VOL. FOUR, NO. 22; JAN. 28, 1986

FACULTY MEMBER CITED - Arlene Taich, dean of the Evening College/LCIE, is one of two recipients of the "Rising Star of the Future" award, an annual presentation by B'nai B'rith Women which cites outstanding service. Selected from among 150,000 members of the Jewish women's federation, Taich will be honored at a special ceremony March 26 during the group's international biennial convention at the Las Vegas Hilton Hotel.

According to Beverly Davis, president of the Washington, DC-based B'nai B'rith Women, Taich was selected for the prestigious honor as one "who has made a mark" in her chosen career. "The award is to honor her as a woman who has successfully blended both volunteer and professional careers, and we want to recognize her achievements in both areas," she said.

Active with senior citizen organizations and the rights of the elderly, Taich also is in charge of the college's gerontology programs and is executive director of its Institute for Intergenerational Studies, the multifaceted educational, cultural and research complex being constructed as part of the Lindenwood Village project.

1986 HOLIDAY SCHEDULE - The President's Council has approved this year's holiday schedule, and it calls for another paid holiday than the 1985 one - Labor Day. College offices will be closed on these dates.

McLINDENWOOD COLLEGE? - Lindenwood has entered into a contract with the regional headquarters of McDonald's Corp. in west St. Louis County to provide noncredit workshops this semester to corporate employees of the fast-food chain. Currently, 25 students are enrolled in a business writing skills course being taught by N. Jean Fields, associate professor of communications and English. Offered in three 8-hour sessions this semester, the workshop stresses business writing and English composition skills, two areas that McDonald's said its employees needed. Although the workshop is a non-credit one, continuing educational credit will be awarded with a certificate to those who complete the 24-hour session, said Arlene Taich, dean of the Evening College/LCIE and organizer of the program.

BOARD MEMBERS CITED - Kenneth W. Thompson, Ph.D., director of the Miller Center of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia and a member of the college's board of directors, recently presented the keynote address in Paris, France, at the annual meeting of the International Association of Political Science.
