Choosing A College

THIS IS THE TIME of year when many young people are choosing a college. The wide variety of educational institutions makes the choice of just the right one difficult. How can one choose? What characteristics should one seek? We may ask first: Why does one go to college?

Answers will vary but probably will all be included among the following: Acquire new knowledge; Learn to think more clearly; To develop a sense of values; To acquire occupational training; In general, to mature and to develop into more useful citizens.

With these considerations in mind what shall one seek in a college?

Faculty—The faculty must be competent in training as evidenced by graduate study and degrees held. Of far greater importance, it must be composed of people of character and personality who are dedicated to the teaching of college under-graduates as an exciting profession. At least a few of its members should be the rarely encountered great teachers who are remembered always, long after the facts that they taught are forgotten.

Equipment—Library, laboratory, and classroom equipment, living quarters and campus facilities must be adequate for the program that is announced.

Standards—The student shall select a fully accredited college.

Stability—An institution with a substantial income from endowment would be able to maintain a stable program in spite of fluctuation in economic conditions.

Values—It is probably on the campus of the church-related, Christian college which is non-sectarian in its choice of faculty and instruction that the finest education is now going forward in the development of the sense of the values of life, of the dignity of the individual, and of his relationship to the creation.

Size—Some may feel there is stimulation in the impersonal relationships on the campus where there are 20,000 students. Others will feel the most effective teaching is done in a small college where the professor knows the student as a person rather than as a name on the roll. The late Prof. Cooley, of the University of Michigan once said: "Human teaching calls for an expense of spirit on each individual—possible only when there are few of them." Though the flare for size has for a season dominated our educational program, educators are recognizing that better work may be achieved in small groups. Witness the reorganization of Harvard University into eleven units and Yale into nine, accomplished at vast expense. In addition to providing a better teaching set-up, the smaller institution emphasizes the friendship between teacher and student, and the deeper the friendship between a good teacher and student, the more inspiration one draws from the other.

Guidance and placement—An adequate counseling program under the direction of an expert should be available upon the basis of information obtained from psychological and aptitude tests and close relationship with students. There are few places where the guidance and placement work of an institution is headed by one officer as it is at Lindenwood, but we feel there is advantage in having a student receive vocational guidance from the same person who places her when she is ready for a position.

A college for women—A program of study designed to meet the needs of a young woman can be best developed where her needs are the sole consideration. On the campus and in the classroom the students are drawn closer to the teacher and to the subject in hand where all the students are women. The women's college should not be a place where women are protected from the world or where they do not have opportunities for social contacts with young men, but it should be a place where the emphases of the curriculum will meet the needs peculiar to women. It should also be a place where, in contrast with some institutions in American life, women are given recognition commensurate with their abilities and services. A great university, for example, with women holding less than 2 per cent of the full professorships is obviously built and developed for the education of men and is a place where women students would seem to be guests.

Readers of this Bulletin are urged to recommend to the college worthy young women who will be entering college soon. Students considering Lindenwood are invited to visit the campus, that they may sense the spirit of the community, observe living quarters, and see the type of students who are here.

Lindenwood Expands Its Placement Program

By MISS MARY LICHLITER
Director of Guidance and Placement

A COLLEGE PLACEMENT service is built upon its graduates. I found this to be true when I began visiting various firms in St. Louis a year ago. As a representative of Lindenwood, I was welcomed because of former employees who had been Lindenwood graduates, or because of friends and relatives who had been at the college. Lindenwood has done teacher placement for many years, and the earliest requests for our Seniors last spring came from superintendents who know the competency of Lindenwood graduates.

Thus it is fitting for the new Office of Guidance and Placement to make its report to the alumnae of Lindenwood and to ask for their support and cooperation. The report of the class of 1949 will be found on page five. Some of these students were placed through the newly created Office of Placement. Others have found positions through their own efforts. Yet for them, also, the Office of Placement provided a centralized clearing-house for full credentials, and the opportunity of discovering "job leads" through various national directories or alumnae contacts. For both groups, we in Placement, in cooperation with the English Department, stood ready to help in the preparation of application letters, data sheets, and other job hunting techniques. A college placement office does not guarantee "jobs for all." The record a student makes may be of a quality that "guarantees" a job. The Placement Office is primarily a service bureau to help students discover employment possibilities and how best to "market" themselves for the employment world. We do not "campaign" in the interest of any individual student; we try to serve the interests of all students by describing to potential employers the competent training and broad educational background of the Lindenwood student.

We want to look now, to a larger group—the former Lindenwood student whose loyalty embraces the college whether she was with us one year or four. We need her help in developing a requisition file of employers who have a place in their firms for the college-trained woman and who would be interested in listing their vacancies with us.

We are asking also an additional service of the degree student. Lindenwood is proud of its four-year graduates and of the positions of leadership and responsibility which many have held. Consequently, the Office of Placement covets the help they can give to further our work in the more general area of vocational counseling. Within a month, they will receive a questionnaire which it is hoped they will answer as fully as possible in order that we may have: (1) a complete file of the positions held by the alumnae group and (2) an honest and frank evaluation of their college life. We are anxious to extend our placement service to all alumnae desiring employment. Our contacts are increasing and there have been inquiries this year about candidates for positions both in the teaching and business fields for which we have not been able to suggest applicants. Thus we need a backlog of registrants so that interested employers are not turned away empty-handed.

