NOTE: Fashion is an important play in the history of American drama, for it is the first native play ever to have been accepted, either here or abroad, as a truly representative American comedy. It was first produced in 1845 at the Park Theatre in New York. The New York audiences loved it. Five years later it opened at the Royal Olympic Theatre in London and "took the town by storm." This was very astonishing, for the play was written by a woman, and it was American. It established itself as an important link in the development of the American theatre. Fashion is a social criticism, satirizing the adopted manners of the time—especially the imitation of French manners and modes—without any true understanding of them.

The author was a woman who was internationally known in her day. As a writer, she was widely read; as an actress, she made the profession of acting an acceptable one for a respectable American woman. Both by birth and by marriage, Mrs. Mowatt belonged to the highest New York society.

This Production, within reasonable limits, attempts to revive the manner of staging and the style of acting of the mid-nineteenth century.
