event also open to the surrounding community.

The event happens in the spring time, and it is a compilation of about 15 to 20 groups invited to perform, bring their cuisines and show some interesting aspects of their country.

The financial support or "club monies" from the institution come from participations in the Lindenwood Student Government Association meetings and fund raisers during the year.

The club members have also volunteered in other festivals in order to collect additional funds.

Scupin, director of the international and global studies, said, "It is a rare opportunity to learn about other cultures from resources other than television or reading."

"I want to encourage students to join the ISO. It is a great opportunity for students to enrich their lives by interacting with one another on various projects and learning from one another to help develop a global awareness and perspective," Scupin said.

"A global perspective is a fundamental requirement for all of our students today as we experience a very multicultural world."

Weekly meetings are held on Thursdays in Room 3115 in the Spellmann Center.

"It is a great opportunity for students to enrich their lives."

Professors to present on oil spill

By Andrea Scott
Staff Reporter

Over the past six months, the U.S. witnessed its worst oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico.

Lindenwood professors David Knotts, Deb Hopkins and Gail Johnston decided to go to New Orleans to find out more about the oil spill and bring information to the Lindenwood student body.

Lindenwood school officials believe that this oil spill is significant to everyone because it affects our surroundings.

Lindenwood University sponsored the trip for the professors to "collect samples, talk with people, both estuary and fishermen, to find more information," Knotts said.

On Oct. 5 the professors will speak about their experience in a presentation called "A Glimpse at the Environmental Impact of the Oil Spill in the Gulf of Mexico."

"Four of us went down to see firsthand, because the oil spill has been on the news all summer and we know students have questions about the oil," said Knotts, dean of American studies. The professors spent five days at the site and witnessed that the oil affected fish all across the coast.

Professors, along with many across the nation, are skeptical of ways to cease the oil spill.

Government officials at first decided to burn the oil to stop it.

"I don't know why they stopped burning the oil," Knotts said.

President Obama's direct language on being in charge of the spill response, which he repeated several times, marked a change in emphasis from earlier administration assertions.

While the government was overseeing the operation, BP had the expertise and equipment to make the decisions on how to stop the flow.

"Local people interviewed were very positive toward BP but respectful of the government media," Knotts said.

In their presentation at 7 p.m. Oct. 5 in the A-B Leadership Room in the Spellmann Center, the professors will discuss their experience and explain how this affected the world, and give students a better explanation and updates of the matter.

Ex-major league pitcher kicks off Lindenwood Speaker Series

Jim 'The Rookie' Morris gives the first speech of the LU Speaker Series on Sept. 14 at the Bezemes Family Theater in the J. Scheidegger Center.

By Jasmine Smith
Contributing Writer

LU students gazed at the well dressed gentleman in a white button-down, fitted blazer, pressed slacks and polished shoes as he enthusiastically took the stage last week at the Bezemes Family Theater in the J. Scheidegger Center for the Arts.

"My name is Jim Morris," he said with a grin, and the crowd of more than 200 warmed to him immediately.

Morris spoke about dream killers. "A dream killer wants to see you fail and they come in all shapes, forms and sizes," said the subject of the 2002 movie "The Rookie," starring Dennis Quaid.

The former professional baseball pitcher was the semester's first Speaker Series guest on Tuesday, Sept. 14. At age 35 he was teaching physics and coaching a losing high school baseball team. But he told his team that if they won districts, he would try out for the big leagues as he had done in his 20s.

His team won, so he stuck to his word. Morris hadn't played baseball in years and had endured nine surgeries on his arm. Despite that and people saying that he couldn't make it, he threw 12 pitches at 98 mph and was signed to a contract.

"Be [the] best that you can possibly be ... surround yourself with positive people," Morris said.

After pitching for the Tampa Bay Devil Rays in 1999 and 2000, his life story became a Walt Disney Studios movie in 2002, "The Rookie." He told the Lindenwood audience that no matter who you are or what you have been through, you can achieve anything. He said his story wasn't about finally being in the big leagues, but going after what he wanted no matter what.

Morris said he realized that what he had been teaching his players was something that he wasn't applying to his own life. Now he uses his experience to motivate and inspire others.

With honesty and humor, he told about being not only "The Rookie," but a husband, father, friend, author, speaker, educator, athlete and a man who believes in God.

The Lindenwood crowd responded to his speech with a standing ovation, whistles and claps suitable for a home run at Busch Stadium.

The next Speakers Series event is scheduled Oct. 5 when Lindenwood professors David Knotts, Deb Hopkins and Gail Johnston will describe the environmental impact of the BP oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico. For more information, contact program coordinator Paul Huffman at phuffman@lindenwood.edu.

