Lindenwood AERho Hosts the Best in Radio

By Wendy Brotherlin

The Lindenwood Chapter of Alpha Epsilon Rho, the National Broadcasting Society, was the host chapter for the National AERho Convention which ran April 1-4 this year, at the Clarion Hotel in Downtown St. Louis. Alpha Epsilon Rho, started in 1947 at Columbia University, is the national broadcasting organization which is found on over 200 campuses in the United States. Representatives from AERho chapters across the country participated in the convention seminars and activities.

A special seminar offered at the AERho Convention was Career Focus where students opted for jobs and advice from such St. Louis professionals as Casey Van Allen, production director for KMOX/KHTR; Karen Carroll, vice president and general manager of KYKY radio station; Karen Vail, radio personality from KHTR radio station; Michael Hardgrove, president of the St. Louis Regional Education and Public Television Commission and general manager of the commission's KETC-TV, and many others.

The highlight of the convention was a seminar conducted by Gordon Jump from the television show "WKRP in Cincinnati." In his seminar, titled "How to Program Your Computer--

Portrait of a Blonde

by Denise Lefebvre

How many people do you know that get drunk?...OK, a few, but on Diet Pepsi?...I know a couple, but one in particular, a blonde.

How many people do you know that don't have much common sense about everyday things?...OK, a few, but someone with a 3.7 grade point average?...I know of one in particular, a blonde.

How many people do you know that trip over air?...No, it isn't a typo! I said "air!"...You don't know anyone like that?...Well, I do, a blonde.

As Lindenwood students, we are sincerely disappointed in the way the LSG elections were publicized and run. For example, no written notification of elections was given to the student body, except for a few scattered posters in select areas around the campus. Arcenia Pilgram, a candidate for resident senator, found out that she was eligible to run for office three and one-half hours before the petitions were due. For an activity of such great importance as those leading our student body, it should have been more widely publicized. Current LSG President, Joe Arnold, agreed that the elections were poorly publicized.

Also, through no fault of the LindenWorld staff, LSG elections were not printed in the March 16 issue of the LindenWorld. Activities posted were acquired from Marilyn Morris because the LSG calendar is still on October.

In order to heighten student awareness, we feel LSG constitutions should be given to all students so there is no conflict about those eligible to run for office, for example the College Life Chairmanship. Money for the student copies should be funded from the LSG budget. Most importantly, because of a lack of knowledge and communication, concerning the College Life Chairmanship position, Wednesday's election had to be voided. This mistake was senseless. Instead of re-voting for all the offices, only that position for which the mistake was made should be re-voted.

We are not trying to cause trouble by downgrading our student government or any of the candidates for office. We are concerned. Our goal is to inform the students of the problems that exist and promote interest in LSG. All students are invited to attend any LSG meeting. We hope you will attend and let your voice be heard.

A BACCHUS (Boosting Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students) is forming at Lindenwood. This group is not about prohibiting alcohol but encouraging responsible drinking, alleviating alcohol abuse, creating self-awareness about alcohol's affect on mind and body and aiding individuals in making decisions about the responsible use or non-use of alcohol and helping them to be more comfortable with the decisions they have chosen.

Any faculty, staff or students interested in learning more about BACCHUS are invited to attend a meeting at the student center this Sunday at 7 p.m. Refreshments will be provided.

How many people do you know who are ticklish?...OK, almost everyone is ticklish, but how about people who say that they're not ticklish yet they jump around and can't hold their laughter when they are tickled?...Yes, I do know someone and you?...You do?...A few?...And they are blonde?...Yes, the one I know is blonde too.

Yes, for each question I have the same person in mind...yes, one person has all of these characteristics! I know the probability of this is very distant, but it happened!...Yes, I know this person very well!...Why do I hang around with her? Well, someone has to help straighten her out and keep her out of trouble! She's quite a handful at times, too. Sometimes I wonder why (and how) we get along so well.

Purple, unicorns, and teddy bears are our favorites, and we both love food, too. We enjoy the same shows and like the same people. We do disagree on some things, however, like how much homework we should (need to) do, how loud the t.v. or radio should be, and if the t.v. or radio should even be on. These things are trivial.

