Lindenwood will be on the Alert

A Definition of the College's Objectives and Participation In World War Number Two Written With an Eye on the Future

By Dr. Harry Morehouse Gage

PRESIDENT OF LINDENWOOD COLLEGE

IN THE World War II, Lindenwood looks immediately to the winning of the war and forward to the winning of the peace. We are on the alert. No one on this campus in the immediate future and in the post-war period will be

"An idle looker-on and nothing more;
Indifferent and amused and nothing more."

Each event of the tragic passing show is labeled, This means you. Each prospect of the peace to come beckons and calls, For this you must labor, For this prepare—This is for you, your children, and children's children.

The universe is a totality. The war is universal. The war is total. From the war, as from the universe itself, there are no exceptions. Of the war each one must say what Walt Whitman said of the world in which he lived:

"I am partner in this universe
And all mixed up in its motions."

The campus is not an academic retreat from reality. It is not an erratic dream-world. It is more like a Jacob's ladder which reaches to the heavens above and rests on solid earth beneath.

In a badly shaken world the college is witness to an immovable and unchanging reality. Our students and teachers do not feel that a crack has gone right through creation and that everyone is sinking into boundless, bottomless empty space. There are things that endure amid "the wreck of matter and the crash of worlds!" Lindenwood on the alert teaches no hopeless surrender—

"The world is out of joint; O cursed spite,
That ever I was born to set it right."

It rather teaches a glad and courageous response to the challenge of today and tomorrow:

Now God be thanked, who hath matched us with his hour.

General Hershey, Director of Selective Service, said to college executives in Baltimore in January: "I have no difficulty in persuading men to go to the fields of battle. My real difficulty is to persuade a hundred million people that staying is just as important as going." Lindenwood will carry on. A sentinel remaining on duty at his post, Lindenwood will be on the alert.

Is man a child of God? Is he a cog in the world machine, or a political and economic machine? In answer to those questions a world war rages. Lindenwood teaches that men are God's children. In that belief and in no other the war will be won on fields of battle and in peace conferences. A stream never rises higher than its source. The fighting force of a people at war never transcends that belief which is the source of strength, courage, endurance, self-sacrifice, and inspiration. In this crisis Lindenwood will be found at its post and on the alert. It will be on the side of the church, your church and mine, the church of the founding fathers of this Republic, the church universal, invisible, and invincible, the church that regards men as God's children and teaches that over the human soul is no earthly sovereign.

In time of war priorities must be imposed and accepted. "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things will be added unto you." Regard for the triumph of righteousness and for men as God's children requires that our schools have absolute and immediate priority. Our people and their leaders have affirmed it. Our democracy depends on it. A country at war preserves and develops its resources. Seed corn is protected and planted. Boys and girls are the seed corn of our nation. Schools are gardens wherein they grow. Lindenwood is such a garden. It will, so to speak, raise its very best crop in time of war. It will accept the priority imposed on it. It will not be diverted from its purpose. It will not be moved from its first and proper place in the national economy. It will mind its business carefully and patriotically.

Students in Lindenwood are citizens. I like to address them as my fellow citizens. In Lindenwood, students will be taught without apology to respect the United States of America and their privileges of citizenship, to respect our courts of law and executive officers, to take a responsible part in determining legislation, to understand the origin of our democracy, to know our Constitution, and without little-minded criticism to love our nation passionately, with constancy and the devotion that leads to sacrifice. Our country at war and in peace requires such teaching. Our college charter requires the development of the "national

Ruth Dayton Is Crowned Popularity Queen at Victory Ball

Polly Pollock and Ruth Haines Are Maids of Honor at Coronation Ceremony in Gaily Decorated Butler Gymnasium

Hail to the Queen!

IN A court appropriately decorated with Lindenwood's colors of yellow and white, Miss Ruth Dayton, Lindenwood senior from Ottumwa, Iowa, was crowned Popularity Queen on February 20. Miss Polly Pollock, of Tulsa, was chosen as her first maid of honor and Miss Ruth Haines, of Rivermines, Mo., as second maid of honor. With the other nominees for queen, they made up the Court of Honor.

The annual coronation ceremony was held in Butler Gymnasium. As the hour of the coronation approached, two buglers announced the coming of the Court. Member of Alpha Sigma Tau, bearing yellow streamers, made a pathway between the lines of students through which the royal party advanced to the throne. In the royal party in addition to the new queen and her maids of honor were Miss Margaret Chapman, the retiring queen, Miss Grace Quebbeman, Miss Kathryn Anderson, Miss Ruth Schrader, Miss Harriet Dillman, Miss Ruthe Shartel, Miss Rosemary Edminster, and Miss Carol Bindley.