LURDA plans 'Dark Carnival'

By Amanda O'Brien
Staff Reporter

Topics of discussion at the Lindenwood Student Government Association (LSGA) meeting Sept. 14 included the planning of a "Dark Carnival" on Oct. 28 by the Lindenwood University Resident Director Association (LURDA).

This event will take place near the end of October and will include games, actors from the Lindenwood theater group and a haunted house.

Event organizers are also hoping to plan a dorm decorating contest with a scarecrow.

Anyone with ideas or who would like to help in the planning is encouraged to contact Joe Thorp at cobbstrd@lindenwood.edu.

Another important topic of discussion was Homecoming Oct. 15 and 16.

There will be the traditional events such as the pep rally, parade and the homecoming football game.

But it will also include some new and diverse events.

There will be a lip-synching contest and also a concert put on by the band Switchfoot, free for students.

LSGA also discussed the upcoming events for the speaker and film series. Dates and times of these events are posted on the Lindenwood Web site.

The Catholic Student Union holds weekly meetings at 6 p.m. Tuesdays in Butler Parlor.

A Cross Between will hold "Cross Chat" at 7 p.m. every Tuesday, and Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship meets for Bible study every Monday, Thursday and Friday.

Anyone who is interested in these clubs is encouraged to attend.

Any student who is looking to become more actively involved within the Lindenwood community can attend the LSGA meetings, held weekly at 4 p.m. every Tuesday in the Spellmann Center Leadership room.

Student spirit group makes for good times, easy grades

One of the more difficult tasks a student encounters during their college career is being able to keep a full course load without being overly burdened with school-work. Luckily, Lindenwood has just the answer.

The LU Crew is an elective course that allows students to receive one activities credit hour for going to sporting events and cheering.

Indeed, there is a class in which the curriculum pertains to being a fan of your school's sports teams.

The grading system for the course is mostly based upon attendance, but don't think that showing up is the only requirement.

In addition to the 10 games students must show up for, participation is highly encouraged.

It is at this time of participation when students enrolled in the class show their spirit and the organized cheers they learned in the class meeting time that week.

Besides receiving class credit for LU Crew, students also get "spirit" favors such as T-shirts and poms to wear and wave at the games.

For years, students have joked around about taking classes such as "Underwater Basket Weaving 101" or "Backwards Pogo Sticking" as ways to get credits for college, but the LU Crew might take the cake.

There are few things that I can think of that are easier than showing up to a sporting event and cheering for the home team.

As jokingly easy the LU Crew appears to be, I do believe there is some merit to the class. LU Crew advisor/instructor Kerry Cox said that the class promotes organization and teaches students to get involved and I would have to agree.

There are probably quite a few students who get into LU Crew who might not join a group if it wasn't for the college credit that end up joining more student groups.

Furthermore, with Lindenwood moving to NCAA Division II soon, this may help create a tradition of school spirit that is vital to the well being of NCAA universities.

I've been at a D-II school that didn't have much spirit or tradition and even though the sports teams did well, attendance was low because students just didn't care.

It made for boring weekends and a stagnant student population. Maybe an LU Crew would have helped that school?

It's not easy fostering student spirit at smaller university's. Lots of students tend to leave for the weekend and aren't around for the opportunity to attend events.

So if you're looking for an easy credit hour, consider this a viable option. It's the best of both worlds; help your G.P.A. and your athletic teams.

Parking tickets a necessary evil

Hang tags and little parking stickers are how our cars are identified at schools.

If you don't have a parking sticker on the back of your vehicle or you're parked in the wrong lot, look out for security because they are coming to give you a ticket.

Now don't get me wrong, I understand there are reasons for parking stickers but school just started.

I know that there was a check-in booklet that told students what they needed to do within the first days of school, but what if a student was late getting in and never received that little booklet?

Warnings should be given for the first offense, rather than a ticket; warnings could come in handy on numerous accounts.

For example, if a returning student has always parked in the same lot for three years and LU changes the lot to be for commuters and adjunct staff only, should the student get a ticket for not knowing?

Now I am sure the commuters need a place to park their cars, too, but it still isn't fair to the residents that accidentally parked there to get a ticket for not getting the memo about the change.

Just recently I experienced getting a ticket from security for that exact reason.

In my opinion, even if one has a resident sticker on the back of their car but are technically not living on campus in any way, shape or form, then to me they are still commuters.

I was parking in the commuter lot because up until after receiving my ticket, I was a commuter in my mind.

However, because I am financially packaged as a resident, I now have a $25 ticket to pay.