We have been called "twins" before. Sometimes we have the tendency to wear the same type of outfit, say the same thing at the same time, and even think the same thing at once! We start conversations in the middle, confusing everyone else, but knowing exactly what the other is thinking.

She doesn't attend many parties, but when she does, she arms herself with a can of Diet Pepsi. Most parties crave beer, Purple Passion, Long Island Tea, strawberry daiquiris, rum and coke, or wine coolers. My blonde friend also gets these cravings, but instead for Diet Pepsi. A Diet Pepsi attack once caused her to search all over campus for a can. She tried every possibility to obtain just a mouthful of this substance, even going as far as trying to find someone to walk uptown at midnight just to buy a can. Diet Pepsi is an illegal beverage when in this blonde's possession. Half a can sends her into the unmistakable actions of a lush.

She is like the sister I never had. We both have the same morals and stick to them. I can talk to her about anything and not be embarrassed because I know she can keep a secret. (Even though she is blonde!) She supports everything I do and vice versa. It's so nice to know someone is behind you, even when you make a tragic mistake!

In my room a note was left saying that she had my keys and meal ticket and would meet me in the cafeteria for dinner. This showed her lack of common sense since I couldn't have gotten into the room to see the note unless I hand my keys to get into the room! A student with a 3.7 grade point average, like herself, should have enough common sense to realize this. However, she also tries to walk out into the hall almost everytime I am changing in my room, blind to the fact that I am indecent. She only realizes her actions after opening the door and having me scream at her or telling me where she will be going and having me call my predicament to her attention.

We never have fought yet and we tease each other all the time. Well, we argued once, but I was sick and when I finally stopped yelling we both laughed (so that doesn't count). We both know when to quit teasing and also what to tease about!

Many times my blonde friend has unconsciously made a very funny joke. Being naive has caused her to "open her mouth and insert her foot" on many occasions which results in endless teasing with such "symbols" as "mousse," a "snap," and "M&M's." For example, she swears that M&M's taste different when there aren't red ones. Now, since red M&M's are back, a box of M&M's, on the whole, taste much better. She takes a lot of ribbing since she's the only one who feels this way.

This blonde is always there for me. Through my problems, a dry shoulder and a listening ear are lent to my convenience. She always knows: the right things to say!...How to make me smile and laugh!...What questions not to ask!...How to change the subject before I get upset!...When to criticize before I make a fool of myself!...When to listen and when to advise!...How to reason with me when I lose my temper! She always knows!

Sure, I know someone who is a dork!...You guessed it, a blonde.

I also know someone who is addicted to the funnies!...A blonde?...Of course!

Someone who loves popcorn, Lion's Choice roast beef sandwiches, and Imo's Italian sausage sandwiches with cheese garlic bread?...Sure, I know two people...No, I don't have to think about it at all...of course I'm sure...How?...Because one of them is me and the other...Yes, the blonde...Who?...Why?...Are you curious?...I guess I'll tell you. You'll find out sooner or later...When?...Now?...OK...The blonde is my best friend, someone I truly respect...(I know she's not that blonde, but I have to tease her about something!)

To Honor Students

By Reid Kirby

The One Between Your Ears," Jump discussed positive thinking exercises that aid in personal success and good self-esteem.

As Master of Ceremonies for the National Alpha Epsilon Rho Awards Ceremony, Jump presented various AERho awards and scholarships to deserving individuals and chapters. The National AERho President, Al Albarran handed the honorary gavel to the new president and the executive secretary Dr. Richard M. Uray also stepped down from his office. The Awards Banquet ended on a high note as over 500 AERho members participated in a dance held in the Clarion Hotel Ballroom.

By Sunday afternoon the last of the AERhoers were checked out of the hotel and homeward bound, and many underclassmen left with hopes of "doing it all again" at next year's convention in New York City.

On Sunday, April 26, Lindenwood College will recognize outstanding student achievement. At 7:30 p.m. in Jelkyl Theater some two dozen awards will be given to students as a community recognition event. Honors Day allows the community to get together and recognize some of the outstanding achievements of Lindenwood's students.

In past years attendance has averaged some 150 faculty, staff, students, and family, but this year the event's planners would like to see a larger audience. They say this event is not only for those receiving the awards, but also for others to see their friend's moment of pride.

