February is Heart Health Month

It is February - which means, Heart Health month is here!

A couple of things – we made through a miserable weather January, which is awesome, and now we are able to dive into another month full of new opportunities, challenges, and events!!

I am attaching a calendar that covers the events AND the challenges happening during the month! Take a look and print it off for your desk to help keep track! You can follow along with this calendar on your own time. Once you have completed the challenge, please send it to mgove@lindenwood.edu. Then, we will be sending you the promo code for Interactive Health so you can get your points upon completion.

If you are not on Lindenwood's insurance, no worries, we are still handing out Wellbucks for completed challenges/events - Just be sure to email me your completed calendar, so I can get you your Wellbucks.

Let's kick off this month with some positivity and open mindsets! We are able to achieve ANYTHING we put our minds to!

As always, stay happy and hydrated (and warm)!

Love,
The LindenWell Team

Not on the LindenWell distribution list but interested? Please email mgove@Lindenwood.edu to be added!

A Long Labor of Love: Long River

Today is Chinese New Year, a fitting time to share about Long River, a translation of selected poems by contemporary Chinese poet Yang Jian. A long labor of love, the collaborative translation process was led by Ye Chun (assistant professor, Providence College, English) and Gillian Parrish (assistant professor, Lindenwood University, MFA in Writing program). In addition to word by word and line by line edits (over many years, filling many binders!), Parrish led in distilling the manuscript from 200 pages to 100 pages, culling and arranging the poems, so that the book presents “the best wor[ks] in the best order” (to misquote Coleridge). Parrish also wrote the book’s introductory essay on Yang Jian’s elegiac, ecopoetic vision of China’s fast-changing land and culture.