Security is going a little over board with the tickets right now. It really is only a month into school, and students are still finding out new things about campus.

Apparently warnings were given the first week, but I didn't receive a warning. So instead of giving us a ticket, boot, then huge fines we should all get a warning our first offense.

Whether it's the first week or the last week, why don't you all just cut us some slack right now and start things off with a warning.

Letter to the Editor

On Sunday, Sept.12, about 3,000 people gathered under the St. Louis Arch for a Tea Party Rally. Fellow Lindenwood student Zach White and I ventured down with a camera to get interviews. Their message was clear: they are sick and tired of bulk spending by the government and they believe it's time for a change. "Take back America from this treasonous communist gangster dictator regime!" and "Say no to Socialism!" were a couple of the hundreds of signs they carried.

Sharron Travis traveled from Birmingham, Ala., to visit her brother and bring him to his first Tea Party. "It is my hope and prayer that in November enough people will be alert, awake and aware enough to vote out every single Democrat up for election," she said.

One Tea Bagger, who said she wouldn't reveal her name for fear of the government, said, "We have a dictatorship going on right now, and the American people are finally awakening to realize that."

We found no interviews with anyone opposing the Tea Party views. When we tried we were called "Anti-American" and Tea Party staff followed us to make sure we didn't get interviews. They did not want the other side of the story told, even if it meant denying us freedom of the press.

But if I believed that President Obama is a Marxist Muslim dedicated to turning America into a Communist state, I'd be a little embarrassed and worried for other people to hear the opposing side's views, too.

LU film series boasts award winners, classics and foreign movies

This weekend as you plan to give the excuse of "doing laundry," or "there's that thing I have to do," to avoid another awkward Friday night with your new friends from the cafeteria, you can now add a free-movie-night excuse.

The premiere of the Film Series on September 10 was fresh and entertaining. The series opened with a 'Living in the '60s' theme and included movies such as "Easy Rider," "Woodstock" and "Dr. No."

This weekend's showing consists of "2001: A Space Odyssey," "Shakespeare in Love," and, one of my favorites, "The White Ribbon."

"That was what this was originally based on," said graduate assistant Rachel Miller, adding that each movie they watched in Dr. Brown's Philosophy class had a theme with discussion following.

David Brown and Peter Carlos, philosophy professor and LUTV manager respectively, proposed this idea to Lindenwood President James Evans.

With help from their graduate assistants and various groups under the Lindenwood Student Government Association (LSGA), the series debut was a success.

Support also comes from Lindenwood faculty and administration such as John Oldani, Donnell Walsh and Peter White, who make up part of the panel.

Since admission is free for LU students and staff, and general admission is only $5, any spare change is enough to get you and your date a snack from the concession stand.

Different clubs under the LSGA take turns to man the stands, and any profits from the stand support the clubs and the series.

The theater in Young Auditorium boasts an 11X15 foot screen, excellent surround sound and seating capacity of at least 100.

Brown was pleased that this activity would bring to light the renovations to the theater.

"For the first time, a B.A. in Film will be taught in a real theater," Brown said.

With future plans to renovate the theater, support of the ongoing event would bring awareness and appreciation to the facility.

Students and faculty are encouraged to vote for next semester's movies, as well as join a group on Facebook that pertains to the film series.

Further screening listings can be found at www.lindenwood.edu/film.

Paramore lights up Civic tour

By Diane Kenley
Contributing Writer

Receiving rave reviews from both Rolling Stone and SPIN magazines, the Honda Civic Tour continues to draw huge crowds to U.S. arenas until Sept. 19. Joining punk-rock headliner "Paramore" this summer are Canadian indie favorite "Tegan and Sara," the tour's veteran "New Found Glory" and intriguing newcomer "Kadawatha."

After rocking Vans Warped Tour for 3 years, Paramore gained mainstream popularity when their powerful song "Decode" made the "Twilight" soundtrack in 2008, according to paramore.net. The quintet delivered an explosive set featuring favorites from all three albums, heavy on content from 2009 release "Brand New Eyes." Giant video screens hung above the stage and enhanced the performance as each z o o m e d in on a member or flashed band a r t w o r k. Later, each displayed a short film following one member through hilarious antics. These coupled with impressive lighting and sparks were evidence of the perks a sponsor like Honda can provide. The result? A real stadium rock show.

Lead singer and writer Hayley Williams, 21, introduced by guitarist and co-writer Josh Farro, 22, as the "pint-sized vocal powerhouse" of Paramore, was just featured on the cover of SPIN in July, complete with famous shocking-red locks. The newest member and co-writer, Taylor York, 20, also sports a guitar onstage, while Jeremy Davis, 25, soars on bass. Zac Farro, 20, the youngest at just 14 when the band formed in Franklin, TN, rounds out the group on drums according to spin.com.

