First Lynx in the Community Event Beautifies Belleville

Nearly 90 Lindenwood University-Belleville students and staff members gave up three hours of their weekend on Sunday, Nov. 5, to take part in the first Lynx in the Community event.

"We went to four homes of senior citizens and cleaned up their property for them," said Lindenwood Belleville Interim Dean of Students Thomas Trice. "We pulled weeds, trimmed bushes, raked leaves, and did pretty much anything else that needed to be done to get the homes of the seniors we assisted looking like they should. The difference that was made is amazing." Read more

Myths About Career Success of College Majors

A recent Gallup survey suggests that conventional wisdom about college majors and subsequent career success is wrong.

Fleitz Publishes Article

Elizabeth Fleitz, Lindenwood associate professor of English, recently published an article, "All Your Font Are Belong to Us: Gaming in the Late Age of Print," in the book Type Matters: The Rhetoricity of Letterforms, edited by Danielle Nicole DeVoss and Christopher Scott Wyatt and published by Parlor Press.

"This groundbreaking collection," as one of the volume's reviewers noted, demonstrates "how understanding texts can never be just a matter of words alone."
