Lindenwood's Library in Esse

Painless "Moving Day" by Aid of Enthusiastic Student Assistants

A future number of the Bulletin will show views of the new Margaret Leggat Butler Building, which is now a library indeed. Willing students aided Miss Russell, the Librarian, in classifying the volumes so that the moving men lost no time. "From morn till noon, from noon till dewy eve" on Friday, February 7, they labored at the task, and by Saturday noon the books were in their places on the shelves of the new building, and the workers celebrated with a grand luncheon in the Tea Room.

One of the seniors has written for the Bulletin the following description of the beautiful and unusual interior:

"A library, like a cathedral, should be entered with reverential footsteps, for in the crypts along the wall lie the souls of men. No one will ever pop gum in the hallowed atmosphere of Lindenwood's new library. The massive beamed ceilings would frown at such desecration, and some ghost out of a Gothic romance would drop a huge tome on the offender.

"The candle scones on the wall illuminate the Latin inscription on the fireplace, which is at the end of the main reading room. The red hangings jealously allow the light of day to seek out the beauties of the place—low book shelves, long tables, baronial benches and carved chests. Behind the main desk the stacks recede into space, and below, instead of a dim dark dungeon, is a charming club room, too wonderful to describe in mere underclassmen words. Curved stairways lead to the upper story, and shades of the Castle of Otrante, there is a tower! Downstairs again one can only sit and crane the neck upward at the blue and gold fleur de lis in the mosaic of the entrance hall."

And a sophomore, overflowing with admiration, has written:

"One Lindenwood girl said she would never make any noise in that library; how could she, when the doors remind her of an Old-World cathedral? In the room where books are checked out, one finds lovely carved benches and chairs that might have graced a mediaeval castle, and a charming cabinet carved in the same manner. The wall is paneled, and might conceal secret staircases. The fireplace is of white stone, with the Lindenwood crest and the motto, 'Litera Scripta Manet.' The windows are beautifully hung with crimson drapes. These are just the sort of rooms where girls would like to read and study.

"Downstairs is the club room. The only word that can describe this is 'gorgeous.' Comfortable chairs are placed at attractive angles, near the many large and small tables. The lovely rugs and lamps, adding to the soft color scheme, make the most charming room one could ever see.

"On leaving, the side door may be used, and it will be used a great deal probably, for it is such a charming door."

Another sophomore has written "an Impressionist's Impression," in which she says:

"Lindenwood represents three periods of architecture, Colonial, Modern, and now there is a building of Mediaeval design—the new library. It is an answer to one's dream of castles, where beautiful maidens were locked in towers, many feet above the ground. We suggest to any one who desires a glimpse of the surrounding country, to try the tower.

"On the weather vane is the old owl, signifying wisdom. Then, too, a parrot sits calmly there as a person who talks much and yet says little. A pile of books, representative of the library, is between the two birds."

The student body feels maybe a more personal interest in the completion of this splendid building, because the contractor's daughter is one of their own number and is herself devoted to these classic rooms.

The girls who helped on "Moving Day," giving joyous service, were: Johnnie Riner, Lena Lewis, Jessamine Lewis, Jessamine Hinds, Rebecca Carr, Pauline Brown, Elizabeth Burdick, Margaret Jane Wilhoit, Irene Brooks, Mary Jackson, Alice Ingham, Lorraine Robie, Helen Weber, and Jane Welch. It is reported that there was "fine, high conversation" at the epochal Saturday luncheon, where these girls and the Librarian were guests.

President Roemer has stated that he will announce the date of dedication of the Margaret Leggat Butler Library Building, after the outside debris is all cleared away, and everything set carefully in place.

Bible Training School

Lindenwood College through President Roemer is sponsoring a leadership training school which meets on Monday nights at the college, and of which Prof. Ralph T. Case, of the chair of Bible and Philosophy, is Dean. It is interdenominational, and is participated in by several ministers and lay teachers of St. Charles. It is the outgrowth of a Sunday school institute held in the town early in the year, and promises to be well attended.

New National Honors

Lindenwood College has always loved Jane Addams, and now there is a select band of students who are made especially happy by the fact that they belong to the same honor society, Pi Gamma Mu, as does Miss Addams, and yes, many educators, jurists and people of various professions of the first rank.

Pi Gamma Mu chapter at Lindenwood received its charter since New Year's, but the national society has been in existence since 1924. Its reason for existence is social science, its purpose "the inculcation of the ideals of scholarship, scientific attitude and method and social service in the study of all social problems." It seeks to instill in the mind of the individual a scientific attitude toward all social questions, with the motto, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." It has now over 100 chapters in leading colleges and universities. Under Miss Schaper and Miss Morris, teachers of sociology, Lindenwood girls have experienced some of the enjoyment that comes from social service. They have studied "cases" of poor families, and have sought out the causes of poverty. Pi Gamma Mu will have a wide scope, extending into the human side of other studies as well.