As a whole, Paramore can be described simply as enthusiastic, fun and appreciative of their fans. They feverishly leapt about and even invited one lucky fan onstage to sing along. All around, the show was a jump-up-and-down, sing-your-heart-out experience.

With their signature light-hearted banter, no one would guess that alternative band Tegan and Sara haven't opened for someone in years. Their ten year indie catalog includes mainly pop-rock, but dabbles in unusual melodies and arrangements stretching from electro dance jams to acoustic ballads. The twin sisters Tegan and Sara Quin, 29, have a loyal backing band and indie fan base. "Walking with a Ghost" is probably their most recognized work to date which gained mainstream radio play in 2005 and, as stated on teganandsara.com, was even covered by The White Stripes.

Although Sara says they're "not a political band," they are strong advocates for gay rights. Both are lesbians from Canada, who's had same-sex marriage rights since 2005, according to mapleleafweb.com.

If their opener skills were rusty, the crowd didn't mind and welcomed Tegan and Sara warmly. "Their set was refreshing, since it wasn't quite as hard rock as the others," said Brianna Owen, 27, a Springfield, Mo. native who saw the Cincinnati, Oh. show on August 19. "The songs were catchy and something different."

New Found Glory returns to the tour, having also participated in 2003, as stated on civictour.honda.com. Their addictive energy and humorous quips added to the upbeat atmosphere created by their familiar sound. Lead singer Jordin Pundik, 30, even mingled with the crowd during songs.

This U.S. tour marks the first for "Kadawatha," a Swedish band whose moniker is the last name of passionate lead singer, Daniel, 23, originally from Sri Lanka. After seeing them perform in Europe, Paramore was impressed enough to ask them out on tour, according to civictour.honda.com. The band clad matching outfits mixing black with bright colors, escalating the dramatics of the unique rock set.

He Said/She Said

What fall entertainment are you looking forward to?

By Chris Bennett

The rapid approach of autumn can only mean one thing; the release of a multitude of movies, television programs, CD's and books and a plethora of fall previews from various media outlets. Well, we here at the Legacy aren't any better than those other media outlets, though we try our best. With that being said, here's a look at three upcoming media manifestations that I am excited to consume in the next few weeks

Film

Ben Affleck catches a lot of flak from movie goers and the public in general. Maybe it has something to do with him starring in "Gigli," a film so bad that people who haven't even seen it often list it as one of the worst films ever made. But for all the bad projects Affleck has been a part of, he has proven to be more than capable behind the camera, whether it be writing or directing. Affleck co-wrote one of my favorite films, "Good Will Hunting" and wrote and directed "Gone Baby Gone," a film with a strong plot as well as a clear directorial vision. It's because of these reasons I'm looking forward to the film "The Town." Big Ben wrote and directed this film about a bank robber who falls for a girl that his gang holds hostage during a heist. But, for better or for worse, Affleck is also the leading role in the film. In hopes that his writing and directing outweigh his acting, I think that "The Town" will be a film to look forward to, especially for college students looking for a film that presents some interesting social dialogue yet still has enough action to engross the viewer.

Television

For NBC and "The Office" fans, a sad day is approaching. Steve Carrell, who plays the character of Michael Scott on the aforementioned show, announced that he would be leaving the show when his contract expires at the end of the current production. This will likely mean the demise of "The Office," but will also make room for an up and coming show to take its place and I think "Outsourced" will be that show.

Based on an indie flick with the same title, "Outsourced" is about an American who moves to Mumbai, India to manage an order processing call center for a company located in the States.

Cultures clash, people fall in love, and hilarity ensues.

Chances are that the show won't be as good as the "The Office" but the overarching plot seems strong enough to give "Outsourced" some staying power as well as provide some good laughs. "Outsourced" starts tomorrow.

Music

On Oct. 12, Sufjan Stevens will release his new album "The Age of Adz." For those of you not familiar with Stevens, he is a musician who has started what he calls "The 50 States Project." Stevens researches the history and stories of states and then writes and composes songs about the states. So far, Stevens has written albums about Michigan and Illinois and is expected to be releasing another state album soon.

But until that happens, fans of Steven's music can take solstice in the upcoming "The Age of Adz" record. It has been reported that the record is much more electric than Stevens' previous albums and is free from conceptualization like the States Project.

Stevens has proven to be one of the more consistent artists in the eight or so years and "The Age of Adz" should be another strong showing from this electric and original musician.