The standard of a successful placement program is set out in the following quotation from "School and College Placement":

"Through discovery of individual aptitudes and inclinations in the precollege and freshman years and by the expert applications of these findings to the selection of courses of study, educational guidance counselors are able to lay a firm foundation for career determination and successful placement."

This statement of Gordon A. Hardwich, president of the Association of School and College Placement, indicates a standard for an integrated guidance and placement service. The following services afforded to the student by Lindenwood College illustrate how the college meets this standard:

Admissions Counselors who are vocationally "oriented" and able to show to the prospective student the occupational opportunities open to the college woman.

A faculty counselor for every ten students, which makes for a highly individualized guidance program.

An adequate testing program in the Freshmen and Sophomore years, supplemented in the last two years with individual tests of ability, aptitude and interest.

An adequate budget so that these services are available to every student.

Vocational counseling centered in the Office of Placement, complete with up-to-date files on occupational opportunities for women and job trends.

Cumulative records maintained in the Office of Guidance and Placement in order that the Director may utilize the full four-year record in placing graduates.

Close personal cooperation between the Director of Placement and the major advisors.

Girl of the Month

WE PRESENT as the Girl of the Month, Margaret Cannon, A. B., 1943, from Louisville, Ky., in a field not covered before.

She began work as a writer in the Continuity department of Radio Station WGRC, where she spent 15 months as a staff writer, discovering that she wanted to work and study all phases of broadcasting. The next two years slipped by, filled with broadcasting assignments, and an 18-month run of writing, producing, and broadcasting her own radio show six times a week for a furniture and interior decorating house.

In March 1947, Radio Station WKYW offered her the position of continuity editor. Her duties included writing shows and commercials, editing copy, copy acceptance, handling agency copy, management of the department and occasional air work. All in all—21 months of hard work, study and the thrilling experience of being a part of a radio station as it came into being and boomed to success.

Last year everyone started talking television, and she decided to go into the industry before the time when many radio people will be forced to do so. Southern Television Productions opened its Package House and Television Workshop of the South in Louisville, and she enrolled for night classes in television production. There followed 16 long weeks of eight-hour radio days at WKYW.

In mid-December she left WKYW and joined the staff of Southern Television Productions to write the television shows it packages, and to instruct others in the course she had just completed. When they received approval to train veterans under the G. I. Bill, she found herself Director of Training in a bustling school with a large enrollment. Her work included scheduling classes, instructing classes in Writing for Television, Advertising, and Basic Television Production, arranging training aids, preparing exams, serving as faculty advisor for various student social functions, and organizing class material for a new branch school in Knoxville, Tennessee.

However, when the main office moved to Knoxville, she decided to stay at home and go home to radio, the branch of the industry that had never quite worked itself out of her blood despite the excitement and new glamour of television. A former employer estimated that she has written about twelve million "selling words" in the past half-dozen years, so she decided she would like to attempt some spoken selling words in behalf of radio. Results were that she returned to WKYW in September as a Commercial Representative—the only woman radio time salesman in that area. She talked her way through some dozen interviews per day—selling radio, selling WKYW, selling programs and spot announcements to advertisers. Hers is a job centering around ideas—new ideas to enable WKYW to sell any local advertiser's merchandise or service to the public.

Dr. McCluer Named President of Recreation Association

Dr. Franc L. McCluer, Lindenwood's president, has been elected president of the Daniel Boone Recreation Association. The association, which was formed recently, is composed of community leaders in nine counties in Missouri bordering on the historic Boone's Lick road from St. Charles to Boonville (now U. S. Highway 40). The association will promote recreational facilities and activities in the Daniel Boone region.

Color Pictures of Cobbs Hall In St. Louis Newspaper

A full page of rotogravure pictures in color of Lindenwood's newest building, Cobbs Hall, appeared in the Sunday St. Louis Globe-Democrat on February 12.

Miss Pearl Walker to Teach at Columbia University

Miss Pearl Walker, a member of Lindenwood's music faculty, will teach at the summer session of Columbia University in New York City. Miss Walker recently signed a contract to teach voice in the Teachers College of the university. She will teach 20 hours a week during the six-weeks summer term, and will sing a concert as part of the faculty's concert series.

Lindenwood Alumna Is Author of Book on Arizona Life

Another name has been added to the growing list of Lindenwood authors. Mrs. Beecher McConnell, who was Roberta McElhiney and attended Lindenwood in 1934-35, has written a book entitled "The Ranger's Wife," just published by Prentice-Hall. She has also written articles for "Coronet" and "Field and Stream."

Art Department Is Represented In Wichita Graphic Arts Show

Miss Dorothy Walker, Senior, of Grand Island, Neb., and editor of the 1950 Linden Leaves, was represented in the recent Graphic Arts Exhibit at Wichita, Kan. Her entry was a black and white lithograph of a Negro model. Prof. John Middents, of the fine arts faculty, won honorable mention in the show with his colored lithograph, "Landscape with Red Pony."