President Roemer and Dean Gipson were members at large of Pi Gamma Mu, and they now become charter members of Lindenwood's chapter — the "Delta Chapter of Missouri," — together with Miss Schaper who did much to bring it here; Miss Morris, and Secretary Motley.

Alumnae members are named, and the list will be increased as information is received concerning entitlements. So far the list comprises Misses Elizabeth Arveson, job analyst in the industrial engineering department of Purina Mills; Oreen Ruedi, studying for a Doctor's degree with a fellowship in Clark University; Margaret Knoop, teaching social science in the high school of Marshall, Mo.; Helen Wisdom, similarly engaged at California, Mo.; Mrs. Louise Child Jones, teaching social science in the high school of Richmond, Mo., and Mary Elizabeth Sawtelle, of Omaha, who expects soon to specialize in research work in social science.

The student officers of Delta chapter are: Virginia Bear, President; Elizabeth Thomas, Vice-President; Helen Davis, Secretary-Treasurer; and other members: Helen Weber, Lorraine Robie, Doris Force, Mary Sue Wisdom, Rosalind Sachs, Catherine Orr, Frances Dunn, Dorothy Masters, Adeline Brubaker, Josephine Bowman, and Mary Elizabeth Ambler.

The members wear a key as their emblem.

Visited Washington

President Roemer represented the college at the mid-winter meeting of the Association of American Colleges in Washington, D. C. All the students and faculty were much interested in a group photograph which came back, in which Dr. Roemer appears "in the same picture with President Hoover."

Popularity Queen

The popularity queen of Linden Leaves, elected by the student body, is Lois McKeehan, of Hot Springs, Ark., who is president of the sophomore class. She has many honors in different societies, and her campus name, for some reason, is "Shing." After a recent party she was serenaded by the students.

* * * *

Miss Mary Chapman, 1924-26, writes from McAlester, Okla., of her position as society editor, with "enough of the other work to keep it fascinating" on the News-Capital of that city. She was a journalism student at Lindenwood and winner of the Christmas story prize. Margaret Boles, her "fidus Achates," now Mrs. F. Wood Phifer, Jr., of Wheatland, Wyo., has been her guest, bringing with her a "rosy-checked, brown-eyed son, seven months old on Thanksgiving Day." Mary says: "We enjoyed so, talking of the old days at Lindenwood, and my little sister, who graduates from high school next spring, can hardly wait to enroll there in September."

Old Gold and Blue

Lindenwood's new catalogue and viewbook have quite a royal appearance in a covering of old gold and blue, on which the traditional design appears in splendid relief. Changes in the curriculum are announced, laying stronger emphasis on the four-year courses for degrees, while the two-year courses are to be done away with as such. In working for the A. B. degree, a student may now take either ten hours of science in one department or in several departments, or she may substitute mathematics for science. This changes the old rule which required five hours of a biological science and five hours of a physical science. Foreign language requirements have been increased; it is now necessary to complete two years of the same language. A course in English literature is compulsory, and the student must also take a course either in sociology, economics or psychology if she wishes the A. B. degree.

There are fewer changes in the B. S. degree, but purely vocational courses will count in accrediting for this, as will work done in the business department. Physical education work will be accepted for this also. In addition it will be possible to count for a degree courses in home economics and education.

Chicagoans Leave for South

The Lindenwood College Club of Chicago, met on January 10, for luncheon at Le Petit Gourmet. There was an informal program of talks by the members who told their various experiences during the holidays. Most of them are now away for the season, wintering in California, Texas and Florida.

Alpha Sigma Tau

Fifteen girls were made happy when Dean Gipson read out in chapel the names of those who had "made" Alpha Sigma Tau, the scholastic honor so sought and hoped for each year, but necessarily so limited as to numbers. It represents high grades, good character and fidelity to Lindenwood's best standards.

The girls so fortunate who are pledges of Alpha Sigma Tau are: Jane Babeock, of Moberly, Mo.; Kathryn Datesman and Jane Reed, both of Council Bluffs, Iowa; Cary Pankey, Kennett, Mo.; Roberta Manning, St. Joseph, Mo.; Lois McKeehan, Hot Springs, Ark.; Norma Paul Ruedi, Galena, Kans.; Mary Jackson, Maryville, Mo.; Margaret Jean Wilhoit, Kansas, Ill.; Dorothy Winter, Biacknell, Ind.; Virginia Furnish, Shelbina, Mo.; Jean Achelpohl, St. Charles; Jane Tomlinson, Chillicothe, Ohio; Fern Halliburton, Kansas City, Mo., and Dorothy Turner, of Chicago.