By Holly Hoechstebach

As much as I long for my bronzed tan, pool parties and county fairs, I look forward to the new entertainment this fall.

One TV show I look forward to on The CW is "Gossip Girl." Yes, I said it, "Gossip Girl." Although I'm not normally a fan of drama/cliue shows, "Gossip Girl's" array of distinctive fashion, eye-catching actors and captivating scenery of New York intrigue me.

Aired on Sept. 13, "Gossip Girl" is back as season four launches in Paris, the beautiful City of Lights.

Season three wrapped up with the notorious, hot hunk Chuck Bass (Ed Westwick) bleeding on the streets from a fatal gunshot, Serena (Blake Lively) and Blair (Leighton Meester) heading off to rejuvenate in Paris, Nate (Chance Crawford) finding his inner playboy and Dan (Pen Badgley) discovering he might be a father.

Even those who hate gossip and "the modern teenage cliue" will enjoy this show. Their scandalous lives draw you in.

With season three never having a dull moment, leaving viewers craving more, I can only imagine what season four will bring.

A must-see movie of terror and agony releases right before Halloween. On Oct. 29, the endless, twisted mind games and torture is back as "SAW 3D," directed by Kevin Greutert appears in theatres, this time in 3D.

The film features the characters Jigsaw (Tobin Bell), Mark (Costas Mandylor), Jill (Betsy Russell), Dr. Gordon (Cary Elwes), and Bobby Dagen (Sean Patrick Flanery). Although "SAW 3D" can be a bit brutal and stomach churning, the 3D traps coming to life inches in front of you makes me want to see what the anticipation is all about.

As the previous survivors and other characters struggle to stay alive and reach the end of the deadly battle,

I am excited to see "the games" come alive in 3D.

Another sure-to-be fall hit in the music industry is Kenny Chesney's new album "Hemingway's Whiskey" which hits stores Sept. 28.

Whether or not you're a fan of country music, Kenny's songs offer a fun, chill vibe.

Senior quarterback Phillip Staback directs the offense alongside running back Denodus O'Bryant in Saturday's game against the eighth-ranked Missouri Valley University. Staback finished the game with three touchdowns. The Lions went on to win the game by a score of 45-27.

Lions beat eighth-ranked Missouri Valley

On Saturday night the Lindenwood Lions football team continued their winning ways, beating the No. 8 ranked Missouri Valley Vikings 45-27. This proved to be the toughest test so far this season, coming off a 69-7 win over Central Methodist.

The Lions took the opening kickoff and made a statement quickly.

It only took three plays for quarterback Phillip Staback to connect with Jamere Holland for a 58-yard touchdown pass.

"We always want to score on the first possession of each half," senior receiver Matt Bramow said. "That gets things rolling. Football is just easier if you score on your first drive."

The Vikings answered quickly, marching down the field and scoring on a 14-yard rush less than two minutes later.

At that point, it looked as if it were going to be a high-scoring affair. But the next score wouldn't come until the last minute of the first quarter, when Staback connected with Bramow on a short pass.

Bramow made a great run after the catch to score a 43-yard touchdown.

Both teams scored in the second quarter, including a 10-yard rushing touchdown by Denodus O'Bryant. The Lions ended the first half leading 21-14.

Although the Lions were in the lead, they were not satisfied with their play in the first half.

Penalties hurt them, as well as a few careless mistakes.

In the second half, the Lions again started early with their hard-hitting defense. They quickly got back-to-back sacks by Nick Tepea and Dan Carlisle on Vikings quarterback Chris White and forced Missouri Valley to punt. This was one of many dominant defensive drives, which helped lead to the win.

"It was great to see a defensive plan come together," junior linebacker Chris Howard said. "We worked on it all week at practice. It just came together quite nicely."

On their first offensive drive of the half, the Lions came out passing. Staback found Holland four times on the drive for three first downs. Staback capped off the drive with a six-yard rush and dive into the corner of the end zone for a touchdown to put them up 28-7. It was only a few minutes later that O'Bryant scored his second touchdown on a 14-yard rush.

The fourth quarter was full of scoring. The Vikings scored only 48 seconds into the quarter. The Lions answered next with a field goal by James Neal, followed by a two-yard rushing touchdown by Nate Orlando five minutes later.

Missouri Valley scored the final touchdown, but it was not enough.

The big story for the Lions in the game was penalties. They were penalized 17 times, which cost them 165 yards. Most came in the first half, with 12 for 120 yards, but the Lions cleaned up their game in the second half.