The new queen was crowned by Miss Pollock and then received her subjects. Then the grand march was formed and the ball continued. A high spot of the evening was the "V for Victory" dance demonstrated by two students.

mind." In this crisis Lindenwood will be alert to the performance of this duty.

Lindenwood students come from homes. They go forth to work and to found homes of their own. On the campus they find a college home. Here we are responsible to the homes from which our students come. We are also responsible for the quality of the homes our students will make in the future. Here is the exercise of a sacred responsibility. It touches the heart of each student. It determines the strength of the nation. General Grant was right when he said, "The American home is the sheet-iron guardian of American liberty." To the need of America for good homes and good homemakers Lindenwood will be "instant in duty." It will be alert.

These words define our duty. Lindenwood's program implements its purpose; it is realized in work and recreation, in democratic living, in inspiring public exercises, in classroom, and in campus life.

Miss Ruth Dayton, Lindenwood senior, who was crowned Popularity Queen at the annual ball on February 20. Her home is in Ottumwa, Iowa, and she is president of the Lindenwood Student Government Association.

Our Attitude Toward Latin American Culture — Past, Present and Future

Many Americans Are Becoming Aware for the First Time of the History and Culture of the Central and South American Nations. This Article by Dr. Hartwig Tells Why It Is Important to Know About our Neighbors

By Dr. Hellmut Arthur Hartwig
Modern Languages Department

ONCE upon a time, now it seems so very, very long ago, we of these United States felt vastly closer to the continent of Europe (especially if we happened to reside in the East) than, let us say, to our own western states, or to that quaint place down yonder below the Rio Grande, called (we remember vaguely from our history books) "Mexico" or something. To be truthful, our men of business knew about these countries to the south of us. Why, they had even been carrying on a brisk trade with Latin America for years. Business is business, you know. We would conduct business with the Zulus of darkest Africa. Why not with South and Central America? But as to relations beyond that! What could those benighted southern people offer us? True culture seemed available only in Europe. He who thirsted for true culture went to Europe, or if he could not travel thither, he at least kept intellectually tuned in on the European wavelength.

Above I have sketched ever so lightly our past general attitude toward Latin America, toward its people, its history and its culture. This is not to be construed as an indictment. I have simply stated facts. After all, it was only natural that a nation created by Europeans and their descendants should look back at the respective mother countries for additional manpower, for additional thought in every field, for cultural inspiration. But as the nation grew, so grew its ability to stand on its own feet. The culture of the United States has now ceased to be a mere cliché of European culture. Our people and our culture are becoming increasingly unique, that is, peculiar to this land; they are becoming—in short—American. In our justifiable pride, however, we must not forget that our neighbors to the south have paralleled step for step our own development, and are now also the proud possessors of a unique Latin American culture.

The present international situation has suddenly closed access to the customary European fountain-heads of culture. Perforce we are turning our eyes southward. The war has also deprived us of European markets, and so we now look for substitute markets in South and Central America. Those who search for culture there, are astounded to find such ample evidence of it. Those who look for new markets, suddenly see new and vast commercial potentialities.

The sudden interest in the study of Spanish on the part of our students is thus due to two principal factors: a new cultural interest and an intensified commercial interest in Spanish speaking America. Of these two factors the one most to influence students toward taking up the study of Spanish is, to be sure, our ever growing commercial interest in Latin America. Hence, Lindenwood College and the rest of our schools offering Spanish courses might seem compelled henceforth to emphasize that sort of written and conversational Spanish best suited to facilitate rapid and frictionless business relations between our respective countries. A great many schools (Lindenwood among them, I am quite certain) will, however, continue to stress the cultural over the business phase. Here is the reason.

Ignoring for the moment traditional influences, which would naturally urge us to continue our past stress on the cultural in language teaching, we as a nation have finally realized that we cannot do business with Latin Americans and at the same time establish friendly relations with them, unless we show them we

Brevity Is Watchword of Lindenwood Girls' Fan Mail

The following story, reprinted from the Linden Bark tells of an innovation in collegiate fan mail. Addressed to one student who was identified only by her picture, a letter was correctly delivered by the college post office

WE ARE aware of the fact that during these pressing days TIME is an important element, but who would guess brevity would reach right in and land in our own mail box? It all started when the Lindenwood Romeos began writing to their lady-loves omitting the name and putting only a box number for an address. In such an instance the delightful missive goes to the box of the college secretary who, upon opening it, realizes instantly a letter containing the endearing salutation "Beloved Angel" or "My Dearest Sweetheart" has not only got into the wrong church, but the wrong pew as well!