New pledges of Beta Pi Theta are: Jane Babeock, Helen Bopp, Pauline Brown, Kathryn Datesman, Virginia Furnish, Geraldine Davis, Fern Halliburton, Cary Pankey, Jane Reed, Margaret Jean Wilhoit and Mary Jo Wolfort.

Alpha Mu Mu

The first meeting to be held in the club room so much enjoyed of the new Library was that of Alpha Mu Mu, the honorary music fraternity. New members were initiated, and the new pledges, announced within the week, were received. The new members were:

Genevieve Lott of Webb City, Mo.; Eulalie Geiger, St. Joseph, Mo., and Betty Leek of Denver.

The new pledges presented were: Misses Doris Oxley of Poteau, Okla.; Dolores Fisher, Shawnee, Okla.; Tearle Seiling, St. Charles, Mo.; Eleanor Kriekhaus, Mount Vernon, Ill., all freshmen, and Katherine Davidson of Marshalltown, Iowa, sophomore. Election into this society is the highest under-graduate honor in the music department. The choice is based upon musical talent, application to study and general fitness.

Pi Alpha Delta

Latin students in their honorary club with Miss Hankins as sponsor, now have a fraternity title, Pi Alpha Delta. The club was formerly Societas Latina, and its vim is shown by a fortnightly newspaper, The Roman Tatler.

With Norma Paul Ruedi, a senior, as president this year, the club took on its Greek letters and had a banquet early in February, at the St. Charles Hotel. Miss Ruedi's picture appears, not only for this matter but because also the Bulletin readers will like to see the face of one who has done much of the writing in this year's Bulletin. She is also editor-in-chief of "Linden Bark."

The new pledges to Pi Alpha Delta at the banquet were Gretchen Hunker, Annie K. Hurie, Madeline Lightner, Ruth Roselle and Ruth Talbot. Others already members, who attended were, Dorothea Lange, Frances Blair, Elizabeth Pinkerton, Marjorie Florence, Julia Thompson, Jane Babcock, Frances Kayser, Effie Blanche Martin, Geraldine Davis, Cary Pankey, Luella and Laura Geyer, and, of course, Miss Hankins and Norma Paul Ruedi.

Together with other Latin societies, Pi Alpha Delta is taking an active part this year in celebrating the bi-millennium of Vergil.

A pleasant faculty program was an address, February 4, by Dr. A. S. Fairchild, of the University of Missouri, who spoke on the requisites of the educated woman. The program was in charge of Miss Parker, Miss Gordon, Dr. Reuter and Mr. Brent of the faculty, and of the faculty social committee, Miss Stone and Miss Craeraft.

Mr. Johns Spoke

The St. Louis Lindenwood College Club had as its speaker at the February meeting, Mr. George S. Johns, associate editor of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, on his travels in the Orient. This was given following a luncheon, February 17, at the Chase Hotel.

Lindenwood's particular interest in Mr. Johns is because the "S" in his name stands for "Sibley," and he is a collateral descendant of Maj. George C. Sibley, for whom he was named. Mr. Johns possesses, by inheritance, a gold-headed cane, which once belonged to Maj. Sibley, and at Lindenwood's Centennial he loaned this treasure to the college, which many will remember.

Mr. Johns' wife is the former Minnie McDearmon, a Lindenwood graduate.

Mr. Johns spoke of the conditions, the people, and the customs of the Orient. He told how he and his party were entertained officially during their stay; he mentioned in particular one man who had a pearl farm in Japan at which he was entertained.

At this program Dr. and Mrs. Roemer and Miss Alice Linnemann, of the faculty, were guests. Mrs. J. E. Stoker, vocalist, and Mrs. Ivan Lee Holt, pianist, rendered music.

Mrs. Roemer described the new library, and invited the members of the Club to a tour of inspection.

Just as the Bulletin goes to press, the outlook is bright for the St. Louis Lindenwood Club's venture in sponsoring "Lindenwood College Night," February 24, at the Orpheum Theatre, where "Skidding," a comedy of home life in Idaho, was played. A large group of students sat in the boxes and sang between the acts. Miss Lillian Zacher was in charge of arrangements, benefitting the Sibley scholarship fund.

Distinguished Among Women

Lindenwood College, it has just been announced, will be hostess to the Eighth District Federation of Women's Clubs at the annual meeting, starting entertained on the campus. It will be remembered that the St. Louis Lindenwood College Club is federated, and Mrs. F. H. Littlefield, president of the district, is a close friend of Lindenwood. She will preside at the meeting.

