Energy Policy Author Robert Bryce to Speak

09/22/2011

Author, journalist, and public speaker Robert Bryce will appear at Lindenwood University from 3-4 p.m. on Tuesday, Oct. 18, as part of an ongoing lecture series sponsored by the school's Institute for the Study of Economics and the Environment.

The event, which will take place in Harmon Hall's Dunseth Auditorium on the main St. Charles campus, is free and open to the public. Bryce will deliver the address, "Can Fossil Fuels be Replaced by Renewable Energy in 20 Years Time?"

Bryce has been writing about the energy industry since 1989. He spent 12 years working for the Austin Chronicle, and has published articles in dozens of publications, including the Wall Street Journal, New York Times, and Washington Post. He has published four books on energy policy, the most recent of which was released in 2010.

Bryce has appeared on several television and radio outlets, including MSNBC, Fox, and the Australian Broadcasting Corporation. He has also been a guest on CNN's Inside Politics, PBS' NewsHour, and NPR's Fresh Air.

From 2006 to 2010, Bryce worked as managing editor of the Houston-based online publication, Energy Tribune. In April 2010, he joined the Manhattan Institute as a senior fellow in the organization's Center for Energy Policy and the Environment.