An amazing number of this sort of mail comes every day. The majority of them possess the box numbers that are printed in Lindenwood advertisements in the various magazines. At some boy's schools it is a popular fad to write notes to girls attending adjoining colleges using the same box number as they have.

Ruth Spiegel has received the cream of the crop for this year. During an air-raid practice her picture was taken with a group of other students and the pictures were published in several papers and magazines. One of the more daring Romeos at a neighboring Iowa college cut the picture out of a "Collegiate Digest" and pasted it on an envelope. He addressed it to Lindenwood College and drew a circle around Ruth's face with an arrow pointing to the words "This one." She confesses it was somewhat of a surprise, but with the help of her friends she answered her "fan-mail." She admits if this keeps up, considering the way assignments have been doubled, she will have to give up the idea of answering the fan letters that are sure to start pouring in any day now, and she'll have to hire a secretary.

This letter addressed only to Lindenwood was delivered to Miss Ruth Spiegel, who was identified by the picture pasted on the envelope.

Great Granddaughter of Alumna Enrolls at Lindenwood

Miss Mary Frances Morgan, of 3335 N. W. Nineteenth Street, Oklahoma City, Okla., has been enrolled as a member of next year's freshman class at Lindenwood.

Behind this announcement is an interesting bit of Lindenwood history, which goes back for several generations. On the campus is the grave of a Mrs. Cathryn A. Johns, who was the wife of J. Jay Johns. They had two daughters, both of whom attended Lindenwood.

One of the daughters, Louisa Johns, after three years at the college was married to William Morgan, a cattleman from the west. To them were born several sons; one of whom was Robert Morgan. One of Robert Morgan's sons is Raymond Morgan, and he is the father of Mary Frances, who will enter Lindenwood next fall.

Dorothy Lamour Is Judging Romeo Contest Entries

Miss Dorothy Lamour, Paramount Pictures film star, is the judge of the entries in this year's Romeo contest sponsored by the Linden Bark. The contest closed February 14 and the pictures of Lindenwood girls' men of the moment have been sent to Miss Lamour in Hollywood.

The Lindenwood Romeo of 1942 will be announced in the Bark as soon as Miss Lamour completes her difficult task of picking out the winner.

"American Family Behavior" By Dr. Bernard Is Distinctive Contribution to Sociology

*Textbook by a Member of Lindenwood's Faculty Is Penetrating
Analysis of American Family Life, Dr. Schaper Points
Out in This Review*

By Dr. Florence W. Schaper

THERE is no doubt that if the literature of sociology published throughout 1942 compares favorably with the distinctive contribution made by Dr. Jessie Bernard in her book "American Family Behavior," it will reach standards of scholarship that will prove a credit to the field. After reading this book one is convinced that here is a penetrating analysis in a realistic manner of the behavior of the most fundamental institution in American life. This textbook is characterized by a wholesome quality that results from an evaluation of American family life made possible by the scientific examination of a wealth of research studies pertinent to the problem.

The sociometric methods used to describe the family present an original approach to this area of sociological investigation which appeals to the undergraduate student because it is concrete and graphic. Seldom is a scientific treatise characterized by scholarly techniques that are couched in so lucid and charming a style as Dr. Bernard has been able to achieve.

In the last chapter, "The Family and the Social Order," Dr. Bernard offers a sane warning to those who have ephemeral ideas about the American family in a swiftly changing social scene. The following passage is the philosophy of a matured scholar:

"No one with scientific training will expect miracles. A certain amount of malfunctioning and maladjustment is inevitable. Furthermore, we cannot fly in the face of social trends and try to reverse the direction of social change — no scientifically-minded person would even dream of such a procedure. All that we can hope for from science is that it will help us discern trends and give us methods of adjusting family life to them. This hope is sufficient to warrant optimism."

Lindenwood College is happy to claim Dr. Bernard as an associate professor of sociology since 1939, not only because of this remarkable textbook on family life, but because of her other contributions to sociological literature.

Recreation Leadership Program Sponsored by Freshman Class

Plans are under way for the Freshman Class, working through the Department of Student Guidance and Personnel, to inaugurate early in March a program of Recreation Leadership Training for Civilian Defense. This program developed out of the interest shown on the campus last year for the work in Camp Counseling which Mr. Alfred H. Wyman, executive director of the Park and Playground Association of St. Louis, directed.

The members of the Freshman Class realize volunteer recreation service will be a great advantage in their home communities during the summer months and that they will be able through this program to do their part toward the war defense program. The recreation areas that will need volunteers are defense areas, playgrounds, neighborhood centers, and camps.