Lindenwood is an ideal place to have conventions, and clubs are frequently asking for this favor. Just recently, February 14 and 15, the Missouri Junior League of Women Voters met at Lindenwood. On the opening evening the freshman class entertained with a Valentine dinner-dance. Saturday morning, delegates from the leagues of Missouri University, Washington University, Stephens College, Christian College, Drury College, William Woods, Cottey College, and Lindenwood assembled and discussed the manner in which each club presents its programs. Miss Constance Roach, the executive secretary of the Missouri League of Women Voters, presided at this meeting. There were outstanding talks on "Know Your Government," and "International Co-operation," by delegates. The Lindenwood delegates were Misses Mary Ambler, Doris Force, Helen Weber, Virginia Green, Lena Lewis, and Billie Everson.

The afternoon session was taken up with business and election of officers for the coming year. Miss Delphine Meyer, of Washington University, was elected president, and Miss Elizabeth Trimble, of Missouri University, was elected secretary. Mrs. G. Alexander Hope spoke on the "Efficiency Standard," and a discussion of "The Budget" was given by Miss Ruth Siemer, the executive secretary of the St. Louis League of Women Voters. Delegates from Washington University, Cottey College, and William Woods College explained their method of study groups.

A banquet was given at the St. Charles Hotel that evening at which Miss Helen Weber, the president of the Missouri League, presided. A candle-light service was held in honor of Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, which was followed by a talk on "Missouri Leagues" by Miss Constance Roach. After a skit by the delegates from Washington University, and the installation of the newly elected officers by Mrs. G. Alexander Hope, Miss Gertrude Ely, the national counsellor of new voters, spoke on "Carrying On After College."

Miss Ely urged that there be a greater participation by women in the affairs of the government by filling more official governmental positions. She asked, "Did the women who worked so hard for suffrage have as their aim for the next generation to make them just voters, or were they interested in women giving practical public service?" The suffrage workers of ten years ago were compared with the young voters of today, who take suffrage for granted. These new voters of today hardly know the names of the great suffrage workers. "More women," said Miss Ely, "should get into the diplomatic service." There are a large number of problems in which women voters should be interested from the standpoint of practical public service, and she mentioned specifically the negro problem and that of public utilities as those in which women are particularly interested.

Lydia Lee Dodge, who attended Lindenwood two years ago, and who was always much interested in politics, is columnist on the Milan Standard, published at Milan, Mo., under the general caption, "Dodgeograms."

Great Novelist's Address

When "the world and his wife" found out that the British novelist, Hugh Walpole, he of "Winter's Moon," "Hans Frost" and the rest, was really coming to Lindenwood for a lecture, February 27, there was a concerted determination on the part of everyone to come, particularly when the college pursued its customary policy in all its cultural lectures for the student body, of making no admission charge. Mr. Walpole spoke on, "The Art and Immorality of the Novel," giving a literary treat. Alas, that there had to be a limit to the capacity of the auditorium. Only 700 at the best could be crowded in, and many persons in St. Charles and St. Louis found that there was no room to hear him. But his coming is counted one of the great occasions of Lindenwood. Book reviewers from the city papers and representatives of other colleges were among those who eagerly found places.

* * * *

The college dining-room has a foreign flavor at several of its tables. There is one where everyone "eats in German" as the girls say, and two other tables where only French is spoken. Each table has a teacher presiding.

Miss Stone, head of the modern language department, receives letters from her former pupil, Miss Elizabeth Tracy, now Lindenwood's fellowship student at the Sorbonne. She writes of hard work and much-enjoyed courses of study in French literature, geography and French life, and she has had time to become "crazy about Paris." She had been invited, up to the date of her letter, to assist at all the American university teas.

Mrs. Burl T. Schuyler, M. D., of India, gave a vivacious chapel talk in the course of the Presbyterian observance of a foreign missions drive. Costumes were worn on the stage by Lindenwood girls, and Mrs. Schuyler gave an intimate account of friendships among the women of India. Another speaker of the week was Dr. James E. Detweiler, formerly a missionary in Japan.

Among recent speakers at Sunday night vespers have been Archdeacon H. H. Marsden, of the Episcopal Church in St. Charles; Dr. Robert Ely and Rev. R. S. Kenaston of St. Charles; and Rev. Gilbert Lovell of Philadelphia, Pa.

Dean Gipson spent mid-February attending the convention of the National Association of Deans of Women's Colleges, at Atlantic City. She stopped en route for a visit with her brother, a professor at Lehigh University.

Congratulations on Lindenwood's new library have been received from many former students, among them, Mrs. Wayne Robison of Augusta, Ill., who was formerly Mabel Catlin (1915-'17).

Wichita Club Plans Easter Luncheon

The Wichita Lindenwood Club held a Christmas meeting, December 27, in the form of a luncheon at the Inner Tea Room. The thirty members present discussed various plans to make money, and the Club voted to hold a luncheon Easter when the active girls will be home.