"In the first couple games I think we played real polished football without the penalties," Head Coach Patrick Ross said. "This week it was an intense football game. They [the officials] wanted to call the cleanest game possible. Unfortunately, especially in the first half, we were on the opposite side of some of those calls. Nothing was cheap. If we get those from playing hard and playing physical, we can live with them, but if they are cheap then we will deal with them."

Next week the Lions will again face a top-ten team in No. 6 ranked MidAmerica Nazarene. Last year the Lions beat them 55-14.

"I told the players to enjoy this for about 30 seconds because it's time for number six," Ross said. "We have to go there, and they have a great football team. It is definitely time to focus on MidAmerica."

My Take

Lions Football is the real deal

As I sat and watched the Lions football game from the hot and stuffy press box this past Saturday, I saw a team that has everything.

They have four running backs that can take it to the house on any given carry. They have a quarterback in Phillip Staback who is not afraid to get in the action after the ball is out of his hands. There are countless receivers that have hands of glue, and the defense is playing more aggressive than ever before.

The Lions have every tool they need to win it all this year, but most importantly they have the drive and motivation they need to win as well.

Let's start with Staback. The guy puts up over 400 yards passing a game and three or four touchdowns.

Not to mention he is usually benched midway through the third quarter. He can also move around in the pocket and take off if he needs to.

Saturday he even made a block, after running back Denodus

O'Bryant was forced to go to the opposite side of the field. With his block he made a run into a decent gain, that should have been stuffed in the backfield.

Something that has really played into Staback's success is the receiving core. Matt Bramow and Jamere Holland have really stepped it up and both have been making big catches when they are needed. Their speed and ability to get open has made things very easy on Staback.

O'Bryant has been used sparingly so far this year, but that is partly due to the fact that he has three other potential starting running backs behind him. With Nate Orlando healthy this year, he has been a great goal line back already scoring four touchdowns.

Still, the offense would be nothing without their line. They have been creating huge holes for the running backs, and they give Staback

Alex Jahnce
Sports Editor

plenty of time to find an open receiver.

Last but not least they have a defense that is all over the ball every play. So far this season they have five interceptions and one for a touchdown.

All I am trying to say is they have the team they need to win the championship. They don't just have the talent, but the players have a lot of passion for the game of football.

If my rambling about the many players they have is not enough, I'll let the stats speak for themselves.

First, the Lions have outscored their opponents 182-41 over just three games this season. As far as their multiple running backs go, LU has had 12 rushing touchdowns by six different players. Passing-wise Staback has connected with 12 different receivers so far this season and already has 10 touchdowns. The offensive line has led the way for 1883 yards of offense, while the defense has stalled their opponents at 832 yards. I mean the Lions have over double the yards as their opponents. What team can say that?

For most teams these are mid-season stats, but the Lions did it all in only three games. After losing in the championship game last season coach Patrick Ross and the Lions will stop at nothing to win it all, and quite honestly I think this may be the team that will do it.

There is a fire in their eyes that I did not see last year. Sure, they wanted it last year. They gave everything they had, but this year they are making a point of winning the championship.

"The Lions have every tool they need to win it all this year, but more importantly they have the drive and motivation they need to win as well."

"We always want to score on our first possession of each half. That gets the ball rolling. Football is just easier if you score on your first drive."

Women's soccer set to start conference play

By Nick Cichielo
Contributing Reporter

The Lady Lions soccer team is hoping for a better outcome to this season.

Last season the team finished with a respectable 9-9-1 record.

While they were 6-2 at home, they had a record of 3-7-1 on the road.

This was a disappointing finish for a team that had returned many of its top players.

This year is a new start. The team is backed by returning senior Lindsay Shea, who was the leading scorer last year with 12 goals in 19 games.

The real key for this season will be the play of new starting goaltender Whitney Calvin, who did not appear in single game last season. So far, Calvin has fared well, with a 1.71 goals against average.

One major question heading into the season was: who would provide a legitimate scoring threat besides Lindsey Shea?

Four games into the season, three players have scored multiple goals (Kayla Thomas, Paige Hickey, and Bailey Cody). While their

2-2 record to start this season might not seem like much, the team seems to have improved over a year ago.

Their 4-0 win against Southern Nazarene was nothing short of dominant in which they allowed one shot on goal.

The Lady Lions hope to build on this victory. They will open up conference play against MidAmerica Nazarene University on Sept. 25.

This will be a huge game for the team because they want to make a statement early.

Game of the Week

On Friday, the Lions ice hockey will open up their season at home against the Davenport University Panthers for a two-game series. The puck drops at 7:30 p.m. This is the Lions' first game under their new head coach Rick Zombo.

