Cottrell Hired as Intern in UNODC

Kaitlin Cottrell (International Business/Gender Studies, 2016) was recently hired as an intern at the UNODC (United Nations Office of Drugs and Crime) in Austria working in their Gender Office. She credits her Gender Studies minor as one of the main reasons she was invited to interview. Kaitlin's internship responsibilities include writing reports, newsletters, and social media posts about the importance of gender mainstreaming and the empowerment of women. Kaitlin will also learn how the UN implements policies and systems that deal with international drug trafficking, human trafficking, terrorism, drug abuse, and cybercrime.

In a recent conversation with Dr. Heather Brown-Hudson, Cottrell said, "The Gender Studies minor prepared me for an international internship at this global organization by giving me the tools to view the world from a perspective that questions societal norms surrounding gender and emphasizes the importance of women's empowerment around the world. Because of this, I am now able to assist my organization in gender mainstreaming on a global scale and help make real change happen."

Neon Trees Concert Discounted Tickets for Faculty and Staff

Faculty and staff, are invited to attend the Neon Trees concert on Sept. 19 at 8 p.m. in the J. Scheidegger Center's Lindenwood Theater. Advancement and Communications Launches New Brand Portal

Advancement and Communications is proud to release the updated brand identity for Lindenwood University. Members of the university community can now access the all new brand portal, which features the new brand guidebook as well as brand elements that offices, individuals, groups, and clubs can use to create various promotional materials.

Beyond the visual changes, this also marks a change in the Advancement and Communications process for how projects will be submitted, tracked, and ultimately completed. A Project Request Form is available, and users can choose from a variety of different project requests, including creative ideation, marketing piece creation, press release and story coordination, item submission to the Digest, and change requests to the website.

A new University Digest page has also been implemented. Please review this page for information on how to make a submission, what is a good fit for the Digest, and common mistakes to look out for when submitting information.

Attended by a select group of higher education leaders from leading universities and think tanks, the group collaborated on cutting-edge innovations applied to problems of practice and leadership.

MOMENTS

Today's Q2 Moment recognizes D'eJa Hayes, a counselor in Student Financial Services! One of D'eJa's colleagues from the Business Office said this:

"D'eJa ALWAYS goes above and beyond with assisting me with any questions I have regarding any of the students I work with. Some are even students she usually does not work with. She always does it with a smile, too. If I have any question on whether or not a student can get an increase in her loans or if they are eligible for any other type of grant/loan, D'eJa will always take time to give me the details on whether or not the student is eligible. I can call her up with five different questions and she will give me answers, and if she cannot, she will take the time to ask another source to get me the answers. I love that she's a team player and is willing to go above and beyond so we are able to meet the student's needs together."

Faculty Colloquium - Sept. 24

Faculty Colloquium in association with Rough Cuts

Through the Cracks a Ben Scholle documentary

Film Reviewer Diane Carson writes that "(Scholle) examines a particularly heinous crime: Johnny Johnson's murder of six-year-old Cassandra Williamson, July 26, 2002, in Valley Park, and details this murder-in-the-first degree case as it travels through the justice system."

Ben Scholle (Producer, Director, Cinematographer, Editor) has been a professor in the Cinema Department at Lindenwood University since 2002. His previous feature documentary, HairKuTT (2006), screened at a number of festivals and was shown at MoMA, and aired on BET and the Documentary Channel.
