Drs. Rik Hafer and William Rogers Research Economic Growth in Missouri

During a recent presentation at the Show-Me Institute, Dr. Rik Hafer and Dr. William Rogers presented the findings of their recent study into the state's long-running lack of robust economic activity and Missouri's "Missing Million."

According to their research, Since the moon landing 50 years ago, one million people have gone missing from Missouri. Had Missouri's population growth rate simply kept pace with the national average, it would be home to 1.2 million more people today. Missouri's economic growth has been so slow that it ranks among the worst in the country.

In addition, their research findings were distributed last week to newspaper editors statewide in the form of an Op-Ed piece (Policy Reforms for a Better Prosperity), and their work was cited in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch on May 10 by David Nicklaus, a columnist for the business section.

Hafer is a professor of economics, and Rogers is an associate professor of economics in the Plaster School of Business & Entrepreneurship. Hafer also serves as director of the Center for Economics and the Environment in the Hammond Institute for Free Enterprise, and Rogers also serves in the capacity of senior research fellow on behalf of the Hammond Institute and formerly orchestrated the university's Langenberg Speaker Series.