Victory over No. 1 punctuates early success

By Micah Woodard
Editor-In-Chief

The LU men's soccer team was firmly evaluated early, facing three traditionally nationally ranked teams consecutively to begin the season.

And they passed the test with two victories, including a defeat of top-ranked Lindsey Wilson College, last year's NAIA champion and preseason No. 1 team.

Head Coach Carl Hutter said early match-ups against the nation's elite affords the team an honest examination of their skills and prepares them for conference play.

"If you look at the players' perspective, and you're a competitive athlete, you want to play the best teams possible," he said.

On Sept. 5, Lindenwood kicked off the year with an overtime thriller. After a 90-minute defensive struggle, the Lions defeated Lee University on a golden goal by senior midfielder Hannes Backstrom.

Hutter said the momentum from that game carried over to the Lindsey Wilson contest the next night.

"We used that," he said. "We told them, 'Congratulations. Feel good about [the win], but let's try and have that feeling again tomorrow."

Sophomore goalkeeper Victor Francoz saves a shot taken by No. 1 ranked Lindsey Wilson College, who the Lions upset 2-1 at home on Sept. 6.

And the emotion would come again.

With strong possession play, solid transitions and a little luck, the Lions grabbed the 2-1 upset over Lindsey Wilson.

Hutter said his team made plenty of mistakes during the two games, but their pre-season work ethic and overall fitness contributed heavily to their success.

"Sometimes you make luck because of hard work," he said. "Even though we could've easily lost those games, we found a way to win. And that's a strong character of our team that we've starting to notice."

Hutter said that although Lindsey Wilson is a championship squad that he respects, the team approached the game like any other early season contest.

"We didn't really build it up as we're playing this big monster. ... It was mainly more about gaining momentum, so we were happy," he said.

"But quite frankly, if we'd played the Missouri School of the Blind, we'd have been happy too. Because a win is a win."

However, Lindenwood couldn't complete the three-game sweep, falling 2-1 on the road to Park University on Sept. 8.

Despite the loss, Hutter said he admired the mentality of the team, which attacked vehemently through the last minute of the game.

"I was really proud of how they played," he said. "We just turned it into another experience and another opportunity to learn."

Hutter said that although his squad has a lot of room to grow, he is pleased with the first half of the season.

"So far, so good," he said. "But our expectations are very high - because they're talented. We've got a good core group of people."

The 6-1 Lions face off against Columbia College tonight in Columbia, Mo.

On Saturday, they kick off conference play at Hunter Stadium against MidAmerica Nazarene University.

Tennis team prepares for new season

By Issa David
Staff Reporter

Bill Vahle is entering his sixth season as the men's and women's tennis coach. Last year the women's team went to the National Championship after winning the Heart of America Athletic Conference (HAAC).

"Can we repeat? I don't know the league is stronger,"

Vahle said speaking about the women. The women were not expected to win the conference last year, but they proved a lot of people wrong. All of the ladies are returning. Sophomore Adela Slovakova from the Czech Republic will be the number one player. No team from the Midwest has ever won the national championship, so the defending HAAC champs will have their work cut for them.

Sophomore Ciao Claudino from Garulhas, Brazil is the men's number one player. "He is a very good player. [His] forehand is spectacular, he uses his backhand kind of to mark time," Vahle said.

Claudino will sit out the fall season, but come spring he will be ready to play. He was

"It's a very short season, so we don't take any risks in the fall."

—Coach Vahle

the runner up at NAIA. The strength of the men's team is depth. The teams have already started the fall season which is not the actual season.

The fall is more of a pre-season to get players in shape, and for coaches to see what they have in their teams.

"It's a very short season, so we don't take any risks in the fall," said Vahle.

Almost all of the players are returning from last season, both on the men's and women's. The fall season does lead to the preseason ranking for the spring season, but it is a chance for the teams to start off right.

Lady Lions field Hockey players fight for the ball in Sundays game against Trine University. They went on to win the game by the score of 7-0

Field hockey fights for improvement

By T.J. Gibbar
Staff Reporter

The Lady Lions Field Hockey team upped their overall record to 3-4 on the season after a 7-0 victory over Trine University last Sunday.

It has been a rocky start for the Lady Lions this season with the multiple injuries they have had to overcome, but this win may have just been what they needed.

"So far we have expected to win a little bit more than we had, but we have been getting closer and closer each day," Head Coach Meg Lake said after their victory over Trine.

Some of the things that Lake wants the team to improve on are their endurance and more importantly, their defense. They want to focus more on the back field and less on scoring goals.

"Offense wins games and Defense wins championships. That's what we want to do," Lake said.