The awards are presented in one of three categories: performance, creative leadership, and scholarship. Some students already know they have been selected for an award but others will not know until that night.

This year a new award will be presented. It's the Russell Crider Pre-Health Professional scholarship. Professor John Bornmann, chairman of Lindenwood's chemistry department, named this award in honor of Jane Crider's late husband. Bornmann initially gave money to form the award and also conducted a fund-raising campaign for it. Bornmann said he worked to found the award because, "Pre-med students have been pleasant students, and generous alumni." He also said that they are the type of students he would like to see in his classes, and is proud of them at graduation. Furthermore, he wants to encourage other students to seek a pre-med degree.

The Russell Crider Pre-Health Professional scholarship is not restricted by department of study for those who wish to apply for it.

Girls Soccer Team Shows It's Still the Best

By Kelley Wright

Lindenwood's nationally ranked Lady Lions participated in the Women's All-College Indoor Tournament this past weekend at Dellwood Soccer Club.

The Lady Lions played a very tough schedule. Not only did they play six games in three days, but they were in the most difficult division.

The tournament kicked off against Rolla. The Lions pulled away with an easy victory out scoring the Lady Miners 8-3. The Crook sisters said "We had total domination. Everyone played well." The Ladies discovered that their next game against Meramec was going to be a little more difficult. With only a few minutes left, Meramec was able to score two goals to tie up the game.

The third game against the University of Cincinnati was the highlight of the tournament. Kelly Mitchell, Lions goalie, said it was one of the best games they had ever played as a team. Mitchell was referring to freshman player Becky Stiegen who was unable to complete in season play due to eligibility problems. The Lions defeated Cincinnati 3-2. The first goal was scored by Becky Stiegen and the winning goal was scored by Stacy Croy.

The Lions easily defeated their next two opponents-MacMurray College and Maryville--and advanced into the finals to face the University of Cincinnati once again. The Lions lost to Cincinnati, but it was not because they were outplayed. "We were evenly matched, it came down to who got lucky and scored," said Janette Crook. The Lions held on tight, but Cincinnati was fortunate enough to score the winning goal in the last 39 seconds of the game.

All in all, the Ladies thought it was a successful weekend. Second place is nothing to be ashamed about. Right now all they want to do is recover from fatigue and injuries.

A "New Look" for the Lady Lions

By Donald E. Kaiser, Jr.

The Lady Lions are sporting a new look for the 1987 softball season. In fact, over half of this year's team was not on last year's team. The team is also younger. Nine of the 16 players are freshmen.

Along with the new look has come improvements from last year's team. Last year the softball team did not win a single game. This year they are 1-3. A major problem last year was pitching. "Last year we were forced to use people as pitchers who were not pitchers," said coach Linda White. The situation has changed this year with the addition of Denise Lefebvre, a freshman from St. Mary's Academy. She is a good pitcher with speed and accuracy. Lindenwood is also quick. This speed has been displayed this year with 13 stolen bases. The teams base running abilities has become a threat to opposing teams. This season's opposition has only been able to throw out stealing players twice.

The youthful and inexperienced Lady Lions are playing much better than they did a year ago. "They don't give up even when it looks like they're out of the game. Instead they start concentrating and playing harder," said coach White. A lot of this determination can be attributed to the commitment and desire of the players. Since Lindenwood's softball team is not sponsored by the college the team had to raise their own funds. Coach White praised Beth Neyman for her hard work to ensure there would be a softball team this year. "Beth wanted to play softball so she went out and got things going and organized," said White. None of the players on the softball team received scholarships for their participation. The commitment of the players has been a plus for the Lady Lions and it has impressed Coach White.

Lindenwood has a record of 1-3 which includes two doubleheaders. The Lady Lions split their games in the doubleheader with Hannibal-LeGrange College 11-1 and 3-13. In their victory

Becky Steigen and Denise Lefebvre both went 3 for 3. Steigen also had a homerun. The winning pitcher was Lefebvre.

Lindenwood did not fare as well against East Central Junior College, losing both games 2-3 and 0-10. In the doubleheader against Greenville College April 8, both games were lost 10-0 and 12-1.