The program Mr. Wyman will offer to a select group of students will include the learning of mass games and other activities, social recreation for theme days, community singing, community group work, simple handicrafts, etc. It is hoped that after eight weeks of work in this program that a Workshop Conference can be planned for some Friday or Saturday on the campus, at which time experts from the St. Louis region will work out with the students an actual community program suitable for civilian defense.

St. Louis Lindenwood Club Reports on Annual Budget

How the St. Louis Lindenwood College Club budgeted its funds for 1941 was revealed in the annual treasurer's report made by Mrs. H. C. Ackert at the January meeting of the club on January 19 at the home of Mrs. Will K. Roth, 7500 Wayne Avenue, University City. Believing the report will be of interest to other Lindenwood clubs, Mrs. John Williams, the publicity chairman, has forwarded it to the college.

The budget for the year totaled $82.17 and was divided as follows: Roemer Student Aid, $25; Art Prize, $10; flowers, $6.12; luncheon for speaker, 65 cents; expense money for Mrs. Krueger, $5; federation dues, $5; Red Cross, $1.75; U. S. O. $1; Life magazine for soldiers, $2.85; cards and printing, $7.25; gift to orphans, $15.

Mrs. Gage and Dr. Alice Linnemann were guests of honor at the meeting. Mrs. Roth and Mrs. Ryan, who were co-hostesses, served a delicious desert luncheon.

The February meeting was held on February 16 at the home of Mrs. Ackert, 7460 Amherst Avenue, University City, with Mrs. Ackert and Mrs. Ernst Kuehner as co-hostesses.

Our Attitude Toward Latin American Culture

know something about—and most important—that we care to know more about their past and present cultural achievements and aspirations. Thus, acquaintance with South and Central American literature, history, music, philosophy, etc., becomes a prerequisite for the harmonious maintenance and successful development of mutual business relations.

Many things go by the board these days. Whatever impedes the national effort must go. Among these hampering things of yesteryear is the notion that business and sentiment do not mix. Why is it that in spite of our greater geographical nearness European competitors generally outsold us on all South American markets? Because our Old World rivals did mix sentiment with business. In fact, it was to them "good business" to do so. Spanish speaking nations display that traditional and characteristic insistence on ceremony and "politesse," which Cervantes has so aptly and goodnaturedly held up for all the world to see in his immortal "Don Quixote de la Mancha." How can one understand, appreciate, and practice that Latin "politesse" in business without knowing something of the culture of which this "politesse" is such a definite part?

Red Cross Chairman

Miss Dorothy Felger, a senior, of Norfolk, Neb., who is chairman of the Lindenwood Red Cross. Miss Felger, who is one of Lindenwood's representatives in Who's Who in American Colleges, is president of Pi Gamma Mu, treasurer of Sigma Tau Delta, and vice president of Der Deutsch Verein.

A Latin American as often as not is a gentleman first and a businessman afterwards. He will easily prefer dealing with a polite customer at little profit than trade at a greater profit with a rude or indifferent one. Thus, on our part extreme tact is needed from now on, if we are to convince our neighbors south of our borders that we are their friends and do not merely regard them as just another group of nations to be exploited. The recent granting of huge credits by our government to theirs is not enough. The people of the United States, but especially the intelligentsia, the college bred among us, must change their present attitude of indifference or even downright contempt to an attitude of eager interest and, subsequently, deeper appreciation.

The Modern Language Department at Lindenwood, therefore, believes that it is performing a most important function by continuing to stress the cultural phases of its language teaching. By so doing the cause of hemispheric solidarity, based on the mutual exchange of cultural values, followed in turn by a greatly increased friendly give and take in the commercial field as well, shall best be served. Let us not forget that for our present war effort and for the admittedly difficult years of reconstruction after the war a friendly Latin America should be one of the most valuable assets the United States of America could ever have.

Dr. and Mrs. Gage Guests of Lindenwood Alumnae in California

APPROXIMATELY 40 Lindenwood alumnae greeted Dr. and Mrs. Gage at a Lindenwood luncheon on February 24 in the Room of the Dons at the Mark Hopkins Hotel in San Francisco. In their first trip to the West Coast since coming to Lindenwood, Dr. and Mrs. Gage arrived in San Francisco on February 23.

Students Vote to End College Year Two Weeks Early

By a vote of the students, Lindenwood will end this college year on June 1, instead of June 15. By lengthening assignments and concentrating the class work, the shortened term will not result in missing any of the academic work.

The June 1 graduation date will enable students who plan to attend summer sessions which will begin earlier than usual this year.