Lake has identified two leaders on the team this season, who both lead in different way. Lake said that Junior Haley McCulloch is a talent leader and leads more by example, as Sophomore Kayleigh Harrower leads more vocally and keeps her team mentally in the game. "Kayleigh is always keeping the team up in good spirits and just has the perfect attitude," Lake said.

Coming from McCulloch as a leader of the team and also having more of an inside look, she feels that they are working together more as a team and are improving day in and day out. "Last year it took awhile to come together as a team, but I feel like this year it is happening much sooner", McCulloch said.

While talent is important McCulloch feels that team chemistry is also a great asset to have.

"Were not just together on the field, but off of the field as well," McCulloch said.

Red Cross starts blood drive today

By Ibukunoluwa Tunbi
Staff Reporter

A blood drive aimed to help people in critical conditions takes place from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. today in the Butler Loft and the Spellmann Center Connection. The blood drive, sponsored by the American Human Student Association (AHSA), is administered by the Red Cross Society. Those that signed up for the event, as well as others who did not pre-register, can go up today and Thursday to see if they qualify to donate blood. Donors must fulfill certain requirements, which will be given at the sign up venue.

The blood drive will be held in the Butler Loft and Spellmann Center Connection from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. today and Thursday.

This blood drive normally takes place each semester. The faculty advisor of the AHSA, Professor Jack Beckerle, said the aim of this blood drive is to get 100 pints of blood donated to the Red Cross Society.

The previous summer semester one-day blood drive had an aim of 90 pints but got 100 pints donated; however, more donations are expected today and tomorrow, with totals of up to 100-120 pints of blood.

The public is also encouraged to take part in today's blood drive.

People not able to participate in the blood drive will have the opportunity to do so on the Friday before homecoming, as a bus from the Red Cross Society will be on campus.

and a lack of application for candidacy, the election was pushed back to this week.

As of Sept. 8, only five students applied for the senate, Swisher said.

But by Friday, Sept. 17, the count of applicants was 15.

Cox attributes the lack of applicants to problems with getting the word out about the election. "We've had a lot of issues trying to send out a mass e-mail to all students," Cox said. "The I.T. department is working on trying to fix it as soon as possible."

In the meantime, Swisher said that there will be other ways students can find out about the election and the candidates before they vote. "We will have posters going up with pictures of the candidates on them around campus after the submission process is complete," Swisher said in the Spellmann Center.

"The big display case outside the [cafeteria] is being converted for Student Activities messages, so students will be able to find all of the important info there," Cox said.

After the election results are finalized and the members take office, students will be able to contact them on the LSGA website through a link found under the Student Development tab on Lindenwood's home page or by attending LSGA weekly meetings.

Meetings are open to all students and occur each Tuesday at 4 p.m. in the Spellmann Center's fourth floor Anheuser Busch Leadership room.

With the new addition of the LSGA senate, Lindenwood joins other local area universities in having a

"It will be a great help to have student input on a lot of aspects."

Director of Student Activities

The Lindenwood website calendar also has the LSGA senate elections as an event, where students can click on the link to find out more about the election.

"Students can also go to Orgsync's website and sign up for the LSGA group," Cox said. "It's a really simple way to stay connected to campus activities and be updated on the senate procedures."

Orgsync is an Internet website designed for colleges that helps connect campus groups by having all of the organizations information in one location. To sign up for an Orgsync account, go to their website www.orgsync.com.

Click the register button in the top right corner, and then type Lindenwood University into the search bar. Click the green register button, and proceed to fill in information accordingly.

Then search for which campus organization is desired under the tab "Join an Org." Simply click join to become a member of the group.

The senate election results will be posted in the display case outside of the cafeteria senate as part of their student government system. Washington University, St. Louis University, Fontbonne University and Maryville University all have student senates as part of their government programs.

Washington University and St. Louis University also have judicial branches that make up their three part student associations.

Future plans are also in the works for the continued expansion of LSGA in forming a specialized Campus Activity Board.

"This board will strictly work on planning campus activities and concerts, as opposed to being involved in advocacy and event planning," Cox said. "They will have more of a narrow focus to help better serve the campus."

Cox said that students interested in executive officer positions for the Campus Activity Board are encouraged to contact the Student Activities office to apply or for more information.

"Any good private university would have an attractive residence for the president and his or her family," Evans said.

"It meets an expectation for higher education universities."

Several universities statewide – including Maryville, St. Louis and Central Missouri in Warrensburg – provide housing on campus for their presidents or chancellors.

"The most important benefit of having the president and his spouse live on campus is there will be more opportunities for them to be involved with the students in campus life and at various events," Evans said.