Two Members of Faculty Address Missouri U. Conference

Two members of Lindenwood's faculty were featured as speakers at the annual Career Conference sponsored by the Women's Association of the University of Missouri at Columbia, Mo., on February 16 and 17. Dr. Alice Parker, head of the English Department, spoke on "Creative Writing."

Charles C. Clayton, head of the Journalism Department, had as his topic "News and Allied Fields for Women." The conference was open to all women in the university.

More News From and About Members of the Class of 1939

By KATHRYN HANKINS, Alumnae Secretary

THIS month we complete the roll call of the Class of 1939. The following members have responded to our request for news about themselves and their activities:

Sara Margaret Willis (Mrs. Fred J. English), R. R. No. 1, Bourbonnais, Ill.: "My only occupation since leaving Lindenwood has been that of a housewife. Most of my L. C. friends know that I married Fred English who was my 'steady' during my four years at college. We live on a 320 acre farm seven miles from Kankakee, owned by my father and operated by Fred. Our lives are very much involved with two active boys, Jon 7, and Jack, 5. Both Fred and I are active in the Kankakee Methodist Church, and the Kankakee Civic Music Assn. (of which Fred is now president). With a few other civic and social organizations, I'm kept busy."

Wilma Conner (Mrs. David M. Belt), Munsfordville, Ky.: "After leaving Lindenwood, I worked part time as secretary for a title and trust company in Elizabethtown. I was married in the fall of '42 to David Meryl Belt who was in the Navy. We lived in Morehead, Ky., for five months, and then he was sent overseas. Our son, David, Jr., was born in October of '43 and was 15 months-old when Meryl returned to the States. We then lived in Memphis, Tenn., and Dickinson, Tex. Meryl was discharged in the fall of '45 and returned to Dental School in Louisville, Ky. We lived there while he completed school. Our daughter, Wilma Anne, was born in August of '48. We are now happily located in Munsfordville, where Meryl is practicing dentistry."

Virginia Carter (Mrs. Eugene McGaughey), 1108 South Main St., Carthage, Mo.: "Five months after my graduation from Lindenwood, I was married to my high school sweetheart. We have four children — Stephen, 8½; Patricia, 5½; John, 3; and Mary Carole, 4 months. My husband has the Chrysler-Plymouth agency here in Carthage. Besides looking after my home and family, I manage to keep busy with the usual church work, a study club, and P.T.A. My career may not be as exciting as some, but I find my life satisfying."

Rosemary Williams (Mrs. James R. Thomas), 2117 Hall St., S. E., Grand Rapids, Mich.: "Jim and I were married in the fall of 1940. After five years in Chicago, we are now living in Western Michigan where Jim is a manufacturers' agent. A business course which I took the year following graduation, has enabled me to act as his secretary. We travel a great deal through this section and enjoy our 'nomadic' life."

Alice Belding (Mrs. Kermit Westerfeld), 1255 Hornsby St., St. Louis, Mo.: "After graduation from Lindenwood, I taught school in Silex, Mo., for one year. On June 22, 1940, I married my school-days sweetheart, and we moved to St. Louis where he started his dental practice. During the last war, he served in the Navy, and we were stationed for sixteen months at Farragut, Idaho. Upon his return, we built our present home and office building in North St. Louis. We have two children; Gene, 8, and Arleen, 4. I still play the piano occasionally for church and school activities. I have had a Brownie Scout Troop for several years which I find interesting and stimulating."

Virginia Stern, 2000 North Harrison St., Little Rock, Ark.: "After leaving Lindenwood, I went to the University of Arkansas Medical School where I studied medical technology, and I became a Registered Medical Technologist in 1941. Soon after the war started, I enlisted in the WAVES. I was stationed in the laboratory of the United States Naval Hospital at More Island, Calif., until September of 1945. At present, I am working as a medical technologist in the Pathology Department Laboratory of the University of Arkansas Medical School in Little Rock. Outside of work, I am a member of the Arkansas Society of Medical Technologists and the Little Rock Society of Medical Technologists and am secretary-treasurer of the Little Rock society this year."

Jane Knudson (Mrs. Victor L. Erickson), 538 Flora St., Laguna Beach, Calif.: "After I obtained a college degree, I returned to Minnesota and had my own daily radio show over KATE called 'Fashion Interlude.' I married Victor L. Erickson, Major in U.S.M.A.C. August 31, 1944. We settled in Laguna Beach a couple of months thereafter. On March 11, 1948, I opened my own shop called 'Jane Eric Originals,' where I do my own designing. I have been commentator at weekly fashion shows every Saturday for a year at Hotel Laguna, occasionally sharing the microphone with such famous local residents and guests as Barbara Britton, Jack Bailey of 'Queen for a Day' fame, Bette Davis, and Victor Mature. I have been fortunate in having the opportunity to design for the various casts of the Laguna Beach Community Playhouse, which you may have read about in Life Magazine this summer, as well as for many of the actresses and personnel from the Hollywood studios. I am now in the process of going into manufacturing fashions designed in the Californian manner under the name 'Jane Eric Originals, Laguna Beach, Calif.'
