ONLINE MASTER'S IN GIFTED EDUCATION RANKED AMONG BEST IN NATION

August 2, 2018

The Lindenwood University online master's degree in gifted education has been ranked 13th in the nation by TheBestSchools.org.

The website based its rankings on the quality of the program, the range of courses provided, school awards, rankings, and reputation.

The BestSchools site includes an overview of its assessment of the program.

“Whether you want to advance your career as an honors teacher or as a gifted program coordinator, the Lindenwood program strengthens your ability to recognize the needs of special students, and then design and implement teaching strategies that empowers them both in school and in their personal lives.”

The online master’s degree in gifted education program requires 33 credit hours and will certify students in gifted education. The program is open to students with a valid teaching certificate.
